GOETHALS LAUDED BY A VAST THRONG

Silent as Mayor Says Legislature Alone Keeps Him Out as Police Commissioner.

HIS CANAL WORK NOT DONE

This the Only Note in His Talk That Could Be Taken to Indicate His Intentions.

WOULD GOETHALIZE GOTHAM

So Says Dr. Finley in Presenting Civic Forum's Medal—Praised by Peary, Greer, and Abbott.

At a national testimonial meeting in Carnegie Hall last night the first Civic Forum Gold Medal of Honor for Distinguished Public Service was conferred upon Col. George W. Goethals, Chief Engineer of the Panama Canal and Governor-to-be of the Panama Zone, by John H. Finley, State Commissioner of Education, acting for former United States Ambassador Joseph H. Choate, who had been designated to make the presentation, but who was unable to be present. The platform was filled with men of State and national distinction, and nine men of public prominence paid glowing tributes to the guest of honor. An audience which filled the vast auditorium from floor to upper gallery cheered Col. Goethals and every mention of his name.

The sensation of the evening was the public assurance given to the audience by Mayor John Purroy Mitchel that the only obstacle in the way of Col. Goethals becoming Police Commissioner of New York City was the attitude of the State Legislature toward the police bills now before it. Col. Goethals permitted this statement to go unchallenged, although in the course of his speech of acknowledgment he intimated that his work in the Canal zone was far from completed.

Invited to Goethalize Gotham.

Robert Erskine Ely acted as temporary Chairman of the meeting and read letters in praise of Col. Goethals's achievement from President Woodrow Wilson and former Presidents Taft and Roosevelt. He then introduced Commissioner Finley as the presiding officer of the evening.

Mr. Finley spoke of the innate modesty of the dignified army engineer in whose honor the meeting was held, and said that Col. Goethals was not alone honored by it, but three great achievements in American public life were being celebrated as well. The first of these, he said, was the splendid contribution to American public life of the new foreign stock, both of Col. Goethals's parents being foreign born. The second thing was the potency of American public education—Col. Goethals being the product of the public schools, the College of the City of New York, and the United States Military Academy at West Point. The third was the triumph of honesty and sheer merit.

"I hope," said Commissioner Finley, "that Col. Goethals will soon come to this, his native city, and Goethalize Gotham."

Percy Mackaye read nine stanzas entitled "Goethals," written by him in honor of the occasion, of which the following lines were a part:

So from our age three giants loom
To vouch man's venturous soul:
Amundsen on his ice-peak,
And Peary from his pole,
And midway, where the oceans meet,
Goethals—beside his goal.

Where old Balboa bent his gaze
He leads the liners through,
And the Horn that tossed Magellan
Bellows a far halloo,
For where the navies never sailed
Steamed Goethals and his crew.

Collector Malone's Tribute.

Dudley Field Malone, Collector of the Port of New York, said that the accomplishment of Col. Goethals was proof of the fact that the United States Army could produce men who could render "immeasurable blessings for mankind by the constructive application of the arts of peace."

"Every ardent advocate of peace and arbitration," said the speaker, "must rejoice in the conversion of this son of Mars to the policy of greater international intercourse and fellowship, and, while a sense of propriety and a deep respect for his modest character constrain us to subdue our heartfelt eulogy with tempered speech, we but voice the opinion of the civilized world to-day when we say that Col. George W. Goethals is one of the greatest Americans the Republic has produced."

After describing at length the many administrative functions placed in the hands of Col. Goethals at Panama in addition to the problems of engineering, Collector Malone alluded to the invitation to the Colonel to become Police Commissioner of his native city in these words:

"Is it any wonder, then, that the people of New York have been most anxious to seduce Col. Goethals from the salubrious climate of Panama to the more vigorous atmosphere of our cosmopolitan city?

"But New York is not selfish in this ambition and attitude. New York will cheerfully abide by whatever decision is reached, for New York knows that the memory of Col Goethals will be a priceless heritage for all America."

Borough President Marks greeted Col. Goethals as a fellow-member of the class of 1887 of the College of the City of New York. "We should not be too busy," said the speaker, "in our daily race to stop and place our hand upon the shoulder of our fellow-man, who has accomplished a great and glorious task and say, 'Well done!' More desirable than flowers for the dead are bouquets for the living."

Dr. Abbott Says New York Needs Him.

Dr. Lyman Abbott explained that the rewards of republics differed from those of monarchies, and said that had a German or an Englishman accomplished the almost superhuman feat which Col. Goethals had achieved he would be decorated with the insignia of noble orders. In republics the reward for well-rendered service was a call to further useful service.

"I believe in the words of the Master," said Dr. Abbott, "'Thou hast been faithful in a few things, I will make you ruler over many.' I hope that Col. Goethals will agree with me that this honor which has been done him here to-

EXCLUSION FOR ULSTER.

British Cabinet Said to Have Agreed on Home Rule Compromise.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Thursday, March 5.—The Daily News's well-informed Parliamentary correspondent announces that the Cabinet yesterday decided what should be the compromise offered by Premier Asquith in the House of Commons next Monday for the settlement of the Irish question by consent.

This will be, the correspondent says, that any county of Ireland which makes a demand after the passage of the Home Rule act and before the Irish Parliament is summoned shall have a right to take a vote of the electorate within the county, and if the majority favor exclusion from the act that county shall be excluded for a term of years, probably three.

LONDON, Thursday, March 5.—The Daily Chronicle, which enjoys, in a large measure, the confidence of the Liberal Government, declares to-day that, despite assertions to the contrary, the Government has no intention of dissolving during the present year, and that the Ministers anticipate finishing out their full term.

The Government, according to The Daily Chronicle, will introduce to-day for their first readings during the present session the Irish Home Rule, the Welsh Disestablishment, and the Plural Voting bills, and it expects to carry all three of them before the expiration of its present term of office.

Tremendous interest is being taken in Premier Asquith's promised statement for Monday on the Irish Home Rule bill. All factions believe the Premier will offer the Ulster Counties temporary exclusion from the act.

DOG SAVES CHILD IN SNOW.

Big Dane Fetches Aid for Miss Dorothy Webb's Little Nephew.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., March 4.—Carl Christensen, caretaker at Ernest Seton Thompson's new estate, the Finchery, heard a noise at his door about noon to-day, and, on opening it, saw a great Dane gazing at him expectantly and wagging its tail. The animal wore a collar on which was engraved: "Teddy, Sweetbriar Farm."

Following the animal where he led Christensen came upon a little boy by the Seton skunk pen, buried up to his waist in snow, and suffering from exhaustion. Marks on the snow showed where the animal had attempted to extricate his companion. The caretaker carried the child to the house, escorted by the big dog frisking joyously. He applied heat internally and externally to the little stranger, and then called up the Police Department. Chief William Rich in turn called up Sweetbriar Farm, which is five miles from the Seton estate, and is the property of Miss Dorothy Webb, owner of the famous trotters Sweetbriar and Chesterfield.

"Any child missing from your place?" queried the Chief.

"Yes; have you got him? Is he all right?" came over the wire in gasps.

"He is," was the reassuring reply.

For a moment or two the Chief heard strange noises, which seemed to be a mingling of shrill cries and laughter, with the sound of weeping in it. Then he learned that the child was Carl Stuart Frazer, Jr., Miss Webb's nephew, 4 years old, and that all morning she, his father and mother, who were on a visit from the West, and all the employes on the estate had engaged in a frantic hunt for him.

A quarter of an hour later Miss Webb herself had tumbled out of a big limousine at the Seton place, and was hugging the boy as he probably had never been hugged before, while Teddy leaped around them and barked with all his might.

SUES SURGEON FOR $15,000.

Vassar Professor Says He Left Tube in Daughter's Throat.

By Marconi Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATLANTIC CITY, March 4.—Suit for $15,000 was brought here to-day against Dr. Emory Marvel, a leading surgeon, by I. Woodridge Riley, Professor of English at Vassar College, who alleges that Dr. Marvel, after performing an operation on the throat of his four-year-old daughter, Katherine, failed to remove a rubber drainage tube from the incision. For nearly a year, it is alleged, the little girl has been suffering. An operation by Dr. Penrose of Johns Hopkins Hospital was necessary to remove the rubber tube.

Prof. Riley charges gross negligence and carelessness on Dr. Marvel's part. The girl was brought to Atlantic City and placed in Dr. Marvel's sanitarium and an operation performed two years ago.

Dr. Marvel was sued for $10,000 by the wife of the Rev. R. Folsom, who alleged the surgeon had failed to remove a pair of forceps from her abdomen after an operation. The jury, after a sensational trial, returned a verdict of no cause for action.

BLEASE NEAR A FIST FIGHT.

Governor Pulls Off His Coat After Row with Legislators.

COLUMBIA, S. C., March 4.—Gov. Blease went into the Hall of Representatives to-night to reply to statements made in the Asylum inquiry and to deliver a message in person, and the visit came near resulting in a fist fight.

Blease said Representative Barnwell was acting in a cowardly manner by raising a technical point that the Governor was not within the Constitutional limits in making his remarks. Mr. Barnwell advanced to the Speaker's stand, but was restrained by other delegates. Gov. Blease said that he came prepared for a fight.

Representative Stevenson followed the Governor out and undertook to explain some remarks he had made during the day. Blease apparently thought Stevenson wanted to fight and pulled off his coat.

"I have been in some fights, but I never take off my coat," said Mr. Stevenson, returning to the hall.

There was much disorder while the Governor was making his charges, and for several minutes it seemed that there would be a free-for-all fight.

PROF. MOORE QUITS STATE DEPARTMENT

Counselor's Resignation Is Regretfully Accepted by the President.

CAUSES STIR IN CAPITAL

Won't Confirm the General Rumors That He Was Dissatisfied with the Department's Present Methods.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Diplomatic and Congressional circles had a sensation to-day when it became known that John Bassett Moore, the distinguished authority on international law and diplomacy, had resigned from the office of Counsellor of the State Department. It was the intention of the Administration to announce Dr. Moore's retirement to-morrow, but the news got out and forced a formal confirmation this afternoon.

While every effort was made to make it appear that the resignation of Dr. Moore was a matter of amicable prearrangement, most of those persons who have had some acquaintance with the circumstances surrounding Dr. Moore's experience as counsellor find it impossible to escape the conviction that he was unable to continue longer in the Administration's service with sacrifice to his dignity and his feelings.

Dr. Moore's ability to keep his own counsel, and his unwillingness to say anything that might be construed into criticism of his superior officers, make it difficult to get at the exact facts underlying his retirement; but enough is known of certain difficulties that confronted him to indicate very clearly to most observers here why he regarded it as necessary to resign.

A remark to-day that Dr. Moore's retirement was a "calamity" is not considered an exaggeration by those who have knowledge of the situation in which the loss of his services will leave the Administration at this critical period of international relatons.

Resignation Offered on Feb. 2.

Dr. Moore's letter of resignation reads as follows:

Department of State.
Washington, Feb. 2, 1914.

My dear Mr. President: In resigning the office of Counsellor for the Department of State it is proper to recall the fact that I indicated at the outset that my tenure was only provisional, my sole motive in accepting the place being to render to your Administration such service as might be possible in a period of transition. This design is now fulfilled. My first term of departmental service, which began more than twenty-eight years ago, lasted somewhat more than six years; my second, which was followed by special service abroad, lasted barely five months. My present term will, on the day on which my resignation is to take effect, have lasted more than ten months, while a full year will have elapsed since the close of the last Administration. Ample opportunity having thus been afforded for the effective organization of the department's force, the duty which I took upon myself has been fully performed.

Permit me to assure you that I shall always stand ready to serve you, as far as may be practicable, in any capacity in which there may seem to be an opportunity for usefulness.

Believe me to be, my dear Mr. President, with constant wishes for your health and prosperity, and for the continued success of your Administration,

Very respectfully and truly yours,
JOHN B. MOORE.

President Expresses Regret.

In a formal statement, given to the press this evening, President Wilson said:

"It is with the greatest reluctance and regret that I see the Administration deprived of the further services of Mr. John Bassett Moore. His counsel has been very valuable to us, but I cannot say that the resignation was unexpected, because, when I with difficulty induced Mr. Moore a year ago to accept the post he frankly told me that he felt certain that his other engagements and systematic work which he had pledged himself to do would not permit his giving more than a year at the outside to this office.

"His resignation has been in my hands for a month, to take effect on March 4. I have entertained the hope until to-day that he might find the other things pressing upon his attention less imperative than he had expected, but in view of what he now tells me I have no right to urge him further to stay.

"I can only say that the Administration loses a man with whom I was proud to be associated, and who deserves the thanks of the country for the work he has done in the department."

Bryan Dictates Statement of Regret.

When Secretary Bryan was asked by newspaper men for information concerning Dr. Moore's resignation, he turned to his stenographer and dictated the following:

"I am sorry to learn that the President has not been able to persuade Dr. Moore to remain. He has been a very useful member of the Administration. His abilities, to an eminent degree, qualify him for the work of Counselor of the State Department, and his personal qualities made him an agreeable person with whom to co-labor. I had known of the claims of his professional work upon him, but had hoped that he could postpone a return to them."

Further than this Mr. Bryan would say nothing, and other officers of the State Department declined to make any explanation of current stories that official friction was responsible for the Counselor's retirement.

Dr. Moore smilingly answered inquiries concerning his resignation. He said that his reason for quitting the Government service was that he had contracted with the Carnegie Foundation to revise his work on the history of arbitrations and could not delay fulfillment of this engagement any longer. The original work on the history of arbitrations was published in six volumes in 1898, and on several occasions Dr. Moore has sought to find time to revise it so as to bring it up to date.

Dr. Moore said that he had a provisional leave of absence from Columbia University, but did not know when he would return there. He expects to remain in Washington for a month or six weeks longer.

Soon after Dr. Moore became Counselor of the State Department rumors were in circulation that he intended to retain the post for a year only. These were denied. It was reported also that Dr. Moore had threatened to resign because it had been arranged that ex-Gov. John E. Osborne of Wyoming, who had been appointed Assistant Secretary of State, was to act as Secretary in Mr. Bryan's absence. A careful inquiry, made at that time, developed nothing to confirm the report. Mr. Osborne said that it was well understood that Dr. Moore was to perform the duties of acting Secretary, and the fact that he, Moore, had always served in that capacity in Secretary Bryan's absences was pointed to as confirmation of this.

More recently reports have been in

ART COLONY HAS A TRIAL BY FIRE

Everybody Much Interested in Black and Purple Smoke, but Forgot About the Alarm.

Artists living in the northeast corner of Gramercy Park and members of the clubs along its south side turned out yesterday to see the fire that destroyed three of the neighborhood's oldest houses.

The houses had been built by one owner back in the days when plush furniture, high ceilings, and huge fireplaces with ornately carved mantelpieces were in vogue. They were at 47, 49, and 51 East Twenty-first Street, and since the old families moved away from them they have been rented out to artists and professional men.

The Gramercy Park dwellers were first attracted to the fire by clouds of black and purple smoke issuing from the cellar of the house at 49 East Twenty-first Street. An excited artist, who leaned from a second-story window, wearing a brown studio coat and an artist's cap, called to the people below to catch his easel. Then he threw from the window a painter's easel, to which an unfinished oil painting was still attached. It depicted a scene in a Mongolian desert.

The artist, Charles Sarka, came rushing out of the building a moment later, choking from the smoke. He held in his arms a small spaniel dog and he led his wife, also choking with the smoke, by the hand.

The watchers, being folk of artistic temperament, did not think of anything so practical as turning in a fire alarm, but surrounded their fellow-artist and asked if he was all right and how his wife was.

Sarka, after coughing the smoke out of his lungs, made a dash through the crowd across Gramercy Park East to a fire-alarm box at the corner of Nineteenth Street. As he sprinted toward the fire-alarm box, his artist's necktie streaming out behind, he bumped squarely into a policeman holding a man by the arm.

A Policeman's Dilemma.

"Shoot the alarm box!" called out Sarka; "shoot the alarm box. My studio's burning up.

"But I've got a prisoner," protested the policeman. "What can I do? He's a burglar at that."

"Oh, hang the prisoner," puffed the artist. "Don't you realize my paintings are burning up—a whole hundred of them? Think of it! And 200 water colors!"

The policeman did realize it. The appeal of the artist was hypnotic. Almost in an instant the alarm box was open and the policeman's prisoner was well down toward the junction of Gramercy Park South and Gramercy Park West. The burglar was rather fleet of foot, but so was the policeman, and when the two disappeared in the direction of Broadway the policeman was rapidly gaining on his freed quarry.

Sarka, after turning back from the fire alarm box toward his studio recalled suddenly that there was something he should have saved that was more important than even his tiny dog. But by this time the black and purple smoke had been lit up by the red haze of flames, and the first floor of the building, as well as the cellar, was afire. Fire engines whistled in the distance, but they came forward with painful lack of speed, as each bit of progress had to be forced through narrow streets, where the snow, banked on both sides, stretched toward the centre in piles that almost joined.

Fire Engine 16, stalled in Third Avenue a block north of the fire, while Engine 5 got within a block of the fire from the south, and Engine 14 took up a position a block to the east. No effort was made to bring near-by fire plugs into service, as some of them were buried beneath snow piles and others were so near to snow piles that it would have been impossible to bring the engines near them. From three distant fire plugs in Third Avenue and one in Twenty-first Street, east of Third Avenue, long lines of hose were strung to the burning studio building.

Deputy Fire Chief Skelly, who always works as hard as the hardest working of his firemen, led a line of fire fighters into the rooms of the burning first floor, only to find that in the rear the fire had spread all the way to the roof, and that the "interlocking" floor joists had transmitted the blaze to the buildings east and west of the one originally involved. A blow of an axe on a partition wall revealed the fact that there was no solid structure, but only flimsy partitions.

No Ladders to Be Had.

A call for more equipment brought Water Tower 2 from East Thirteenth Street, and Hook and Ladder 7 from East Twenty-eighth Street. It was impossible to get the ladder truck near enough to the building to bring the ladders into play, and they were badly needed in order to permit the breaking of windows on the upper floors so that fire-hose streams could be played through them. Firemen finally smashed the windows with long pikes, which they wielded from positions on the roof.

Battalion Chiefs Martin and Ross joined Deputy Chief Skelly with forces of men armed with shovels and ready to dig out fire hydrants or make places for fire engines to stand in near the hydrants. This work was progressing when the flames turned into black smoke again, which began to subside under the torrents of water from the Third Avenue hose lines.

Artist Sarka stood it all for a time, but he finally said he simply had to go in and rescue some manuscripts in his studio. The manuscripts, he explained, were not his, but had been sent to him by magazines to be illustrated.

"I don't care about one," he said as he pleaded, with the stern officer of the law, "because the author is well known and established. But another is a first effort accepted, and it's a bully yarn. A romance of the Mongolian desert. That's what was on my easel."

But the policeman shook his head and held fast to Sarka on the edge of the fire lines. Deputy Chief Skelly lent an ear to the artist's tale, and set a ladder against his front window. First he went in to see that it was passably safe, and then he motioned to the artist to follow him. A moment later the artist came out again with a water-soaked manuscript in a big brown envelope and a smile that brought cheers from all his fellow-artists, the cheers being interrupted by one artist who insisted on slipping a knitted wool sweater over Sarka's dripping form.

To his wife Sarka confided that most of the paintings and all of the water colors would not be irretrievably lost. The fire loss was estimated at $15,000.

GERMAN AND WIFE ARRESTED AS SPIES

Woman Had with Her Important Documents Relating to the British Navy.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, March 4.—A remarkable story was told at the Bow Street Police Court this afternoon in the unfolding of a case in which Frederick Adolphus Gould, a cigar merchant, and his wife, Maud Gould, were charged with espionage.

The woman was arrested at Charing Cross Station on Feb. 22, as she was about to depart for Ostend. She had in her possession three envelopes containing important documents relating to the British navy. The man was arrested later at his home at Wandsworth, where, it is alleged, other incriminating documents concerning the navy were found.

Mrs. Gould denied all knowledge of the contents of the envelopes, and her husband confirmed her statement.

Mr. Bodkin, in opening the case for the prosecution, said it was fairly clear that Gould, whose real name was believed to be Adolf Friedrich Schroeder, had acted for a long time as a spy in this country.

One of the documents found gave a short history of Gould's life. He was born in Germany in 1854, lived in England from 1858 to 1868, and then returned to Germany to complete his education. In 1870, when the Franco-Prussian war began, he joined the German army, receiving the Iron Cross and a Captaincy.

Gould went to America in 1886 and again in 1900 in connection with a sky-sign and swinging letters business. Gould carried on correspondence with an individual at Brussels presumed to be the agent of a foreign Government. One witness said Gould told him he was an agent of the German Government.

The prisoners were remanded.

GOLD AND SILVER WIGS.

Extraordinary Headdress Seen at a Ball in St. Petersburg.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, Thursday, March 5.—A telegram to the Daily News from St. Petersburg says:

"The most brilliant ball of the St. Petersburg Winter season, given by Countess Shouvaloff in her palace on the Fontanka Quay, was remarkable for the daring headdress of ladies of high Russian society.

"Princess Orloff, wife of the Czar's chief aid de camp, wore a wig of burnished gold, from which stood out a great plume of golden feathers fixed in with emerald and pearl pins. Mme. Oliff, a lady-in-waiting to the Empress, wore a vivid blue wig supporting a great exotic butterfly.

"Mme. Polovtzeff wore a green wig with a blue turban and a huge black aigrette. Princess Gortchakoff wore a magenta wig with a high diadem of gold and silver leaves. Her robe of vivid red and orange velvet was bordered with silver fox.

"Mme. Isvolsky had a wig of silver hair, and Mme. Fedoseiff a violet-colored wig. Princess Belloselsky, (née Whittier of Philadelphia,) wore a pink robe and a blue wig."

TOWN WHOLLY ISOLATED.

No One Has Entered or Left Wrightstown, N. J., Since Storm.

By Marconi Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—Wrightstown, a small village in Burlington County, N. J., about 12 miles from Mount Holly and 31 miles from Camden on the Pemberton & Hightstown Railroad, is as completely isolated from the world as if it were in the arctic regions. Not a single person is believed to have entered or left the town since it became snowbound late Sunday night.

The railroad is making desperate efforts to break through the barrier of snow, and late this afternoon it was reported that the shovelers had got within two miles of the town. One of the officials said it was hoped a rain could be pushed through to Wrightstown to-morrow morning. All roads leading into the town are blocked by snow drifts.

CHECKS THEATRE PANIC.

Moving Picture Operator Puts Out Fire and Calms Audience.

John Lawson, operator at the motion picture house of Smith & Andres, 114 Manhattan Street, checked an incipient panic in the audience of 250 persons at 6 o'clock last night, when a fire had been discovered in a zinc film box. He put out the blaze with a hand extinguisher, and then, as he saw some thirty persons bolting for the door, he opened the door of his booth and called to the audience that the fire was out.

Dense smoke pouring from the ventilators of the theatre, a fireproof structure, caused Patrolmen Oberle and Bloss of the West 125th Street Station, and Fireman Falls, who lives across the street, to hurry to the place. They found the audience quiet and the fire out. No alarm was sent in.

After twenty-five minutes delay, to permit the smoke of burning celluloid to clear out of the hall, the evening's entertainment was resumed.

LIED AGAINST FRANK, A NEWSBOY SWEARS

G. W. Epps, Jr., Accuses Atlanta Detective of Coaxing Him Into False Testimony at Trial.

SAYS BRIBE WAS PROMISED

Lad, in Affidavit, Retracts Story of Mary Phagan's Alleged Remarks About Frank.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 4.—The case of Leo M. Frank, convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan, developed another sensation to-day when attorneys for Frank gave an affidavit signed by George W. Epps, Jr., a 15-year-old newsboy, in which he repudiated parts of his testimony at the Phagan inquest and at the murder trial. Epps in his affidavit admits he gave false testimony, and charges that he did so because he was persuaded by Detective John Black and encouraged by Solicitor Dorsey.

A second development was an interview given out by Frank, in which he assailed the city detectives for having "framed up" testimony to reflect on his character. He took as the text of his remarks the affidavit made by Mrs. Nina Formby in New York, a copy of which he received in the mail this morning.

Solicitor Dorsey to-day filed a habeas corpus petition directing that Frank be brought into court for resentencing. Judge Hill signed this paper, but kept secret the time set for the resentencing.

Epps in his affidavit charges that Detective John Black told him to swear that on April 26, the day that Mary Phagan was murdered, that he (Epps) sat beside the girl on a street car and had ridden into the city with her; that he had boarded the car at 11:50 o'clock and had left it with Mary Phagan at Marietta and Forsyth Streets at 12:05 or 12:07; that Mary Phagan had told him she was afraid of Frank because he was accustomed to wink at her and to act in an otherwise suspicious manner toward her.

All of these statements Epps now repudiates. He says he did ride into the city with Mary Phagan, but that he sat three seats behind her on the street car, and that the only words he spoke to her were in greeting when they left the car at Marietta and Forsyth Streets.

Boy Tells of Bribe.

Epps asserts that he told Detective Black the facts, but that the detective insisted upon his testifying falsely, and promised to give him money to leave town after the trial. He says that before the trial he was taken to the office of Solicitor Dorsey, and that he was there questioned by the solicitor and the detective, and that in replying to a question from the solicitor he sought to make it plain that he did not ride in the same seat with Mary Phagan, but that the solicitor told him that his testimony before the Coroner's inquest was all right, and that he simply wished to refresh his memory.

The boy said that after his interview with the solicitor Detective Black followed him into the street and impressed upon him the necessity of sticking to his story about the time he got on and off the street car.

"He told me," said Epps in his affidavit, "that he wished my testimony to support Jim Conley's evidence."

Young Epps is now confined in the State Reformatory at Milledgeville. His affidavit repudiating his testimony and charging Detective Black with having put words into his mouth was sworn to before J. Cleveland Cooper, clerk of the Baldwin County Superior Court, at Milledgeville.

The affidavit comprises a statement of about 3,500 words. In the course of it the boy said:

"I now state that at both the coroner's inquest and the trial of Leo M. Frank I swore falsely. I now state that I was persuaded to give the false testimony in both of the before-mentioned hearings by Detective John Black. I am glad of the chance to tell the truth and relieve my mind and conscience and clear myself of the perjured testimony given at both hearings. I have prayed to God for forgiveness and I now want to explain all the circumstances and influences that made me swear falsely at both of those hearings. I will say that the only statement in my testimony that is of truth is that I knew Mary Phagan, and that I rode on the street with her on April 26, which was the last time I ever saw Mary Phagan alive.

"Black wanted me to say that I sat in the seat with Mary on the car, but I told him that this was not true, that I sat three seats behind her. But Black said: 'That would be all right; you do as I tell you.'

Coached in Perjury.

"He then questioned me again about coming downtown on the car with Mary and told me that I got on the car at 10 minutes to 12 o'clock, and that I sat on the seat with Mary and that we got off the car about 5 minutes to 7 minutes after 12 at Marietta and Forsyth Streets. I again told Black that that was not true and that I did not want to lie about it. He told me that it was all right. 'You go ahead and tell it just like I tell you.' I told him that I didn't know anything about what time we got off the car and Black says: 'Oh, you were raised in the country; you can tell the time by the sun, and it was about 5 or 7 minutes after 12.' And he said it just like that. I told him that that was not true, but he made me agree to say it as he told me. And I said, 'all right, if you say I got to say it that way, all right, but it is not true.' Then he said: 'And you do as I tell you and I will give you some money when this trial is over and you can leave town if you want to.' I told him that I hated to leave town and leave my mother, and he said, 'that is all right. I will fix it with your mother.' I told Black 'all right, if you say so, I suppose I can do it.'

Brought in Frank's Name.

"He then told me that I must say that I talked to Mary on the car coming downtown, and told me to say I deviled Mary about her sweetheart, and told her she must have a sweetheart at the pencil factory, and that I should say that Mary said, 'She didn't have any sweetheart, but Mr. Frank down there acted suspicious toward her, that he came out ahead of her at nights when she would leave the factory and would look at her and wink at her.' And I should say that Mary said she was 'afraid of Frank,' and that she asked me to come to the factory every night to meet her because she was afaid of Frank.

"He then urged me to go ahead and tell the story just like he told me and I said all right, if you say I got to do it, I suppose I can do it.

"After I got home I realized that I had sworn to lies under the direction of Detective Black and I felt mighty bad about it, and when I was getting ready to go to bed I cried, and I said my prayers and I asked God to forgive

I. W. W. INVADERS SEIZED IN CHURCH

SAY HE INCITED RIOT

PRIESTS REFUSE LODGINGS

One Workless Prisoner Has $751—Tannenbaum Is Held in $5,000 Bail.

Frank Tannenbaum, the young leader of the Industrial Workers of the World, and 189 of his unemployed followers were arrested last night in the Roman Catholic Church of St. Alphonsus at 312 West Broadway. A girl of the name of Gussie Miller, who has accompanied the members of the army of the unemployed on their nightly visits to churches, was among those arrested. A suffragist giving the name Jane Est, who was much in evidence, was not arrested, although she tried to fight her way into the patrol wagon.

The prisoners were taken to the Macdougal Street Station and to the new station at Beach and Varick Streets, as one station could not accommodate them all. Tannenbaum and another leader of the name of Charles Plunkitt were taken to the Macdougal Street Station, while the girl was taken to the other station. The leaders were held in the station on a charge of unlawful entry and inciting to riot. Their followers were accused of disorderly conduct. All the prisoners were taken to a special night court in a large room across the hall from the quarters of the Court of Domestic Relations, in East Fifty-seventh Street. Magistrate Campbell presided.

Many Police Reserves Called.

It required the efforts of the police reserves from the Second, Fourth, Sixth, Tenth, Fifteenth, and Twelfth Precincts to make the arrests. In all there wer 100 policemen under command of Inspector Wakefield. They met no resistance from the Tannenbaum "army." Tannenbaum's followers seemed to be stunned. It was Tannenbaum's birthday. He hinted on Tuesday that he would celebrate it in "a glorious manner."

The police at the Macdougal Street Station found $751 in the clothing of the second man to have his personal record taken. Several other prirsoners also had sums of money. Many billys and knives were found in the possession of the prisoners when they were searched, but no revolvers were found. In the church itself after the raid the priests found a razor on the floor.

The Army of the Unemployed assembled again last night at Rutgers Square Park as has been its custom since last Saturday night. There was a larger crowd than usual to hear Tannenbaum speak. The meeting began at six o'clock, and the men drifted toward the square by twos and threes until more than 600 were there. They crowded about the fountain, from a ledge of which the speakers made their addresses. Shortly before seven o'clock another contingent from Union Square arrived, making the total number about 800 men.

Tannenbaum harangued the crowd in his usual style. He told the members of his army that there was no law for hungry men, and this assertion was applauded wildly. He told them also that they had a right to a share in everything in the city and that the proper way to get that share was to take it. He recounted with triumph how the churches had sheltered and fed his army on Monday and Tuesday nights and said that they would do it again last night.

Woman Harangues the Crowd.

When Tannenbaum stopped talking for a moment a woman named Jane Est, who called herself a suffragist, took up the harangue. Her words were received with enthusiasm. Then Tannenbaum for the third time this week ordered his army to fall into line, two by two, and follow the man who would lead them to another night's free lodging. Behind this man walked Tannenbaum and another leader, each holding an arm of the girl Gussie Miller. Behind straggled the army. It was estimated that there were 600 men in line, three times as many as on the previous night's march.

The army marched up Canal Street to the Bowery, walking more rapidly than usual and halting traffic at cross streets, as it had done on Tuesday night. The line continued westward until West Broadway was reached, where the marchers turned north. The Church of St. Alphonsus stands in the middle of the block between Canal and Grand Streets. The home of the Redemptorist Order is next door to the south. There are three doors to the entrance of the church on West Broadway at the top of a flight of stone steps.

Tannenbaum ran up these steps. With him went Detective Sergt. Gegan and Detective Lieut. Gildea.

At the door of the church Tannenbaum paused and his army gathered behind him. Finally Tannenbaum opened the door and entered the church. Several of his followers and the detectives went with him. The doors were then closed and the remainder of the army awaited outside the chief's commands.

There were forty men and women in the church when Tannenbaum entered. Most of them were kneeling in prayer. Tannenbaum and his handful of followers walked down the centre aisle. They made so much noise that the members of the congregation arose from their knees in alarm. Shouts from the crowd on the outside could be heard, and women in the church gathered in a little knot at one side in open-eyed wonder. There was a dim light in the church. The priests were preparing for the service which is held at 8 o'clock every night during Lent. It was just 7:30 o'clock when Tannenbaum entered.

When he reached the altar railing Tannenbaum turned to the left. There he met Father Adrian, who came forward with his hand on his breast. The priest's face was white, and he was trembling as he demanded the reason for the invasion. Tannenbaum said that he wanted to see the pastor of the church. He was directed to go to the rectory next door where the Redemptorist Fathers live. He did so.

The pastor of St. Alphonsus is the Rev. John G. Schneider. He has six assistants and five missionary helpers. Tannenbaum and the detectives and Jane Est entered the rectory. The detectives, who were not known as detectives by Tannenbaum, went into a small room off the hallway leaving Tannenbaum and the young woman outside. Soon the detectives appeared with Father Schneider and several priests.

"Here is Father Schneider now," said Detective Gegan to Tannenbaum.

Demands Lodging in Church.

"All right," he replied. "Just one moment. My name is Tannenbaum, and I've led my army here to make one request of you. We want to sleep in the church to-night. Can we do it?"

When he said this, the priests, who didn't seem to realize what the uproar was about, held up their hands in amazement. Father Schneider stood in the doorway, while Tannenbaum emphasized his words with the gestures he uses while addressing a crowd.

"No, you cannot," said Father Schneider.

"But we're starving," continued Tannenbaum. "We've come here to spend the night."

"No you haven't," said the priest, firmly, shaking his head.

"Well, we'll clean up in the morning," persisted Tannenbaum.

"You'll do nothing of the kind," replied Father Schneider. "The Catholic church is no place for you to sleep, and I strongly object to the way you entered here."

"Do you call this living up to the teachings of Jesus Christ?" Tannenbaum then asked, with a sneer.

"I don't intend to argue with you on ecclesiastical matters," said Father Schneider, holding up a hand in protest. "You've got to get out."

"Well, will you give us money to buy food?" was Tannenbaum's next question.

"No."

"Will you give us work?"

"No."

"But I tell you we're starving."

"I can't help that," was the reply. "Why don't you get work? All I have to say is that you can't stay here."

"All right, then," said Tannenbaum, and at this moment, Jane Est, interrupted the conversation. She talked loudly and emphasized her remarks by shaking her clenched fist in the faces of the priests.

Woman Rails at Priests.

"So this is what you call living up to your principles," she exclaimed. "This wouldn't be the first time a church was invaded. They have been entered this way in France, England, and Italy, and now they're being entered in New York. You've got to take us in."

Tannenbaum and the detectives tried to make the woman keep quiet, but she insisted on talking, and asked several other questions in her effort to draw the priest into an argument. Her voice rose high and shrill. Finally the detectives took her by the arms and told her she would be ejected if she didn't keep quiet.

Then Father Schneider asked Tannenbaum why he had come there anyway.

"Oh," said the young man, with a smile, "we were just passing by and thought it was a good-looking place to come in."

"Well, you can't come in," said Father Schneider. "You've got to get out."

"All right, no hard feelings, cap," replied the smiling Tannenbaum. "We'll go away," and he tried to shake the priest's hand.

Father Schneider refused to shake hands with Tannenbaum, who then turned to leave the rectory with the detectives by his side. Halfway to the door he turned and repeated the words, "All right, no hard feelings, now, remember."

Wild Alarm in Church.

Meanwhile there was consternation in the church. Many members of the "army" had entered the house of worship and stamped down the middle aisle, while the priests tried in vain to stop the invasion. A flashlight was taken, and more priests rushed into the church, thinking a shot had been fired. They gathered the women members of their congregation to one side and conducted the men worshippers out of harm's way through a rear door. One priest requested everybody who didn't belong to the church to leave, and was answered by cries of "Sit down, boys, sit down!" The "army" promptly obeyed, occupying seats in the pews off the middle aisle. There were cries for Tannenbaum. "Get Frank! Get Frank!" shouted members of the "army."

Father Hanley, white and trembling, stood at the rear of the church and denounced the men. "They have no right to invade our church," he said. "It is sacrilegious. I'm not afraid to take it up with them. Do you call this American spirit? How do they dare to enter here with their hats on in the presence of the Blessed Sacrament? Who are they and what do they want? Such actions are terrible."

Another priest, Father Peter, added his voice to the denunciation. "We will die before we will let them sleep here," he said. "This is outrageous."

Then Tannenbaum entered the church again. He stood by the door and told the detectives that he desired to speak to his followers. They permitted this because the army was becoming restless.

Tannenbaum told his followers to remain quietly in their places until the question of their staying there was settled. Meanwhile policemen on posts near by had been summoned to the church by police whistles. There were nearly 200 followers of Tannenbaum in the church. All those who so desired were permitted to enter, but none was permitted to leave. Detective Gegan went to a telephone in a near-by store and called Police Commissioner McKay. While he was absent Tannenbaum held a reception near the entrance.

Tannenbaum Calls It Fine.

"This is fine," he said, with a grin. "This is the best meeting I've had yet."

Tannenbaum said that if he was arrested his friends should call Miss Jessie Ashley on the telephone at the Hotel Earl, Leonard D. Abbot of Current Opinion, or the office of a publication known as Mother Earth. He said that the I. W. W. would take care of him.

Then he went on to tell some of his history. He was 21 years old, he said. His parents lived in Parksville, Sullivan County, where they had a small farm, and he didn't care a rap if he was arrested.

Here Jane Est broke in again by shouting, "Being arrested is nothing. St. Peter and St. Paul were both arrested, and—"

Again she was quieted with difficulty.

Tannenbaum then was asked if he would go to work if he had a chance. He said that he would for $3 a day.

"If that sum were offered to-morrow, would you accept it?"

"Well," he replied, "I'd want to see my boys get the preference first. After they were fixed I'd go to work myself."

Asked why he had entered the Catholic church without first having obtained an invitation, he replied: "Well, you see, we've been to three Protestant churches and we thought to-night we'd give the Catholics a chance."

Meanwhile Detective Gegan had got into telephonic communication with Police Commissioner McKay. He told the Commissioner what had occurred and received orders to arrest every man in the church. Instructions were at once sent to all the surrounding precincts to hurry the reserves and patrol wagons from each to the church.

Gegan then returned to St. Alphonsus and, opening the door, laid his hand on Tannenbaum's shoulder, saying: "You are under arrest for unlawful entry, by order of the Commissioner."

"All right," was his reply. "But you newspaper men want to remember that if there is any disturbance or disorder here it will be the fault of the detectives and the reserves."

In a few moments the reserves swarmed about the church, whose doors were guarded. There was a large crowd in the street outside and traffic was blocked.

Tannenbaum was first brought down and put into the patrol wagon. He was smiling, and the crowd yelled when it saw him. After him came Jane Est. She brushed aside the policemen lining the steps and forced her way to the wagon. There she shook Tannenbaum by the hand and tried to get in. She was brushed aside by a policeman, who told her she couldn't "get any press agent stuff across to-night, thank you."

Again she tried to get into the wagon, but when she was told that serious consequences might follow she drew back.

Members of the army who were within the church under arrest were hurried down the steps and into the wagon while the crowd jeered and hooted. Each policeman took two of the unemployed by the collars and, in some cases, lifted them bodily down the steps. Forty minutes after Tannenbaum's army reached St. Alphonsus's the first patrol wagon load of prisoners was on its way to the MacDougal Street Station. The wagons were filled, driven to the station, emptied, driven back and filled again until 190 prisoners in all had been taken. Tannebaum was the first prisoner whose name was entered on the blotter at the MacDougal Street Station.

Unemployed Man with $751.

Tannenbaum said he was a waiter and had no home. He was accused of unlawful entry and of inciting to riot. The next prisoner was Heiman Finkelstein. A search revealed more than $700 on his person. He said he was a machinist, and lived at 246 West Fourth Street. When he was asked why he was with Tannenbaum as an "unemployed" man, when he had so much money in his possession, he said he "just joined in because he was asked."

"Why should I spend my savings?" asked Finkelstein. "I am saving this for my old age."

Charles Plunkitt was the third prisoner arraigned at the station. He is a leader of the I. W. W. He said he was 21 years old and had no home. The same charge was made against him.

Commissioner McKay and Third Deputy Commissioner Rubin arrived at the station shortly after 9 o'clock, having first visited the church, where they saw a razor which the priests had picked up from the floor. It was said by the police that pieces of iron also had been found in the church and also a pair of shears.

It was the work of several hours to take the histories of all the prisoners. After this work was done the prisoners were taken to the Night Court. Neither Commissioner McKay nor Deputy Commissioner Rubin would make any statement.

PRISONERS PACK THE COURT.

Crowd Jeers Agitators as They Arrive in Patrol Wagons.

A curious crowd gathered outside of the court to watch the arrival of the I. W. W. prisoners. Motor patrol wagons came up every few minutes and each wagon bore from 15 to 20 of the agitators. They shouted salutations at the crowd which greeted them with jeers. Some of the prisoners tions at the crowd, which greeted them doffed their hats in mock salute at the greeting. A cordon of police held the crowd back.

Magistrate Campbell, when he learned that nearly 200 prisoners had been taken, decided that the court room on the second floor would be too small and had the large court room on the ground floor opposite the Domestic Relations Court opened. In this he arranged to have from fifty to seventy prisoners arraigned at a time. The first prisoners were brought in at 11:20 o'clock.

Up to that time Miss Gussie Miller, who had marched at the head of the I. W. W. column arm in arm with Frank Tannenbaum, its leader, had not arrived at court. Police Commissioner Douglas I. McKay was in court early directing the police. He said he intended to prosecute the leaders of the demonstration for inciting to riot, which is a felony, and for unlawful entry. The Rev. Father John G. Sneider of St. Alphonsus Church was in court as a witness. Acting immediately under Commissioner McKay were Inspector Wakefield, who directed the raid on the I. W. W. forces, and Detectives Gildea, Stillson, Haskins and Gegan.

At 11:20 o'clock Tannenbaum was brought into court. Magistrate Campbell had not yet ascended the bench. Tannenbaum asked Lieut. Patrick Gildea, who brought him in, whether the court clerk was the Judge. He appeared nervous and wiped his face with a dirty handkerchief. He sleeked back his shiny black hair and fidgeted while waiting for the Magistrate. The charge against him of inciting to riot was read to him when court opened, and he asked:

"Do I have to plead now?"

The Magistrate explained that he could refuse to plead to the short affidavit and that he would be held in bail. Tannenbaum appeared undecided what to do, and the Magistrate said he would hold him for examination to-day in the Jefferson Market Court. He fixed the bail at $5,000, a figure which staggered Tannenbaum.

Tannenbaum said that yesterday was his twenty-first birhtday and that his nervousness when arranged was due to the fact that he had never before been in a courtroom. He was locked up for the night.

Nothing was seen in court of Jane Est, who waved her hand at Tannenbaum at the Rutgers Square speechmaking which preceded the march to the church. She had followed the procession, but was not arrested. She had proclaimed herself an American suffragette.

Just after Tannenbaum had been led away Sheffield Justus, a lawyer, of 27 Cedar Street, entered court wearing full dress and approached the Magistrate's bench. He said he represented Tannenbaum and the other men. He asked whether sentence had been imposed, and when he learned that Tannenbaum's case had been adjourned until this morning he asked what bail had been fixed. He knitted his brows when he heard that bail had been put at $5,000. He said that it was impossible for his client to obtain that amount, and asked that it be reduced to $500.

"Your Honor," he argued, "on this man's case depends the liberty of many other men. It is necessary that his counsel should consult with him to-night. To do so we must have him free."

Magistrate Campbell refused to reduce the bail, saying that the offense charged was a most serious one. Justus said he had been retained by friends of Tannenbaum and denied that the I. W. W. had retained him. Before entering the church witnesses asserted that Tannenbaum had said that he expected to be arrested and had retained Miss Jessie Ashley, a woman Socialist lawyer, as one of his counsel. Miss Ashley, who inherited a fortune, was prominent in the waiters' strike last year, supplying funds to the I. W. W. organizers of that strike. Tannenbaum up to a few weeks ago was a waiter in a Park Row restaurant.

The I. W. W. privates created much confusion in the ante-room of the court by refusing to give their names. Many of them gave names palpably false. As a result of their behavior the arraignment of the first batch of sixty-one prisoners was held up for more than an hour, and it was not until 12:30 o'clock this morning that they trooped into the court led by Miss Gussie Miller of 717 Courtlandt Avenue, the Bronx. She is a small young woman, with black hair and eyes. Magistrate Campbell paroled her in custody of Mr. Sheffield until 2 o'clock this afternoon, when she is to be examined at 300 Mulberry Street.

The other prisoners Magistrate Campbell held in $1,000 bail each. To Sheffield's plea that their offense was not serious, being specified as disorderly conduct, the Magistrate answered:

"Oh, yes, it is most serious; it is entering a church to create disorder."

He refused to reduce the bail. Most of the prisoners were apparently immigrants, ranging in age from 18 to 55 years. Some of the prisoners delayed the proceedings by denying that Sheffield represented them as their counsel. One of them demanded to know who had retained Sheffield. He became quiet after Sheffield at the Magistrate's suggestion gave him his authority.

Another prisoner, better dressed than the others, created much amusement in court and aroused Commissioner McKay's anger. He forced his way through the crowd of prisoners ahead of him and cried out in a high-pitched voice:

'I want to be heard. I insist on being heard.'

'Does Mr. Sheffield represent you?" the Magistrate asked him.

"No, most emphatically no," the prisoner cried.

He said that he had called Deputy Police Commissioner Rubin during the afternoon on the telephone and told him he was going to the meeting. He said he had asked Mr. Rubin for permission to attend and added:

"He said he would send men to take care of me, and they took care of me all right."

This man said he was Harry E. Schacht. He has won notoriety on the east side as the promoter of a protective society with a band of juvenile volunteer "police" to investigate dance halls, cafés, and pool parlors.

Commissioner McKay told Magistrate Campbell that he had telephoned to Deputy Commissioner Rubin, who had told him that Schlacht had telephoned him during the afternoon that he wanted permission to make a speech at the I. W. W. meeting. Mr. Rubin, the Commissioner said, had warned Schlacht to stay away from the affair. Protesting bitterly, Schlacht was led to a cell for the night.

When Commissioner McKay learned that one of the groups of prisoners, twenty-three in number, had not arrived at court, he ran out into the street and ordered a motor patrol wagon to hurry downtown and bring them up. One of the wagons broke down at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-seventh Street and the prisoners were marched to court. They attracted much attention, which they appeared to relish.

BOMBSHELL TO I. W. W.

Police Action Unexpected—Leaders Desert Headquarters.

The leaders of the I. W. W. remained away from the headquarters at 214 West Street last night. A reporter asked the men who were in charge what the I. W. W. would do for those who had been arrested. One man who acted as spokesman said:

"We will do all that we can for them."

"Just what?" he was asked.

"That cannot be told now," the man replied, "for the arrests have come as a bombshell into our camp."

"Will the I. W. W. of the entire country come to their aid?"

"The I. W. W. fights for its men without regard for place," he answered.

Then another man spoke up, saying:

"The arrested men were after food and shelter, weren't they? Well, aren't they getting that in the station. Let the city support them. The officials will see the problem of the unemployed if they have to pay for their support."

Others said that the arrested men had gained what they had desired—food and shelter. The city, they said, would have to support them if it would not give them work at 30 cents an hour.

There were many men in West Street about the headquarters of the I. W. W. after the arrest of Tannenbaum's followers.

Restaurants and lunchrooms were visited by some of the men, who in several instances ordered food, and, receiving it, refused to pay for it.

In the lunchrooms near the I. W. W. headquarters these men were most active. They demanded coffee and bread, and "plenty of it."

The restaurant keepers complied for the most part with these requests. Many of the men who demanded food were former customers they said. In only a few places was there any disturbance. One man who had been ejected from a lunchroom made a speech to a group in the street, saying:

"We won't work until those who should give us work are ready to take us at union rates. We are men and we want to be treated as such. We are going to live, and if we cannot make a living society has got to give us a living. We have the right to demand food, and we will take it if our demands are not heeded. If the police lock us up they will have to feed us."

HAYWOOD EXPECTED IT.

Says Public Will Learn That Unemployed Problem Is No Myth.

William D. Haywood, head of the I. W. W., said last night that he was not surprised at the arrest of the church invaders.

"The police followed the advice given them by the newspapers," he said, "and that was to be expected. The result will be that the public will learn that the problem of the unemployed is not a myth.

"It also will make the unemployed realize the forces of society that are against them, and will unite them in their demand for work. I believe that the effect of the police action to-night will be felt all over the nation, and that the authorities of the cities and States of the nation will be made to realize that their duty is to find employment for the unemployed."

KOEHLER DEFENSE BEGUN.

Will Show Conspiracy to Ruin Him, Major's Counsel Says.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW LONDON, Conn., March 4.—Newspaper men visited Fort Terry today for the first time since the court-martial of Major Benjamin M. Koehler began. They were received by Capt. Hudson T. Patten. Col. Henry H. Kirby, President of the court-martial, told the newspaper men that the court must remain closed. Major Koehler and his counsel refused to speak for publication.

Major Koehler's defense was begun to-day. After his counsel had told the court that his client would be able to show a conspiracy to ruin him, Major Andrew Moses of Fort Wright took the stand. Major Moses, Acting Commandant of the New London Artillery district, who was a classmate of Koehler at West Point, told the court that he had known him for twenty years as a man of high character.

night is a small honor at the hands of New York compared with that which Mayor Mitchel has done him in urging him to enter the service of his native city.

"I hope that Col. Goethals may find it possible to come here in order that he may establish as good sanitation, moral and physical, as high ideals of public service and citizenship, the same safety to life and property as he has given to an outlying settlement of our common country.

"I think I can assure him that he will find the difficulties as Police Commissioner quite as great and the task almost as irksome and arduous as was the one he encountered in Panama. However, Col. Goethals, we are not selfish, and we recognize that no work of public service is too great or too important to be intrusted to your hands."

At this point Mayor Mitchel appeared on the platform and was greeted with loud applause. In introducing the Mayor Commissioner Finley aroused laughter by expressing the opinion that most of the citizens of the city wished heartily that Col. Goethals could have brought to New York his entire trained corps of engineers and laborers and set them at work to clean the streets.

Mitchel Sure of Him, if —

Mayor Mitchel said that the Civic Forum had signally honored him by inviting him to join in the public tribute to Col. Goethals. He said Col. Goethals had returned to his native city after accomplishing a great service for his country and for civilization.

"He has conquered nature, disease and other stupendous obstacles," said Mr. Mitchel. "Never in all of the experience which has been given to me have I known of a body of men so held together or so inspired by a common spirit of loyalty to one man and one great ideal as the 40,000 canal workers under Col. Goethals have been."

The Mayor went on to say that during his visit to Panama after the campaign last Fall he had inspected all of the departments in the Canal Zone, and that he had immediately recognized that the success of the Federal Government in making possible a union of the two oceans was not due so much to the fact that Col. Goethals was a great engineer and a great administrator with an infinite ability for detail, although he recognized in him all of these qualities, but was due rather to an intangible something which he possessed which marked him out as a natural leader of men.

He praised Col. Goethals's "human characteristics," his sense of justice, his dynamic energy, his ability as a disciplinarian and the manner in which he was able to wield almost absolute power in the Canal Zone without ever once appearing in the rôle of a martinet. Then he remarked earnestly:

"I am particularly pleased to honor Col. Goethals to-night, because I know that if the Legislature of this State does its duty by the people of the City of New York we are going to have him as Police Commissioner.

"If you believe in a man's integrity, in his great ability, in his power to command men without tyrannizing over them, and if you have a job which calls for the display in marked degree for those very qualities, then I say that the best thing to do is to give the job to that man and give it to him without qualification or without limiting his powers or hampering his judgment.

Urges Pressure on Legislature.

"The only thing which stands between what you want and what I want are the gentlemen of the Legislature, and I think that it is incumbent upon both you and me to bring such pressure as we can upon that body to get what we mutually desire. Dr. Abbott was perfectly right when he said that no service was too great for Col. Goethals to be called to, but New York needs him, especially for awhile, and he will find here read to his hand, labors just as great as those he has rendered to the nation in Panama."

Peary Praises Mrs. Goethals, Too.

Read Admiral Robert E. Peary, in his eulogy of Col. Goethals, said that the latter had accomplished a feat which had puzzled the engineers of the world. Spaniards, Scotchmen, Englishmen, and Frenchmen, he said, had sought from Tehuantepec on the north to the head of every possible navigation on the Rio Atrato on the south for a practicable route for a canal. Col. Goethals, said the speaker, has discovered "the thing in the world he desired above all others. He has taken his place among the immortals."

Admiral Peary said that the guest of honor was especially to be congratulated in that he had accomplished a "one man job" in the construction of the canal. He added that he was proud to be a citizen of the country in which such one-man power was possible and which could furnish the right man at the right time to supply that power. Then the speaker expressed the hope that Col. Goethals might be raised to a higher rank in the army of his country. He said:

"Col. Goethals has accomplished this work in a particularly characteristic American way, without fuss or frills, under the modest rank and title of Colonel.

"Now that it is completed, I know I voice the thought of every intelligent person in this country when I express the hope that this Government will see its way clear to follow the suggestion of Congressman Mann and make Col. Goethals 'General,' with all of rank and financial competence that exalted grade implies, as a testimonial to him and to the noble woman, Mrs. Goethals, who has stood beside him through all the worry and trials of the mighty work."

Bishop Greer Hopes He'll Come.

Bishop David H. Greer said that Col. Goethals belonged to the apostleship of accomplishment; that he was a silent, modest giant among men.

"He believes in deeds and not in words," said the Bishop. "He never says what he is going to do, and is equally silent when he has accomplished the task assigned to him."

Col. Goethals had confided to him, Bishop Greer said, that the greatest trial he has had to meet because of his connection with the canal work was his dread of compliments and praise.

"Whether we are to have Col. Goethals in New York or not," said the speaker, "I do not know, or did not know until I heard the Mayor speak here to-night. The Mayor thinks that he knows, and I think that he knows. New York will be most blessed if his hopes come true."

Says Goethals Inspired His Men.

Former Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson described the splendid esprit de corps which centred around Col. Goethals in the canal zone. He said that there are two classes of public officials, one works for the sole purpose of seeing what he can do for the job and the other who works to see what the job can do for him. Col. Goethals, he said, was a splendid type of the first-mentioned class.

He shared the technical problems of construction, he said, with his subordinates, discussing them with the other engineers; but his decision on all matters was final and was reached without undue haste or undue delay. The handling of a force of nearly 50,000 men of various races in the centre of a foreign nation, 1,500 miles from home, and all questions of diplomacy, discipline, tact and judgement fell upon him and were borne by him alone.

Mr. Stimson said that every man in the canal zone had a personal interest in the work and a personal pride in his share of it, due to the spirit inspired by Col. Goethals.

Joseph Choate's Tribute.

Dr. Finley read the speech of former Ambassador Choate in presenting the gold medal of honor to Col. Goethals. It laid stress upon the difficulties which the recipient of the medal had overcome in the accomplishment of his great task, and concluded in these words:

"For the patience and fortitude which carried you safely through it all, for the wisdom and skill which made its completion possible, for the commanding personality which maintained discipline and order among the tens of thousands engaged in the work, without strikes, confusion, or delay; for the purity and integrity of character which you have imparted to the work itself, and for your never failing hope and courage and constant patriotism, the Civic Forum has designed this medal, of which they beg your acceptance, as a slight token of the appreciation and gratitude of your fellow-citizens of all parties and of every creed."

Goethals Gives Credit to Others.

When Col. Goethals arose to accept the gift he was laboring under intense emotion. He was greeted by a mighty cheer, which disconcerted him even more. He began by disavowing that the work of constructing the canal was a "one-man job," and said that he owed much to the support given to him by the successive administrations of Presidents Roosevelt, Taft, and Wilson.

"There were 50,000 brave and devoted men engaged in the construction of the canal," he said, "some of whom even sacrificed their lives in the task. They are deserving of more credit than I am, and my predecessors also did much to the success of the enterprise.

"President Roosevelt," continued the speaker, "recognized the evils of a seven-man government of Canal affairs and issued the order which centralized authority in my hands. I am grateful that I was considered fit to be intrusted with the task, and I am grateful also that Presidents Taft and Wilson continued the policy. To them is due the credit for the success with which I have met."

Col. Goethals evoked long and continued applause by the statement that the canal was practically completed. He said that the locks were even more successful than had been expected, and that there would be no lack of water as had been predicted by "Doubting Thomases."

Canal Ready by July 1.

The greatest difficulty, he said, had been met in dealing with the Cucaracha slide. On Jan. 20, 1913, the slide filled the canal, and when water was let in last October another slide destroyed part of the construction. He added that in spite of these obstacles the canal would be ready for shipping by July 1.

Then Col. Goethals slowly and impressively explained that the work of getting the Canal in operation was one which interested him very much. He said:

"On April 1 I hope to begin the selection of the force for operation and maintenance, and within six months it will be fully organized. I hope that by Jan. 1, 1915, the Canal will be open to the navies of the world."

Among the distinguished persoons present upon the stage were Paul Manship, the sculptor, who designed the Goethals medal; Rear Admiral Charles D. Sigsbee, Col. Clarence P. Townsley, Superintendent of West Point Military Academy; Commandant Arthur Gleaves of the Brooklyn Navy Yard; E. A. Drake, Vice President of the Panama Railroad; Henry Clews, Oscar Straus, and Robert Underwood Johnson.

In the boxes were Mrs. George W. Goethals, Dr. John W. Goethals, brother of the guest of honor; Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Russell Sage, Mrs. Henry Alexander, George W. Perkins, Mortimer L. Schiff, Otto H. Kahn, and Charles D. Hilles.

Col. Goethals will be the guest of honor at the meeting of the Economic Club this evening at the Hotel Astor. The subject for discussion will be "The Commercial Significance of the Panama Canal, with Especial Reference to New York City."

MOVES GOETHALS PROMOTION.

Lodge Forestalls Democrats in Bill to Make Him a Major General.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Senator Lodge of Massachusetts introduced today a joint resolution increasing the number of Major Generals by one, and authorizing the President to promote Col. Goethals to that rank, and extending to the Colonel the thanks of Congress. The thanks of Congress would mean that if the promotion was conferred Col. Goethals could stay a Major General on the active list for the rest of his life, as the retirement law would be suspended in his favor.

Mr. Lodge is known to be actuated entirely by a warm feeling of admiration for Col. Goethals, but many Republicans are pleased that the Democrats have been forestalled in the movement for official recognition of Col. Goethals's services. They resented bitterly the obstacles brought up by Democrats to the elevation of Col. Goethals to be Civil Governor of the Zone in the last days of President Taft's Administration.

President Wilson has gone already almost as far as he can in naming him Governor, and he would undoubtedly appoint Col. Goethals a Major General if the Lodge resolution was passed.

GOETHALS NOT A DECOY.

Mayor Denies He Has Used His Name to Pass Police Bills.

Mayor Mitchel did not see Col. Goethals yesterday afternoon, but it was said that he had communicated with him. When the Mayor was told that Senator Cullen of Brooklyn, Chairman of the Cities' Committee, had said in Albany on Tuesday that the mention of Col. Goethals's name as the next Police Commissioner might be only for the purpose of having police legislation passed, the Mayor said:

"I don't need any further declaration from Col. Goethals. His letter to me was definite enough, but I will say, providing all the time, of course, that Senator Cullen was quoted correctly, that his position is not an unusual one, nor unreasonable, although I do not think that Col. Goethals made himself sufficiently clear in his letter. Most certainly his name is not being used as a decoy and I am confident that Senator Cullen doesn't think so. The time for the Senator to have asked such a question was when I was before his committee."

"The Senator stated that he did ask the question at that time, and that the only answer he received was the reading of Col. Goethals's letter by you," the Mayor was informed.

"Yes," replied the Mayor, "I do remember now that some such question was asked, and that I did read the letter. I think that the Legislature should pass the bills irrespective of whether Col. Goethals is the Commissioner or not, but I think that Col. Goethals's letter is definite enough for any reasonable man."

"Did you see a suggestion by ex-President Taft that Capt. J. B. Harbord, former Assistant Chief of the Philippine Constabulary, should be brought here to head the Police Department, and that Col. Goethals be made a Major General and the head of the army's engineering staff?" the Mayor was asked.

"Of course we all want to see Col. Goethals receive any honors that are to come to him," replied the Mayor. "All sorts of people may have all sorts of theories as to who should be Police Commissioner, but my idea as to Col. Goethals is to get him here as the Commissioner. While I am very grateful to Mr. Taft for any helpful suggestions he may make as to my administration, I do not think that either of us needs advice on this subject. We haven't come to the point of considering anybody for Police Commissioner except Col. Goethals.

"In the meantime, I want to say that I think things are going very well at Police Headquarters. I have no dissatisfaction with Commissioner McKay. We are just discussing whether Col. Goethals will come to New York to head the Police Department. I want the biggest man in the country for the job."

MODIFY MITCHEL BILLS.

Board of Review for Police Force, with Policeman a Member.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 4.—Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward J. McGoldrick and License Commissioner Bell of New York, representing Mayor Mitchel, appeared before the Assembly Cities Committee late to-night and proposed several amendments to the New York City police bills which have the approval of the Mayor.

The vital changes are all proposed for the bill taking away from dismissed members of the uniformed force the right of court review. Under the original bill, dismissed or disciplined members of the force would have recourse to the Mayor only for a rehearing of the charges. Under the amendment proposed to-night, a permanent Board of Review would be provided, composed of a member of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, a member of the uniformed force and a third member to be designated by the Mayor who may or may not be a city official, in the Mayor's option. The board would be required to hear applications for a rehearing on charges and report their findings to the Mayor.

Another amendment extends the pension refund privilege to members of the uniformed force retiring voluntarily and not under fire. Under the original Mitchel bills only men retired under charges were so favored.

DOUBLE DIVORCE GRANTED.

Two Couples Parted on the Same Evidence.

Justice Manning, presiding at the trial of divorce actions in Special Term of the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, yesterday granted decrees in a double divorce suit. The first action of the two was brought by William H. H. Myers of 1,977 Broadway, Manhattan, against his wife, Mrs. Edna Myers, who lives at 180 Sterling Place, Brooklyn. Dr. Arthur L. Douglass, a physician in Brooklyn, was named as co-respondent.

Following the hearing of this suit, Mrs. Douglass, wife of the physician, came forward and asked the court to grant her an interlocutory degree from her husband, basing her charges on the testimony given in the Myers suit.

Both Myers and Mrs. Douglass, the plaintiffs in their respective suits, got their decrees. Justice Manning also awarded Myers the custody of his eight-year-old son, James, and Mrs. Douglass obtained the custody of her son, Bruce, 8 years.

Willett Gives $30,000 Bail.

William Willett, Jr., was released yesterday from Raymond Street Jail after furnishing a bail bond for $30,000. Justice Manning accepted the bond of the National Surety Company. Justice Blackmar on Saturday issued a certificate of reasonable doubt in Willett's case.

me for the crime I committed that day, and my mother saw me crying and I said my prayers longer than I usually do.

Whipped for Lying.

"Both my father and mother talked to me about the evidence as published in the newspapers that I had given. They said they knew I did not know anything about the case and that the evidence published in the newspapers as given by me was false. My father was very mad and he tied my legs and whipped me for lying.

"I went to Solicitor Dorsey's office the next day as instructed by Black. I arrived there at 10:30 o'clock. Black opened the door from Dorsey's ffice and said, 'Hello George, come in.' There was no one in the room but Solicitor Dorsey, Detective Black and myself. Mr. Dorsey said to me, 'George, we have got you down here to refresh your mind on the testimony that you have given at the Coroner's inquest.'

"He then questioned me about the time I had gotten on the car April 26, and I then told him that Detective Black had directed me to say that I got on the car at 10 minutes to 12. Then he asked me what conversation Mary Phagan and I had on the car, and I told him that I was tired of talking about the case; that I had told all that at the Coroner's inquest. Mr. Dorsey, while he was talking to me at this time, had a kind of book before him and there was typewriting on the pages of it, and he looked at this book all the time he was questioning me, and when I had told him that it was just like I had said at the Coroner's inquest, he said, 'That is all right, you just stick to that.'

To Support Conley's Story.

"After this conversation in Mr. Dorsey's office with him and Detective Black, Detective Black followed me out in the hall and told me he wanted me to be sure about the time and not forget when I got off the car with Mary on April 26. 'And you stick to it as about 7 minutes after 12,' and said that the reason he wanted me to remember this and stick to this was that it supported Jim Conley's story as to time, and he wanted my time to be the same as the time Conley had said it was and to agree with it. I promised Black that I would do as he told me to.

"When I went on the stand at the trial I was only allowed to tell about riding on the car with Mary, about the time I got on the car, as instructed by Black, and the time I got off the car. On the day following I was recalled by the defense and was re-examined by Rosser, but was asked practically the same questions that I was the day before and gave practically the same answers.

"The above statement I give as correctly as I can recall in detail, and do so in the hope of making myself clearly understood, and to explain how I was persuaded by Detective Black and encouraged by Solicitor Dorsey to swear falsely. I have been sorry for this false swearing ever since the trial of Mr. Frank, and I say again I am glad of the chance to explain it and relieve my mind of the falsehoods I have told in this case. I am willing and hope that the sworn statement will be delivered to Mr. Rosser, who was the attorney for Mr. Frank, as it is every word true."

Solicitor Makes a Denial.

Solicitor General Dorsey, when informed of George Epp's affidavit characterized the statements as absolutely untrue, so far as they related to him. Mr. Dorsey said he did send for Epps and that he went over the testimony the boy had given at the Coroner's inquest just as he had with the other witnesses.

"It was nec[illegible] myself just what evidence these witnesses had in their possession," said the Solicitor. "Epps rattled through his testimony just as he did at the inquest and not one time did he intimate that any portion of it was not true. This is the first time I have heard that he said any portion of his testimony was false. Further than this I do not care to comment upon the matter."

"The story by George Epps in his affidavit denying his original testimony is on the face of it a pack of lies," said Chief of Detectives Langford. "Why, Jim Conley had not even been arrested when Epps gave his original statement, and yet Epps says in his affidavit that 'Detective Black told me he wished my testimony to support Jim Conley's evidence.'"

CONFIDENT TRUTH WILL OUT.

An Interview with Frank in Prison and a Description of His Life There.

The Atlanta Georgian of Thursday last printed an interesting interview with Leo M. Frank in which Frank earnestly yet cheerfully discussed his case in the fullest detail, and challenged the fairness of the prosecution in conducting it. Frank, the Georgian's reporter says, spoke without rancor or malice, yet made it clear that he is absolutely confident that in the end his innocence will be established.

"I want to say just one word for myself," the reporter quotes him as saying in conclusion, "and I want to say it with all modesty.

"I have played the man in this case from start to finish. I have met every issue. I have faced my prosecutors at every turn—and they were many and devious. Gentlemen, I have acted the man. I have played fair, with all the cards on the table. I shall play the game out to the end—and I shall expect the reward of a man, of an innocent man, when the last trick is played."

The Georgian's reporter tells how Frank passes his time while waiting in the Fulton County Jail for a resentence or for the news that his lawyers have succeeded in obtaining a new trial for him. The cell in which he is confined is of steel, and about six feet wide by eight feet long. Between the barred front of the cell and the steel cell-house wall runs a corridor three feet wide. At one end is a heavy steel door leading to the balcony.

"I haven't been outside that door since I was convicted," said Frank, "yet I have gained fifteen pounds, and I feel fine. I sleep ten hours every night, and what exercise I get I take by using Indian clubs and walking up and down in this little place. I sleep like a top, and the only reason I don't sleep longer than I do is that I do not permit myself to do so.

"Although I am in solitary confinement, I find plenty to do to pass the time away. A few of my personal friends call to see me, and my attorneys come to consult with me once in a while. I read a good deal of light fiction, and all the Atlanta and practically all the Southern papers.

"I keep a card index filing system of every line that is printed about myself or the Phagan case, and I find this an interesting occupation."

Frank, the reporter writes, has at his tongue's end the salient points of all the matter that has been printed about him, and he frequently interlarded his conversation with quotations from editorials, feature stories, and reviews of his case that had been printed. When his memory failed as to the exact wording of a sentence, he turned to his file and read the quotation.

His cell is comfortably lighted. His bed is a low, narrow cot, covered by a worn, home-made quilt, and in the cell are also a table and two chairs. He wears a neat, dark business suit, black patent leather shoes, and a dark four-in-hand tie. He wears gold-rimmed glasses. His actions seem those of a man in perfect health. His voice is even, clear and pleasant and decisive. His gaze is always directed steadily at the person conversing with him, and he uses many gestures. He smokes cigars much of the time, and frequently gesticulates with the one he is smoking at the time. In the course of his interview, Frank asked for the name of every person present, and the name of the paper he represented. These Frank jotted down, saying that he kept a complete record of all visits.

"It is my business to know details," he explained.

REPLIES TO ATTORNEY ROSSER

Georgia Chamber of Commerce Wires Denial of Prejudice.

By Telegraph to the Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 4.—We understand interview given your paper March 4 by Attorney Luther Z. Rosser of Atlanta, chief counsel for Leo M. Frank, stated:

> You see, the Jewish population of Atlanta is not large. Frank came to Atlanta a stranger and engaged in a new enterprise. He knew few people who were not of his own religion, being closely occupied with his business, and this fact rather counted against him at the time. There was the prejudice to be found in the South, of the employe class against the employer, and some local prejudice against a stranger.

Without expressing any opinion on the merits of the Frank case, this organization can only account for Attorney Rosser's misstatements concerning:

(1) The alleged anti-Jewish feeling in Georgia, and

(2) That there is any prejudice to be found in this State of the employes' class against the employer, and

(3) That there is any local prejudice against a stranger, on account of his zeal for his client.

Atlantas Jewish population has gained over 100 per cent. during the last ten years, and they number among our most respected and best citizens.

Atlanta and the whole State of Georgia not only have no prejudice against a stranger, but we cordially invite manufacturers and investors, farmers, and the better clas of immigrants to make their homes and engage in business among us. The statement of Attorney Rosser concerning "some local prejudice against a stranged" is doubly absurd when it is known that the heads of our public service corporation, many of of the banks and largest business houses and manufacturing concerns come to Atlanta from New England, the north and the middle west.

In the name of fairness to Atlanta, and the entire State of Georgia, this State wide organization requests your publication of this telegram in your issue of Thursday morning.

CHARITIES.

To the Jews of New York:

Our story is a pathetic one. It concerns the Jewish poor and the efforts made by the United Hebrew Charities to relieve their wants. These wants have increased this Winter, whereas the society's income has decreased. We need $30,000 additional to prevent unusual suffering.

Room in General Sessions Transformed for Trial of Producers of White Slave Play.

MRS. BELMONT TO TESTIFY

Defense Has Called Her and Others Interested in Sociology to Show Films Are Not Objectionable.

For the first time in the history of criminal proceedure a moving picture exhibition was made part of a criminal trial last night. In a courtroom in General Sessions, before Judge Edward Swann and a jury, the film known as "The Inside of the White Slave Traffic" was presented as evidence in the case of Samuel London, its producer, and Hary C. Bohn, manager of the theatre where it was produced, who were charged with giving an immoral exhibition.

In the four hours which elapsed between the drawing of a jury yesterday afternoon and the opening of the case last evening, Part 4 of General Sessions had been made over into a moving picture theatre. Persons who went there at 8:30 o'clock last night—and only persons who were connected with the trial wer eadmitted—found the arrangement of the room completely reversed. All the seats had their backs turned toward the Judge's bench and faced a white screen in the rear of the courtroom.

To the right of the bench there was a small booth, inside of which the moving picture machine was set up. The wiring had been done under the direction of the Department of Water, Gas and Electricity, to whom Judge Swann applied yesterday for a license to give the exhibition.

The film was introduced as evidence by Assistant District Attorney William Hayward, who, in his opening argument, explained the captions of the film. The lights were turned out then and the picture was thrown on the screen. There were five parts to the film, and its presentation took about an hour and a half. It was run off without a hitch, except when Parts 2 and 3 were mixed, and then Judge Swann was quick to see that there was a blunder and stopped the exhibition until the films were changed. On the whole it was a quiet crowd, but once or twice a few persons upset the decorum of the court by laughing or talking, and Court Capt. Sullivan called them to order.

By agreement between Mr. Hayward and John B. Stanchfield, who with Mrs Inez Milholland Boissevain, Samuel S. Koenig, and Frank Aranow of Mr. Koenig's office were the counsel for the defense, the counsel refrained from comment or objections during the exhibition. When it was finished no further evidence was submitted, and court was adjourned until 10:30 o'clock. Mrs. Boissevain, who sat almost in front of the booth and whose big black and red tam-o'-shanter came dangerously near to eclipsing the film, took an ctive part in the proceedings. Mr. Boissevain sat beside her.

London and Bohn were indicted on Jan. 19 after the Grand Jury had attended a special presentation of the film at the Park Theatre.

Their defense is that the exhibition is an instructive one, and that it has the indorsement of sociological workers.

The records you refer to continually

The proper place for general correspondence is in the general files.

The proper place for records that you are using daily—or hourly—is at your elbow; in "demi-unit" cabinets—not higgledy-piggledy on your desk.

"Demi-units" are half-size cabinets for filing statistics, cards, orders, etc. They are made in different shapes, sizes and depths.

For a small business and for department heads, "Demi-units" are ideal, because they make possible a great variety of filing capacity in a small space.

Look at the illustration. It gives you a good idea of the appearance of a stack of "Demi-units." There are drawers for quotations, blank forms, orders, index cards, vouchers or checks and folded documents. Other combinations may suit your requirements better. We can furnish them.

May we send you our catalog, "Demi-horizontal unit cabinets"?

CARRANZA INQUIRY WILL NOT STOP OURS

Bryan States That Anglo-American Benton Commission Will Continue to Act.

FRIENDS OF DIAZ SEEK AID

Emissaries of the General Get Cold Comfort from Foreign Relations Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Secretary Bryan told inquirers to-day that there had been no change in the situation growing out of the killing of William S. Benton.

George C. Carothers, American Consular Agent at Torreon, is on his way to Nogales, Mexico, to see Carranza, whom he knows well, and until he reports the result of his mission to persuade Carranza to withdraw the obstacles he has placed in the way of examination of Benton's body by the British-American Commission, no progress in the investigation of Benton's death can be made.

The State Department has been notified that Carranza has appointed a commission of his own to examine Benton's body. This Government will continue to insist that the body shall be examined by the joint commission, according to what was said at the State Department.

The department to-day received the third dispatch from Gov. Colquitt of Texas in regard to the Vergara case. He asked this time which Governor of the adjoining State of Nuevo Leon he should ask to surrender four men whom he named as the murderers of Clemente Vergara, who was decoyed from his home on the American side of the Rio Grande last week, and is supposed to have been killed by Mexican Federal soldiers.

There are two Governors of Nuevo Leon, one a Federal and one a Constitutionalist. The alleged crime was committed on an island in the Rio Grande. The Mexicans are said to have hanged Vergara, thinking they were in Mexico, but really being still in Texas.

The answer sent to Gov. Colquitt was that he should apply to the Governor who was in power at the time the request was made. This answer may appear to him to be a grim joke, as Nuevo Leon is still embarrassed by an excess of Governors.

Partly Upholds Gov. Colquitt.

The State Department, however, to-day gave full sanction to the view held by Gov. Colquitt that, under the existing extradition treaty between the United States and Mexico, the Governor of any of the States in either country bordering on the international boundary has the power to request or to grant requisition for criminals reciprocally with the Governor of an adjoining State in the other country.

It is very clear that if Vergara was murdered by Mexicans from Nuevo Leon, on the soil of the State of Texas, Gov. Colquitt is within his rights in demanding the fugitive criminals.

The long communication from Gov. Colquitt printed in to-day's TIMES asking what the United States was going to do in the present juncture has not yet been digested by the department officials. Mr. Bryan said to-day that there had not been time enough thus far to consider it, and that with the exception of the advice as to which Governor to make the application for extradition, no answer had been made to Gov. Colquitt's various communications.

Committee Cool to Diaz Emissaries.

A novel solution of the Mexican riddle was suggested to the Committee on Foreign Relations this morning when agents of Gen. Felix Diaz, who is now in New York as a fugitive from Mexico, attempted to sound the committee as to the possible attitude of the Washington Government toward Gen. Diaz should he manage to worm himself into power. The suggestion made little impression upon the committee, as Gen. Diaz, since his flight from Vera Cruz, has been regarded as a negligible factor without any following, either personal or political, in Mexico.

Gen. Diaz's emissaries were Pedro del Villar and Cecilio Ocon. They told the committee their opinion of Mexican affairs, and it was very bad indeed. They realized that the picture they drew flattered neither of the contending parties in Mexico, and asked the committee to regard their names as confidential, so that they might return to Mexico without imperilling their lives. But their names were already common property, and it is supposed that they will now remain on this side of the border.

Del Villar and Ocon were equally critical of the leaders of the rival factions in Mexico. Gen. Huerta, they said, was an assassin who ruled a part of Mexico, through the power of fear. Gen. Villa and his Constitutional followers they denounced as bandits and murderers, who held another part of Mexico in the same way, but with a ruder technique. Nothing was to be hoped from either, they said, and that was their reason for proposing Gen. Diaz as a man with whom the United States could deal satisfactorily, if a turn in affairs should bring him to the top.

How Gen. Diaz's elevation was to be accomplished was not explained in detail, but Senators were allowed to infer that a little encouragement would be enough to launch another revolution aimed against Federals and Constitutionalists alike.

While Senators were little interested in the talk of Gen. Diaz as a possible compromise President of Mexico, it is said on good authority to-night that the Administration has given some thought to his pretensions.

The prevailing opinion is, however, that Gen. Diaz is almost the weakest candidate that could be put forward. In the futile elections that resulted in Gen. Huerta's retaining office Gen. Diaz got a mere handful of votes. He ran a bad third.

Hot Senate Debate Expected.

Although Great Britain's reluctance to press the Benton case at this time has made the Mexican situation less acute, there are several aspects of it which it is now practically certain will occasion spirited debate in the Senate in a few days.

It became known to-night that facts and data concerning the number of foreigners killed in Mexico since armed revolution began there were being gathered by the State Department for Senator Shively, ranking member of the Foreign Relations Committee, who is expected to present official records about conditions in the southern republic. It was reported that Senator Fall of New Mexico would open the debate with a speech pointing to conditions in Mexico, past and present, and urging a change of policy.

The committee is taking a most active interest in the Mexican imbroglio and intends to get all the information possible, so that it may be prepared for any situation that may arise, especially if the Administration should determine upon any change of policy.

There is every reason to believe that Great Britain has closed the Benton case for the present, though she has reserved the right to exact reparation in the future. England's withdrawal at this time and Carranza's determination to investigate the Benton killing of his own accord will put the United States, it is believed, in the position of a patient observer of developments, with no present necessity for further inquiry into the Benton episode.

One of the reasons why there is little tendency to press the inquiry on the part of the United States or Great Britain is the fact that Benton's body must have already decomposed considerably, and evidence of a conclusive character, as yet undisclosed, has been in the hands of officials for several days.

BENTON BOARD GIVES UP.

Anglo-American Commissioners Expect No Inquiry.

Special to The New York Times.

EL PASO, March 4.—There will be no examination of the body of William S. Benton; at least, there will be no examination made of his body that will reveal anything as to the nature of his death or the method of his killing. The commission composed of two Englishmen and two Americans considers itself dissolved, and no further effort will be made at this time to inspect the body at Chihuahua.

One of the commission openly admitted to-day that he doubted very seriously that Benton's body was at Chihuahua. He believed, he said, that it had been burned in Juarez on Feb. 17, the night Benton was killed.

British Consul Perceval called on Mrs. Benton yesterday and considered with her the possibility of her going to the Los Remedios Ranch, which was owned by her husband.

REPORT TO CARRANZA ONLY.

This Is the Order Given to the Constitutionalist Commission.

NOGALES, Sonora, March 4.—All possible haste in reporting on the death of William S. Benton will be required of the Carranza commission, now at El Paso.

This was announced from Gen. Carranza's headquarters here to-day when assurances were given that the committeemen appointed last night had instructions to report confidentially to Gen. Carranza the exact result of their findings, regardless of political or personal feeling.

It was said that written instructions had been sent the members of the investigating commission, who were instructed by telegraph to-day of their appointment. It was also said that Gen. Carranza would leave at once on a trip which would put him at least ten days out of communication while on his march from Naco, Sonora, to Casas Grandes, Chihuahua.

Gen. Carranza also ordered that the Bauch case be investigated by the Benton commission. This action was taken after receipt of a report from Gen. Villa regarding the disappearance of Gustav Bauch, an American.

Gen. Villa's report stated that Bauch was put in jail at Chihuahua City on suspicion of being an agent of an unfriendly interest. The General added that the American was released, and that since then the State authorities had been unable to locate him. He promised continued efforts to obtain more information about his disappearance.

The hope was expressed here that Gen. Carranza's order for the Benton commission to investigate the Bauch case would be ample assurance to the Washington Government of the desire of the Mexican insurgents to aid in the protection of foreigners in Mexico.

It was explained that at the time the Benton commission had been appointed nothing had been heard from Gen. Villa regarding the Bauch case, which would warrant a special investigation, although Villa had been previously instructed to inquire and report upon the American's disappearance.

An order which became rigidly effective to-day resulted in the exclusion from Constitutionalist territory of all persons who had come from territory held by the Federals. This hindered several American business men who had business on the Mexican side of the line at this point. It was explained that the order had been made necessary by the recent transmission of military information.

DEMANDS VERGARA SLAYERS.

Colquitt Applies to Mexican Governor—Has "Just Begun to Fight."

DALLAS, Texas, March 4.—Gov. O. B. Colquitt, who was here to-day, announced that he had wired the Mexican Federal authorities in Nuevo Leon State, Mexico, requesting the extradition of Apolonio Rodriguez and the five Mexicans charged jointly with him with the kidnapping of Clemente Vergara, an American citizen, who was afterward killed. The requisition is based on a charge of horse theft.

In discussing his action, Gov. Colquitt said:

"I have just begun my fight to uphold the rights of the citizens of Texas. To say I am going the limit to protect the Americans in Texas from any harm from foreign invasion but mildly expresses it."

LAREDO, Texas, March 4.—No telegraphic communication was available here to-day with Gov. Salone Botello of Nuevo Leon, who is supposed to be at Monterey, and to whom Gov. Colquitt's requisition for the extradition of persons charged with crimes in Texas would naturally go. Either the telegraph line to Monterey was not working, or the Federals were permitting nothing to pass over it publicly.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The State of Nuevo Leon is practically controlled by the Mexican Federals, although there are scattered bands of rebels there. Gov. Colquitt's requisition will have to go to the Huerta Governor at Monterey.

Pope Shocked by Benton Killing.

ROME, March 4.—Pope Pius to-day received in audience Mgr. Tomasso Beggiani, Apostolic Delegate to Mexico. His Holiness discussed at length the situation in Mexico and evinced horror at the killing of William S. Benton at Juarez. He also inquired about the delay in permitting the United States Government to investigate Benton's death.

BRITISH IN MEXICO ANGRY OVER BENTON

Accuse Our Consuls of Instigating Carranza's Policy of Delay.

TO AVOID PUNISHING VILLA

Hot-Heads Discuss Anti-Wilson Resolution, but Are Governed by Cooler Counsels.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, March 4.—The rumor that the change in the attitude of Carranza and Villa in regard to the Benton investigation was directly traceable to American officials along the border was extensively circulated among the members of the British colony to-day and aroused great indignation.

Marked resentment was shown against President Wilson, the prominent members of the colony having difficulty in preventing the abusive language used in the British Club from becoming public. They also had hard work to keep their hot-headed compatriots from taking the matter up in the form of a resolution directed against Washington.

According to the report received here, the Washington Government was not desirous of investigating the Benton case, since it felt sure it would be forced to find Villa guilty of the murder of a British subject and would be forced to take action to obtain reparation, which might involve sending an armed force against the Constitutionalists, for it was pointed out that it would be manifestly impossible for Carranza to remove Villa from his command to punish any offense of his, however serious.

It is even asserted here that the American Consuls along the border advised Carranza to remove the matter from Villa's hands, and also suggested that Villa transfer the body of Benton from Juarez to Chihuahua. It is not charged that the Washington Government instigated this action, but rather that the Consuls, being friendly to the rebels and knowing that President Wilson did not wish to be forced to take action, adopted this course without instructions.

Efforts were being made here to-day to start a general propaganda throughout Great Britain and the British colonies to prevent the Benton case from "passing into oblivion after a few diplomatic exchanges."

It is proposed to take the matter up directly with Scotchmen holding high official positions, such as Premier Borden of Canada and Premier McBride of British Columbia. It is also the plan to start a press campaign in the States adjoining the Northern Mexican border. However, Secretary Hohler, who is in charge of the British Legation, is not expected to allow such action to be taken if he can prevent it.

Americans here also feel considerable uneasiness, since they consider that the failure of the Washington Government to obtain reparation for any one of the numerous outrages recently committed upon Americans indicates that they may expect no protection from their home Government.

The recent statements of Sir Edward Grey and President Wilson have added to these apprehensions and increased the fear of the foreigners here that they may be left to shift for themselves, with no protection other than that which they have organized to secure. The shadowy prospect of monetary reparation for their heirs does not arouse enthusiasm, since the recent exchange of communications between President Wilson and Gen. Carranza is held to have established a state of war here, in which neither side will be required to indemnify foreigners if injured or killed.

The diplomats are very reticent regarding recent developments, although they show that they believe Washington must soon alter its attitude. They also say that, however willing foreign Governments are to indorse the Washington policy of leaving the protection of their nationals to the United States, public sentiment in their respective countries will not allow this, should such outrages as the killing of Benton and other foreigners continue.

Several French and Spanish citizens have disappeared and are reported to have been killed in various parts of the country. Their diplomatic representatives are said to have made representations to Washington without obtaining either satisfaction or the recognition of their requests.

Prominent Mexican officials also say that they do not believe the Washington Government will long be able to postpone the issue without giving rise to serious complications. They say their advices indicate that the rebels alonf the border, emboldened by their practical exemption from punishment, are stealing American cattle, changing the brands on this side of the border, and then selling the stock to American dealers.

HUERTA PLANS BLOCKHOUSES.

Will Build 4,000 to Protect Railroads from Rebels.

MEXICO CITY, March 4.—Talking for the first time to-day to a few newly arrived newspaper correspondents, President Huerta asserted that he had an army of 250,000 men, with which he was determined to fight the rebels until they were subjugated or exterminated. He added that he was about ready to begin the construction along the railroads of 4,000 block-houses, about a mile and a half apart, in each of which would be placed ten men. Orders had already been given for barbed wire, he said, and this would be strung along the right of way of the railroad lines. The President expressed confidence that this scheme of protection would prove effective against the rebels.

A virtually prohibitive export tax has been placed on cattle and hogs. This is not a measure by which it is expected to bring revenue to the Government, but one calculated to conserve the country's food supply. The territory from which the capital and other cities are receiving their beef has been greatly restricted by the revolution, and the problem of maintaining a meat supply promises to become serious should the rebels continue closing in on the capital.

Shippers, attracted by better markets abroad, recently began exporting to such an extent as to create apprehension.

BLOODLESS NAVAL BATTLE.

Rebel Gunboat in Long Distance Engagement with Federal Ships.

NOGALES, Sonora, March 4.—The first naval engagement of the present Mexican revolution ended to-day at Topolobampo, after a half hour of ineffective firing between the rebel warship Tampico and the Federal gunboats Morelos and Guerrero, which steamed down from Guaymas for the attack.

The Tampico remained at Topolobampo after its crew had mutinied and turned the little vessel over to the Carranza forces. The Morelos and Guerrero arrived off Topolobampo and to-day opened fire at long range. The Tampico remained inside the harbor, while the Federal ships took positions out in the Gulf of California.

The Tampico's guns seemed to have a longer range than those of the Federal gunboats, and the latter drew away. No damage was done on either side.

DON'T KNOW THEM, SAYS DIAZ.

General Denies Acquaintance with Washington Spokesmen.

When seen late last night at the home of a Mexican friend, at 571 West 139th Street, Gen. Felix Diaz said that he was not acquainted with Vilar or Ocon, and if they had told the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations that they represented him, it was without any foundation.

Asked if it was true that he intended to head a revolution in Mexico, Gen. Diaz laughed and replied:

"That all depends upon future events, but at present it is extremely improbable."

circulation that Dr. Moore was very much dissatisfied with the way things were going in the State Department. The rumor that he was to resign was revived several times, and on each occasion he denied it.

Very recently, when the rumor came to the fore again, the fact that last September Dr. Moore had leased a house here for a year was mentioned as a reason why he was likely to remain in the Government service.

Those who sought for the proximate reason of Dr. Moore's resignation at this critical period in the foreign relations of the Government, when his great knowledge and proved judgment were regarded as essential to a successful administration of American diplomacy, learned that among those in a position to be well informed the opinion prevailed that the most potent cause for dissatisfaction on Dr. Moore's part was the displacement of experienced officers of the State Department to make way for persons of no experience in diplomatic affairs. Whether Dr. Moore was dissatisfied also over the almost complete change in the personnel of American representation in foreign countries was not suggested as related in any way to his decision to retire. It was also said that Dr. Moore, in the opinion of men who had reason to believe that they were acquainted with the circumstances in the case, had cause for dissatisfaction with the way in which the Mexican situation had been handled.

A sentence in Dr. Moore's informal letter to President Wilson is construed as having an intimate bearing on the belief that he was dissatisfied over the manner in which the departmental personnel had been changed.

"Ample opportunity having thus been afforded for the effective organization of the department's force," said Mr. Moore, "the duty which I took upon myself has been fully performed."

It has been a subject of remark among members of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations that, with the exception of Alvey A. Adee, the veteran Second Assistant Secretary of State, now 71 years of age, and Wilbur J. Carr, Director of the Consular Service, no official of long service and experience in responsible posts upon whom Mr. Moore could rely for counsel and assistance remained in the department. And Mr. Carr, it was mentioned, was not engaged in Mr. Moore's particular field of diplomacy. Thus, it was asserted, Dr. Moore stood practically alone in the determination of delicate questions requiring expert knowledge of diplomatic history and precedent, and through being unable to depend on new and untried assistants felt himself seriously hampered in his conduct of diplomatic negotiations.

Dr. Moore is credited with having found it impossible to agree with the present policy of the department in handling the serious international incident growing out of the killing of William S. Benton. It is not asserted, however, that dissatisfaction in this particular was an acute contributing cause of his resignation.

From the crop of rumors one stands out prominently, to the effect that Dr. Moore has been discouraged over having been kept in ignorance of important things done in the department's name and of information that has reached the department. The story goes that he was sometimes embarrassed through lack of knowledge in discussing important pending diplomatic questions with representatives of foreign Governments.

Not Informed of Lind's Appointment.

It is known that Dr. Moore had no information concerning the selection of John Lind as President Wilson's special confidential agent in Mexico until after the press announcement of Mr. Lind's appointment and departure had been made. That he did not like the policy of sending Mr. Lind to Mexico or the employment of Dr. William Bayard Hale and Dr. W. H. Tupper as unofficial observers of Mexican affairs is included in the reasons assigned in the talk here for Dr. Moore's resignation.

Dr. Moore was at the White House early this morning and had a conference with President Wilson lasting half an hour. Soon afterward the news of his resignation leaked out. It is supposed that the conference was devoted by President Wilson to a final effort to induce Dr. Moore to change his mind. The early morning visit is construed by some people, even in the face of the date of his resignation, as indicating that the retirement of the Counsellor was prompted by his sudden decision not to remain longer in the State Department.

Speculation as to the successor of Dr. Moore is busy with the names of Hannis Taylor of Alabama, Minister to Spain, under President Cleveland; Henry White, former Ambassador to Italy, and John Lind, President Wilson's special representative in Mexico.

HAD ONLY A YEAR'S LEAVE.

Columbia Associates of Moore Hope for His Early Return.

Although Dr. John Bassett Moore is reported to have stated that he will remain in Washington, resuming active practice, the authorities of Columbia confidently expect to be able to induce him to return to the university next September, when the academic year will begin. But for Dr. Moore's statement that he contemplated staying in Washington for the present, his friends at Columbia would not have been surprised to see him return to the university at once, owing to the fact, as pointed out there yesterday, that when he applied for leave last year to take up his duties in the State Department he asked for only one year, dating from March 1, 1913.

The students and authorities at Columbia are eager for Dr. Moore's return, for his absence from the Law Faculty staff has left a big gap. This has been accentuated by the resignation of Dr. Frank Goodnow, to become President of Johns Hopkins University. Dr. Goodnow was professor in constitutional law, and it is possible that Dr. Moore may fill Dr. Goodnow's place, as well as taking care of the courses in international law.

It is thought at Columbia that Dr. Moore while at Washington will devote most of his time to completing a codification of the records and archives of the Carnegie Peace Foundation and will remain until that work, begun while he was in the State Department, is completed.

Dr. Moore has been a member of the Faculty of Columbia since 1891, when he was appointed professor of international law. In 1903 he was appointed to the Hamilton Fish chair in international law, and has occupied it continuously since then, although he has twice obtained leave of absence to serve the Government.

Close friends of Dr. Moore, who were associated with him in the law Faculty of Columbia University, were unwilling to make any speculation yesterday as to the probable cause of his resignation. One of them pointed out that his friends might do him a great deal of harm by suggesting motives for his resignation which he had not seen fit to disclose.

Among them, however, it was generally understood that Dr. Moore had accepted the Washington post with great reluctance. It was further pointed out by his confrères at Columbia that he was primarily a scholar, that he had accepted the Government post with the sense of fulfilling a high public duty, and that it was probably his intention to resign it when he had accomplished his mission. His associates believe that Dr. Moore's "heart is in his scholarly work," as one of them puts it.

NOMINATES WILLIAM PHILLIPS.

President Names Boston Man as Third Assistant to Bryan.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—William Phillips of Boston was nominated to-day by President Wilson to be Third Assistant Secretary of State.

Mr. Phillips was born in Beverly, Mass., in 1878. He is a graduate of Harvard Law School and Harvard University. He served as private secretary to Ambassador Choate in Great Britain, was Second Secretary of the American Legation at Peking from 1905 to 1907, Chief of Division of Far Eastern Affairs in 1908, Third Assistant Secretary of State in 1908 and 1909, Secretary of the American Embassy at London from 1909 to 1912, and is Secretary of the Corporation of Harvard University at present. He is a brother-in-law of Representative Peters of Massachusetts.

Mr. Phillips is wealthy, and it is said that when he was employed in the State Department he turned over his salary to co-workers. He is an intimate friend of Theodore Roosevelt and in the last few months has been doing confidential work for President Wilson in diplomatic affairs.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 4.—William Phillips was appointed Secretary of the United States Embassy in London in September, 1909. His previous service had been as private secretary to Joseph H. Choate when he was Ambassador to England. In February, 1910, he married Miss Caroline Astor Drayton of New York, only daughter of J. Coleman Drayton.

A year ago Mr. Phillips was appointed regent of Harvard University after that office had been dispensed with for two years. He has assisted the dean in regulating student social life.

CARDEN NOW FAVORS A WAITING POLICY

Thinks Huerta Should Have Been Recognized—Doesn't See How We can Intervene.

LAUDS DICTATOR'S ABILITY

Is Dubious About Getting Satisfaction from the Mexican Rebels in the Benton Case.

Sir Lionel Carden, British Minister to Mexico, sailed yesterday for London on the White Star liner Olympic to make an oral report to Sir Edward Grey, the Foreign Minister. He expects to return to his post in three weeks.

In a talk with reporters the diplomat implied that there was so much to tell about affairs in Mexico that he thought it was better to report in person rather than in writing.

Sir Lionel declined to discuss his conference on the Mexican situation in Washington with Secretary Bryan, and to all questions about Mexican affairs he returned guarded replies.

"The situation," he said, "is very bad. Its seriousness consists not so much in the fighting between the Constitutionalists and the Federals troops as in the operations of the bandits, who are taking advantage of the extraordinary situation to loot and kill on every hand."

He said he thought it was a pity that the United States had not recognized Huerta in the beginning, because it was questionable now how its policy would work out.

The Minister appeared to be friendly to Huerta, whom he described as being the only leader asking for recognition by the United States Government who had the ability to handle the situation. While he might not be the right man for President, Sir Lionel went on to say, Huerta had shown himself able to fight out the situation, and there could be no peace until it was fought out.

"Huerta has in every case," Sir Lionel continued, "given protection or made his best attempt to aid foreigners in Mexico, and has acted promptly to avert bloodshed and robbery."

He added that when peace did come, it would take years for Mexico to regain her footing commercially.

"Do you think the United States should intervene?" he was asked.

"So far as I can see, there is nothing for the Administration at Washington to do except sit still and watch."

When asked about the attitude of the British Government regarding the killing of William S. Benton, the Minister replied:

"If a leader has 8,000 followers to testify that a man was killed in a certain way, what can you do in the matter? You may have a different opinion, but you will have to take the one that is offered to you in the case and await the result of the investigation that is being made by the United States."

Sir Lionel Carden took exception to reports published in New York about his alleged criticism of the Administration at Washington, and denied that he had ever made any such statements.

"My meaning was misconstrued," he said. "I should not care to criticise the policy of a friendly Government."

On his return to Mexico City, Sir Lionel expects to remain there until the end of the year, and then be transferred to Brazil.

The members of the staff of the British Consulate were at the pier to see him off.

MONROEISM "PARALYZED."

Pall Mall Gazette Says Civilization Is Flouted in Benton Case.

LONDON, March 4.—Commenting on the Mexican situation to-day, The Pall Mall Gazette says:

"The temperate and restrained language in which Sir Edward Grey referred to the Mexican murder will have the approval of all Englishmen. Its moderation, however, will not disguise the depth of their feeling."

The matter is dealt with in a long editorial article in the same newspaper which continues: "Patience makes every concession to Sir Edward Grey's difficulties; but, if there is any danger of that patience being mistaken for indifference, it would introduce an element of grave disadvantage into international politics."

In conclusion The Pall Mall Gazette says: "Every reason of moral and international right requires of the United States that the punishment of Benton's murderers shall be undertaken without avoidable delay. At the present moment civilization stands flouted and Great Britain outraged. The application of the Monroe Doctrine is paralyzed and mocked."

The Globe says: "Sir Edward Grey said much to emphasize the gravity of recent events and very little to relieve the disquietude which these events have inevitably provoked. The public opinion of this country, however sympathetic to the United States, will not make considerations for the embarrassments of President Wilson an adequate excuse for acquiescing in such deeds as those of which Pancho Villa, with the approval of Venustiano Carranza, has been guilty.

"If President Wilson cannot be held responsible for the behavior of the Mexican insurrectionists, his policy is directly responsible for the state of things which has led to intolerable excesses. What the United States has done is not merely to allow civil war to persist, but to foment it by allowing arms and ammunition to be supplied to the belligerents. The United States is bound to exert that predominant and exclusive influence which it claims for putting an end to things which have become a danger not merely to the United States itself, but to the civilized world."

The Westminster Gazette and The Evening Standard agree with Sir Edward Grey that the only possible policy is to await and secure reparation when circumstances permit it.

VERA CRUZ EDITORS IN JAIL.

Imprisoned for Circulating Anti-American Canards.

VERA CRUZ, March 4.—The Government authorities to-day suppressed a new local paper, El Monitor, and arrested the entire staff of six editors, who were consigned to the fortress of San Juan de Ulua.

They were charged with circulating false news, calculated to excite popular animosity against the United States.

The President's yacht, the Mayflower, arrived off Vera Cruz to-night. Besides the wife and two daughters of Rear Admiral Fletcher, Capt. H. M. P. Huse of the Naval War College, Newport, who will become Admiral Fletcher's chief of staff, is on board.

On account of the heavy norther blowing, the passengers on the Mayflower were unable to land to-night.

HENNESSY SAILS TO REST.

Tammany Won't Survive Two Elections, His Parting Word.

John A. Hennessy sailed yesterday on the Olympic for a rest after his political labors at Albany and in this city. He said he had intended to sail for Europe a month ago but had delayed his departure to aid the State graft investigation.

"I worked until 4 o'clock this morning," Mr. Hennessy continued, "completing my information. They have everything I can give them now, and it is up to them to show the results which, in my opinion, should have been produced long ago.

"While I have taken no active interest in the anti-Tammany movement, I am not adverse to saying that Tammany must go. Not even the name Tammany can remain if the Democratic Party of the State expects to stay in business. Tammany may not be eradicated as an organization this Fall, but I believe it will be in the next election following."

Just before the Olympic sailed papers were served on Mr. Hennessy by Joseph A. Miller, in a suit of Henry A. Rubino of 32 Nassau Street, claiming $50,000 for slander. Rubino charges that Hennessy's remarks at a hearing on Feb. 26 before Special Commissioner James W. Osborne were detrimental to his reputation and his law practice.

The Olympic carried 375 first, 150 second, and 900 third class passengers and 2,800 sacks of mail. She was scheduled to sail at 10 o'clock, but was delayed half an hour by bad traffic conditions in Fourteenth Street. The Street Cleaning Department had made no attempt to clean up the roadway in front of the piers, and the traffic was so heavy that passengers had to get out and walk through the slush with their baggage.

EX-INSPECTORS SOON FREE.

Will Be Released on Monday—Sweeney Charges Dropped.

If they pay the fines of $500 each imposed by Justice Seabury in addition to sentences of a year's imprisonment in the penitentiary the four former Police Inspectors, Dennis Sweeney, James E. Hussey, James F. Thompson, and John J. Murtha, will be released from Blackwell's Island on Monday morning next. The four men were convicted of conspiring to keep a witness out of the State during the police graft investigation. Each receives two months' commutation of sentence for good behavior.

District Attorney Whitman said yesterday that he would not prosecute Sweeney on twelve indictments for bribery which still are pending against him. An important witness against Sweeney was Police Captain Thomas F. Walsh, who since has died.

The Appellate Division soon will hand down a decision on the appeal from conviction made by the Inspectors.

GRAFT IN PUTS AND CALLS.

Witness Tells of $4,000 Jackpot to Legalize Grain Gambling.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—To support his charge that the Chicago Board of Trade was dominated by a trust of warehouse men, Samuel H. Greeley told the House Rules Committee to-day that a $4,000 "jackpot" fund had been raised among its members last year to push bills in the Illinois Legislature legalizing puts and calls. Greeley said the Chicago board had been forced to "throw open its doors to this $5 and $10 bet game," because the warehouse men had manipulated the future and cash markets by their possession of stored grain to such an extent that legitimate dealing was unprofitable.

Estimating the depreciation in prices resulting from the manipulation of the cash grain quotations Greeley said it had averaged $300,000,000 a year. From 10 to 25 cents had been taken from the legitimate price of every bushel of wheat, corn or oats, he said, during the twenty years the alleged monopoly had been in control.

FIND CLUE TO MISSING GIRL.

Letter Indicates Estelle Harrison Has Gone to Norfolk, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harrison of 965 Gates Avenue, Brooklyn, believe that their thirteen-year-old daughter Estelle, who disappeared on Feb. 25 after leaving home for Public School 129, at Gates and Lewis Avenues, Brooklyn, went either to Philadelphia or Norfolk, Va., to join a young man with whom she had been corresponding, and to start out on the road with him in a touring carnival company.

The girl's parents learned that she had been receiving letters for some time addressed to the home of Grace Hill, a girl friend of 1,620 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, from the young man, who resided in Brooklyn until six months ago, when he left for Philadelphia. It was found that the day after she disappeared a letter for her had arrived, urging her to go to Norfolk, and assuring her that a position paying $12 or $14 a week could be obtained for her in the carnival company.

The police of Philadelphia and Norfolk have been notified.

POLICE KEEP DOWN THE 1 O'CLOCK LID

But Mitchel Says He Did Not Order McKay to Revive Gaynor Rule.

NEW METHODS ARE USED

Patrons Not Driven from Tables, but Proprietors Are to be Held Responsible.

All of the cafés, restaurants, and cabaret resorts along Broadway and cross-streets were closed at 1 o'clock this morning by the police, acting on the instructions of Police Commissioner McKay, despite the statement of Mayor Mitchel that he had not given orders to enforce the early closing rule laid down by the late Mayor Gaynor.

There was no disturbance in enforcing the order last night. The proprietors of most of the places notified their guests to get ready to depart a few minutes before the time for closing, and at no point did the police have to interfere to speed the departing guests. Inspectors Dwyer and Gillen, in whose districts the hundred or more café's are situated, made the rounds and saw to it that the order was generally obeyed. Each had a corps of plain-clothes men in the station houses ready to be sent out to make arrests in the event the order was ignored, but the voluntary action of the restaurant men gave them no work to do.

As was the case yesterday morning, following the issuing of the order by Police Commissioner McKay on Tuesday, the all-night resorts and dancing places were dark and silent this morning, and the "lid" was put on so tight that the restaurant district was "dry" for the first time during the present administration.

It was assumed last night that the Mayor contemplated a more liberal policy than his predecessor with the night restaurants and cabaret places. It was believed that he would eventually permit these places to keep open after 1 A. M. for the service of food and entertainment of patrons and that the theatre crowds and other later diners may have until 2 o'clock for supper.

Mayor Mitchel and Police Commissioner McKay appeared to be in official conflict yesterday over the order issued by the head of the Police Department for the closing of cabaret restaurants at 1 o'clock. While the Commissioner assumed full responsibility for his action, the Mayor made it clear that the order did not have his sanction.

The Mayor said that no suggestion had been sent from City Hall instructing the police to enforce the early closing of restaurants and cafés. The Mayor seemed surprised at the action of the police and intimated that the enforcement of the 1 o'clock rule would not be continued. A misunderstanding of orders, said the Mayor, was undoubtedly the cause of the sudden closing of the resorts yesterday morning. He insisted that he had no intention of carrying out the stringent methods regarding the closing of the places that had been adopted by Mayor Gaynor.

"I will have something to say about the matter in a few days," the Mayor added. "My secretary, Arthur Woods, has a communication on it, and I expect to take the matter up very soon. No order came from this office, but we had asked Commissioner McKay to look into this matter some days ago, and some one, probably, misunderstood the orders. I have no idea of carrying out the stringent measures of the latter end of the former administration. The practice will not be continued. That will be taken care of in a day or two."

"Have you communicated with Commissioner McKay regarding the matter?"

"Not yet," replied the Mayor.

Commissioner McKay said last night that Mayor Gaynor's order to the police to close the places had never been rescinded, and he had issued an order for its enforcement. There was to be no repetition of the tactics the police followed in the former administration, however, when guests were driven from tables and the places closed by force, he said. The proprietors were notified to obey the law, and they would be held personally responsible for disobeying the order.

"We are considering a plan for placing this matter on a working basis," said Commissioner McKay. "I am not prepared to say what that will be at the present time. I expect to have a conference with the restaurant men, whereby some plan may be arrived at that will provide for the convenience of the public and the business interests involved."

The Commissioner would not commit himself regarding the report that it was the intention of the administration to issue all-night licenses to some of the cafés and restaurants.

Commissioner McKay's order was made known to the proprietors of the hundreds of places on Broadway and cross streets when policemen called on them Tuesday night and informed them that they must close promptly at the designated hour. Practically all obeyed the order, and as the result the tango and "trotting" places were silent and the restaurants and cafés dark for the first time in the last four months after 1 A. M. yesterday.

NAPOLEON LETTER, $230.

And His Dispatch Brings $210 at the Latta Sale.

A letter written by Napoleon Bonaparte to his brother, Lucien, announcing his marriage to the Archduchess Marie Louise of Austria, was knocked down for $230 to George D. Smith at the opening session yesterday of Part III. of the William J. Latta sale at the Anderson Company's Galleries. The letter is dated April 3, 1810, and is signed "Nap."

The civil act of themarriage was signed at St. Cloud on April 1, 1810, and the religious ceremony took place the day following in the Imperial Chapel of the Louvre. "I do not doubt," Napoleon writes to his brother, "the interest you will take in an event which should assure the happiness of my imperial house and the prosperity of my people."

Napoleon's confidential plan for the campaign ending with the Battle of Leipsic, a manuscript document of eleven narrow folio pages, dated "Dresed le 13, Anni 1912," went to Mr. Smith for $210. It is evidently one of the dispatches sent by Napoleon to his principal Generals. Such documents as a rule are uncommon outside of the archives of Governments.

A list of prisoners received at the prison called "L'Egalite," in the Conciergone, June 29, 1793, signed by A. Q. Fouquier Tinville, the Revolutionary Tribunal's Public Accuser, a gruesome Scene of the Reign of Terror, was obtained by Dodd & Livingston for $135. A horizontal stroke under his name of each of these seventy-seven persons was made as he emerged from the Conciergerie, which was known as "The Ante-chamber to the Scaffold." A vertical stroke through the underscored name was made at the moment the head of the victim was struck off by the guillotine. Fouquier Tinville himself was quillotined two years after the signing of thi sdocument.

A fine letter written by Lafayette to Charles J. Fox, the British statesman, and dater Aulnay, July 9, 1803, brought $135. It refers to the cession of Lousiana to the United States, and expresses the hope that it will be useful to the cause and to the well-being of the human race." Another of Lafayette's letters, in which he comments on "Les Droits de l'Homme," criticizes Robespierre and says that he himself belongs "to the family of Washington and Fraklin," went to Dodd & Livingston for $70.

E. F. Bonaventure paid $125 for a full holograph letter of Louis XVI. of France, Versailles, Oct. 26, 1748, to Emperor Joseph II., announcing the approaching birth of a child, (Louis XVII.) A leaf from the copy book of Louis XVII., while he was a prisoner in the Temple, was bought by Dodd & Livingston for $60.

Lathrop C. Harper gave $92.50 for a letter written by Sir Hudson Lowe, Napoleon's keeper at St. Helena. It is dated St. Helena, March 1, 1817, and is an answer to Napoleon's charge of ill-treatment. Charles Scribner's Sons obtained for $87.50 a letter of Napoleon's mother, Letitia Bonaparte, dated Paris, Aug. 17, 1803 and signed "Bonaparte Mere."

Mr. Smith gave $79 for a leaf from the exercise book of Napoleon II., King of Rome. C. P. Dugmore obtained for $160 a letter of Napoleon's, dated Antibes June 6, 1794, with the rare early signature, spelled "Buonaparte." A document signed "Napoleon," dated Saint Cloud, June 24, 1804, and addressed to the head of the Reformed Church in Paris, brought $80.

At the evening session numerous portraits of Napoleon were sold. J. Holland gave $130 for a rare mezzotint printed in London in 1801, and A. McManus paid $190 for another mezzotint by Charles H. Hodges, proof impression of the first state. The total for the two sessions was $6,378. The sale will be continued to-day.

ARRESTED IN JAIL SCANDAL.

Ex-Keeper Clifford of Mineola Prison Found in Jersey.

William Clifford of Roosevelt, L. I., one of the ex-keepers of the Nassau County Jail in Mineola, L. I., who was indicted on Tuesday in connection with the alleged orgies held in the jail, was arrested in Newark, N. J., yesterday afternoon. He had gone there to attend the funeral of an uncle-in-law, it was said.

Clifford is the third man of the five indicted to be arrested. Ex-Warden Box and ex-Keeper Miller were arrested at their homes on Monday night. Ex-Keepers John Conrad of Port Washington and Miles S. Rhodes of Freeport, the two others indicted, had not been arrested late last night. Conrad's wife said that he had gone to New Jersey to purchase a farm, and that he would return to face the charges against him.

The Grand Jury sat again yesterday and heard several witnesses. Among them were the proprietors and bartenders of two hotels in Mineola to which it is said the former jail officials and their women prisoners went to drink and dance last November and December.

Why you should care for your Throat Daily

Dr. Wm. Lee Howard,
The well-known medical author, writes:
"I have no hesitation in stating that in Formamint we have a remedy that is invaluable in keeping the mouth and air passages free from germ infection."

Mme. Adelina Patti,
The Queen of Song, writes:
"I have taken Formamint Tablets for some time past and have much pleasure in saying that I find them very beneficial to the throat."

Free Sample Offer
Send a 2-cent stamp to pay postage and we will gladly send you a free trial tube. It is of generous size and will prove to you that Formamint is wonderfully effective as well as pleasant in mouth and throat troubles.

YOU can now give the same daily attention to your throat as to your teeth; and throat care is even more important than tooth care.

The throat is the great breeding place for infectious germs which lodge there when inhaled from the dusty air and often invade the body to cause influenza or other infectious fevers. Sometimes they attack their breeding ground itself and give rise to sore throat or tonsilitis.

Throat specialists and the medical profession generally have hailed with great acclaim

Wulfing's Formamint

on account of its simplicity and efficiency. Formamint is a delicately flavored tablet, which is sucked like candy, setting free a powerful, yet harmless germicide, turning the saliva into an antiseptic liquid which bathes the entire living membrane of mouth and throat.

To overcome sore throat and so forestall worse evils—or to prevent it altogether—you should use Formamint regularly. Its use is a pleasure, and the cleanliness produced is a safeguard and a source of personal satisfaction.

PARLIAMENT ASKS FOR A FAIR EXHIBIT

Passes a Motion Desiring the British Government to Reconsider Its Action.

ALL PARTIES SUPPORT IT

Memorial to be Presented to Premier Asquith To-day—Mr. Balfour One of the Signers.

LONDON, March 4.—By a substantial majority the House of Commons to-night put on record its desire that the Government reconsider its refusal to participate officially in the Panama-Pacific Exposition and to agree to participate in it.

A memorial to this effect, signed by over 350 members of the House of Commons, representing all political parties, will be presented to Premier Asquith to-morrow. The signers include ex-Premier Balfour, Andrew Bonar Law, the Opposition leader, and over half the Unionist members of the House, practically all the Nationalists and Laborites, and over one-third of the Liberals.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—President Wilson and Secretary Bryan were pleased to-night to learn of the possibility of participation by Great Britain in the Panama-Pacific Exposition. No comment was made to-night, but it is known that the Administration has never lost hope that England would participate.

Although officially it has been asserted that the heavy expense of participating in many expositions was the reason for the declination to take part in the San Francisco Exhibition, in many quarters, especially in the American press, it has been suggested that the attitude of the United States over the Panama Canal tolls' controversy was partly responsible for England's refusal. The repeal of the exemption clause is now being urged by President Wilson, with prospects of early action, and the President will deliver a message on the subject to Congress to-morrow.

QUEEN RECEIVES MARCONI.

Margherita Compliments Him—Scientists Give Dinner in His Honor.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

ROME, March 4.—Queen Margherita, owing to her recent attack of influenza, does not go out at night and so did not attend William Marconi's lecture last night. She did not wish Mr. Marconi to leave Rome without seeing him, however, and therefore received him in special audience to-day. She complimented him on the success of his work and expressed the hope that his radio-telephony plans would be realized.

The Italian Electro Technical Association, the members of which include the country's greatest scientists in this field, gave a large banquet in honor of Mr. Marconi to-night. Speeches in his honor were enthusiastically applauded.

A CINEMA MAN'S LUCK.

Gets a Pretty Incident Between the Danish King and an Old Woman.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

COPENHAGEN, March 4.—When King Christian was about to enter a new church to-day here an old unmarried woman rushed forward and, seizing his hand, cried, "I must have a talk with you!"

The police wanted to arrest the woman, but the King smilingly shook hands with her and invited her to come to see him at the palace.

The woman, who wanted to ask the King to build more churches, said, "God bless you," and retired into the crowd. A cinematograph operator got a film of the scene and, with the King's permission, it will be exhibited at picture palaces.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 4.—Capt. von Stahl, chief of workers at the shrapnel tube factory of the Putiloff Armament Works, was brutally murdered to-day by one of the foremen. The murderer then threw himself into the electrical machinery and was crushed to death. There has been a strike at the Putiloff Works for some days, and Capt. von Stahl's attitude toward the strikers is supposed to have been the cause of the tragedy.

DOUBTS ATLANTIC FLIGHT.

Winston Churchill Thinks It Cannot Be Done Yet Awhile.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, March 4.—Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, who was a guest at the Royal Aero Club dinner to-night, referred to the proposed transatlantic flight.

"We are talking as hopefully—more hopefully—of flying the Atlantic as people talked four years ago of flying the Channel," he said. "I am bound to say I think the attempt to fly the Atlantic is, under the present circumstances, premature and an undue element of risk appears to be attached to any such enterprise; but the progress has been enormous, and we cannot doubt that in the near future we shall see heavy aeroplanes and great airships making voyages as a matter of common experience which nowadays we should look upon as a most extraordinary accomplishment."

Mr. Churchill added that the new art and science of flying afforded a fairer field for the emulation of youth than many of the games which now make up international contests.

POISONED BY TUBERCULIN.

Man Dies from Friedmann Preparation—Receptacles Infected.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 4.—The Deutsche Medizinische Wochenschrift, Germany's leading medical journal, will to-morrow publish a vigorous demand for the state control of the sale of Dr. F. F. Friedmann's turtle tuberculin in consequence of the death, which has just occurred, of a man into which it had been injected twenty-four hours previously.

The patient, who was 31 years old, was suffering from tuberculosis of the ribs and adjacent regions. Death ensued amid manifestations of general blood poisoning. The circumstances are vouched for by Prof. Vulpius, a well-known Heidelberg expert. The autopsy showed general blood poisoning.

An eighteen-year-old girl suffering from tuberculosis of the knee-joints also developed blood poisoning, but her life was saved.

It was proved that the cause of the infection in both cases was the pollution of the receptacles containing the turtle serum with poisonous bacteria. Of thirteen receptacles examined only two contained pure cultures of the turtle tubercle bacilli.

The Medizinische Wochenschrift demands in addition to State control that no Friedmann receptacle be henceforth used which has not previously been proved free from disease-breeding bacteria.

VERSE DELIGHTS ROYALTY.

King and Queen Attracted by Sentiment in London Y. M. C. A. Building.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, March 4.—The King and Queen and Prince Albert this evening visited the handsome new building of the Young Men's Christian Association headquarters in London.

Almost the first thing to attract the Queen's notice was the following verse, hung in a prominent place in the Secretary's office:

It is easy enough to be pleasant
When life flows along like a song;
But the man worth while is the man who will smile
When everything goes dead wrong.

"That's a very good sentiment," said the Queen to the King and the Prince.

"Capital!" said the King. "It reminds me of the first rule in the navy—always keep your hair on." And his Majesty was so pleased with the recollection of a rule which has governed his life from an early stage in his career that he repeated it several times for the benefit of others, with a genial smile for his sailor son, Prince Albert.

Royal Couple Now Divorced.

KNIFE SEPARATES 'SIAMESE TWINS'

Operation on French Children, Who Appear to Stand the Ordeal Well.

USE SPECIAL INSTRUMENTS

Work of Dr. Le Filliatre and His Assistants of Great Delicacy—Many Surgeons Present.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

PARIS, March 4.—Suzanne and Madeline, the "Siamese" twin girls, four months old, were operated on successfully this morning by Dr. Gustave Le Faliatre, a Paris surgeon, and separated.

The two girls were joined by the body, face to face, and their hands had to be swathed with cotton to prevent them from scratching one another. When born they were weak, but during the last few weeks they gained so rapidly in weight that Dr. Le Faliatre decided to hasten the operation.

The surgeon had a special set of surgical instruments constructed, half the usual size. Both babies were under cocaine, locally applied, during the operation, but cried bitterly and were only comforted when, at the close, they were handed to the nurse who is bringing them up.

This is said to be the ninth operation of the kind recorded in medical history. Not many have proved successful, but both Suzanne and Madeline are progressing favorably, and it is hoped that no complications will set in.

PARIS, March 4.—Dr. Le Filliatre was aided in to-day's operation by Dr. Risacher, Dr. Victor Delauney, and Dr. Delauney's wife, who also is a doctor. Numerous other surgeons were present.

Madeleine-Suzanne were joined together in the region of the stomach, and it was found that a portion of the intestines of Madeleine was within Suzanne's abdomen. This had to be detached from the wall of the fibrous cartilaginous bridge connecting the two children.

No such operation had taken place in France since Dr. Doyen in 1902 separated the two Hindu children, Radica-Roodica, who died from tuberculosis after the operation.

The twins operated on to-day were born on Nov. 28, 1913. At birth they weighed ten pounds. Both children appeared perfectly healthy, and when not sleeping were extremely lively.

The operation of dividing twins so joined, although always dangerous to life, was considered justified by French scientists in view of the tragic deaths of former pairs. Eng, one of the original Siamese twins, saw his brother Chang die by his side, and himself died of horror in a delirium a few hours afterward. Millie-Christine died in a similar manner, and the last moments of Hélène-Judith, in the seventeenth century, are known to have been marked by awful cries from one of the twins, while the other screamed with horror as the dead body beside her gradually sapped her own life.

RULER OFF FOR ALBANIA.

Prince William and His Wife Leave Saxony for Their Dominion.

WALDENBURG, Saxony, March 4.—Prince William and Princess Sophie of Albania left here to-day for Albania, after paying a farewell visit to the Princess's paternal home.

The Prince was formerly Prince William of Wied, and, after being chosen by the powers as the new ruler of Albania, was invited on Feb. 21 by a delegation of Albanian notables to ascend the throne.

British Officer's Suicide.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, March 4.—Capt. Norman Ernest Playfair, who served with distinction in several British military campaigns, was talking with his wife in the drawing room of his residence to-day, when he exclaimed, "I will put an end to the whole thing!" He snatched up a bayonet and plunged it into his breast, dying almost instantly.

OUR RAILWAYS' NEED.

Arthur von Gwinner Declares Higher Freight Rates Imperative.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 4.—A plain hint that American railway corporations must radically increase their freight rates if they expect to be able to float bond and stock issues in the European money markets is contained in the annual report of the Deutsche Bank.

Referring to the American railway situation, Arthur von Gwinner, the Chief Director of the bank, who co-operated with the late Henry Villard in the reorganization of the Northern Pacific road and who is one of the greatest experts in Europe on American railway conditions, says in a report:

"American railways need higher freight rates. The present rates are the lowest in the world, representing, for instance, only a fraction of the English rates, and this in face of the fact that wages in the United States are fully twice as high as in Europe.

"This question is one of paramount importance for the economic welfare of the whole country, because the earning power of the gigantic net of American railroads is a prerequisite for the possibility of their obtaining urgently needed additional capital, on which, in turn, depend the prosperity of important industries and opportunities for the employment of labor."

It is not generally known that preferential rates are an important feature of the German State railway administration. The so-called "privileged" freight traffic amounts to over 66 per cent. of the total.

GERMAN SUPPORTS DEWEY.

Admiral Brussakis Confirms the American Commander's Statement.

BERLIN, March 4.—Rear Admiral Brussakis, a retired officer of the German Navy, who commanded the German cruiser Cormoran at the time of the Spanish-American War, to-day added his version of one of the Manila Bay incidents to the controversy that has been aroused by the publication of Admiral Dewey's autobiography.

Writing to The Deutsche Tages Zeitung an account of the arrival of the cruiser Cormoran at Manila Bay on May 3, 1898, the Admiral says that the McCullough, an American vessel, fired a blank shot in order to attract the attention of the cruiser. The Cormoran halted, and later an American officer came on board and told her commander that a blockade of Manila had been instituted by the American fleet.

Admiral Brussakis considered that the firing of the blank shot was a proper signal and the only one under the circumstances.

This statement confirms Admiral Dewey's version of the incident and contradicts the assertion made by Vice Admiral von Diedrichs that word of the blockade had not been communicated to the Germans.

Count von Reventlow, the well-known naval expert, confusing the Cormoran episode with the one which happened six weeks later and was narrated by Admiral Dewey, accuses the American Admiral of drawing upon his imagination for his story.

ECUADOR REVOLT GROWS.

But Concha, the Rebel Commander, Is Hemmed In at Esmeraldas.

PANAMA, March 4.—The Federal forces, under the personal direction of President Plaza, have renewed their attack on Esmeraldas, Ecuador, according to advices direct from Esmeraldas received here to-day. President Plaza arrived before Esmeraldas, which is held by the rebels, several days ago, and since that time has received several hundred reinforcements.

Col. Carlos Concha, the rebel commander, is said to be completely hemmed in at Esmeraldas, and Gen. Andrade is said to be so situated that he cannot render aid. It is reported that the Federals succeeded in stopping Andrade's march toward Esmeraldas, and that he has retreated to Tulcan.

Passengers here by steamer say, however, that the revolutionary movement in Ecuador is gaining daily throughout the republic, though it is strongest in the north, along the Colombian border.

Chamber Passes Libya Budget.

ROME, March 4.—The Chamber of Deputies by a vote of 361 to 83 to-day approved the budget for the new African colony of Libya. The Socialists and some Republicans were virtually the only members of the Chamber to vote against the budget. Prior to the vote Premier Giolitti recapitulated the history of the war between Italy and Turkey and the conquest of Libya.

AMAZONS BATTLE AT LONDON MEETING

Women "Chuckers Out" Eject Militants Who Interrupt Labor Gathering.

THEY THROW OUT MEN ALSO

And Male Stewards Join in the Fray—Women Pulled Out of the Hall by the Hair or the Feet.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, March 4.—An amazing hand-to-hand fight between women acting as "chuckers out" and women interrupters formed an interlude to to-night's meeting of the Independent Labor Party in London.

The storm broke when J. Ramsay Macdonald, M. P., attempted to speak. Many women present were militant suffragettes, and one after another they jumped up, shouting protests against the Labor Party's "support of a Government which tortures women."

Suddenly into the fray plunged about twenty women stewards of noticeably athletic build. They had helped to organize the meeting and are themselves suffragettes, but non-militants. They pounced upon the interrupters, and so vigorous was their work that within five minutes at least twenty women were thrown out of the hall.

There was no hesitation. The women stewards and women interrupters fought, hammer and tongs. Hats were torn off, clothes became rags, and for a time there was nothing but wild, high-pitched shrieking, with women scratching and fighting in fury.

Many windows were broken in the fight. Few of the ejected women were not pulled out of the hall either by the hair or the feet.

It was a women's battle almost exclusively, and when some men present prepared timidly to protest against what they termed "this brutal treatment," they, too, were removed by women, and five men quickly found themselves sprawling in the corridor of the hall. Men stewards also joined in the struggle and ejected male suffragists, who made violent resistance, fighting with walking sticks and seizing upon chairs and any other articles within reach.

LONDON, March 4.—Sylvia Pankhurst, addressing a meeting to-night outside the house in which she is entrenched against the police, said she intended to be present in Trafalgar Square next Sunday, not to preach peace, but to advise the people to do as much damage as possible.

Dr. Ethel Smyth, who was arrested last Friday night, following a meeting addressed by Sylvia Pankhurst, to-night drilled the members of the "people's army," but, on account of the good nature of the police, the assemblage was dispersed without disorder.

20 YEARS FOR KILLING.

Redureau, French Boy Murderer, Sentenced to Maximum Penalty.

NANTES, March 4.—Marcel Redureau, the fifteen-year-old lad who last September killed seven persons with an axe at Basbriage-en-Landreau, was found guilty to-day and sentenced to twenty years in prison. The sentence is the maximum allowed by the law. The trial began yesterday.

In summing up for the defense the boy's lawyer declared that at the time of the commission of the murders the prisoner was laboring under excessive nervous fatigue due to hard work.

When asked if he had anything to add to the words of his lawyer Redureau rose with lowered head and wept, but said nothing.

Meagher Sword to Notre Dame.

NOTRE DAME, Ind., March 4.—The sword of Gen. Thomas Francis Meagher, Commander of the Irish Brigade in the civil war, was to-day presented to the University of Notre Dame to rest near the body of Father Corby, the chaplain, who, with hands uplifted, in the midst of shot and shell, gave final absolution to the soldiers of the brigade on the battlefield of Gettysburg. The presentation was made by United States Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, where Gen. Meagher died while acting as Governor. W. Bourke Cockran of New York was orator of the day.

WOKE TO WOMAN BURGLAR.

Shay's Captive Breaks Loose and Hot Street Chase Follows.

Benjamin M. Shay, a garage keeper, awoke in his room on the fourth floor of La Porte Hotel, 1,161 Amsterdam Avenue, at 2:30 o'clock yesterday morning to see a young woman standing at the foot of his bed, holding his coat in one hand while she searched his pockets with the other. Shay rubbed his eyes to make sure he was awake and saw the woman take his wallet from his pocket. Nothing daunted when Shay sat up in bed, the woman explained that she was looking for her raincoat.

Shay thought she was a sleep-walker, and, donning a bath robe and slippers, led her to the rooms of George F. Brady, manager of the hotel. While he was calling Brady, she dashed down the stairs and out on the street. Shay and Brady gave chase, shouting "Stop thief!" Policeman McKenna, of the West 125th Street Station, who heard the shouts, discharged his revolver in the air and joined the pursuit. The woman gave up her flight, exhausted, at 118th Street, four blocks from the hotel.

Magistrate Herbert held her in $1,000 bail in the Harlem Court to answer a charge of burglary in General Sessions. She said she was Anna Stevenson, 25 years old, of 421 West Fifty-third Street, and was employed as a waitress on lower Broadway. She denied having been in Shay's room, and said she had entered the hotel to visit some of the servants. Miss Stevenson is the third woman to be held on a charge of burglary in the Harlem Court in the past ten days.

DILLINGHAM UNDER KNIFE.

Theatrical Manager Operated Upon for Appendicitis in German Hospital.

Charles B. Dillingham, the theatrical manager and proprietor of the Globe Theatre, was operated upon yesterday for appendicitis at the German Hospital by Dr. Otto M. Schwerdtfeger of 54 East Fifty-eighth Street, following an illness of about a week. At the hospital last night it was said that Mr. Dillingham was resting easily, and that his case had taken no serious turn.

Mr. Dillingham had been unable to go to his office for several days. Yesterday morning his case was diagnosed as appendicitis by Dr. Schwerdtfeger, and an immediate operation decided upon.

IDEALS

An ideal is an idea in perspective.

Ideals are good things to have because they serve as a guiding influence.

It is an ideal thing to believe that your building is going to be ready in time for the tenants who will be clamoring for admittance.

But the only way to come any way near that ideal is to employ a contractor who has ideals of his own, and can assist you to realize yours.

CAN'T FIND JOHN A. BENSEL.

Assembly Committee's Subpoena Servers Baffled.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 4.—Preparatory to resuming their graft hunt here to-morrow, John Leo Sullivan, Chairman, and John Kirkland Clark, counsel, of the Assembly investigating committee, have had a small army of process servers at work in an attempt to serve a subpoena on State Engineer John A. Bensel. Chairman Sullivan said this evening that so far they had failed to find Mr. Bensel.

"A representative of Mr. Bensel came to see me to-day, and was very anxious to find out what questions we were going to ask Mr. Bensel, and whether the State Engineer again would be required to sign a waiver of immunity before testifying," said Mr. Sullivan. "I was not in a position to give Mr. Bensel's agent any satisfaction on these subjects, and the agent professed not to be in a position to tell me where his chief was."

"Have you any idea of Mr. Bensel's whereabouts?" Mr. Sullivan was asked.

"Up to the present time, no," was his reply. "One day we hear that he is in New York. The next day we hear that he is out along the line of the barge canal or that he is snowbound somewhere. That's about as definite information as we have been able to obtain with regard to Mr. Bensel's whereabouts."

Mr. Sullivan said he hoped the State Engineer would be on hand to-morrow when the committee met. It was learned to-night that if Mr. Bensel should appear he would be required to sign an immunity waiver before being sworn. It is understood that Mr. Clark intends to ask Mr. Bensel some of the questions District Attorney Whitman was prevented from asking him before the New York County special Grand Jury investigating graft in the State Departments, because of Mr. Bensel's refusal to waive immunity at that time. Chairman Sullivan also desires to question Mr. Bensel regarding maintenance contracts let without public bidding at the time Mr. Bensel was a member of the Dix Highway Board.

The first witness before the Sullivan committee to-morrow will be Highway Commissioner John N. Carlisle. He will be questioned regarding the amount of the State's money already spent on highways, and will be asked to furnish a mass of other information to be used as basis in the investigation of the Highway Department.

SUES HENNESSY FOR $50,000

Henry A. Rubino Angry at Accustations of Fraud and Graft.

Henry A. Rubino, attorney for the Warner-Quinlan Asphalt Company, filed suit against John A. Hennessy yesterday in Kings County for $50,000, alleging that he had maliciously wronged him on Feb. 26 at one of the graft hearings before James W. Osborne, Gov. Glynn's special graft investigator. Hennessy sailed yesterday morning for Europe.

Rubino some months ago filed before Commissioner Osborne charges against Hennessy, alleging that he was engaged in a conspiracy to aid the Barber Asphalt interests. After the case had come up nearly a dozen times all the charges except one were withdrawn, and this was thrown out by Commissioner Osborne after Rubino had failed to make out a case.

In the heat of the hearing at City Hall on Feb. 26 Hennessy attacked Rubino vehemently, and in his statement on this occasion are cited in Rubino's complaint. According to the complaint, Hennessy said:

"You robbed every client you ever had, and I will prove it. I will prove that Charles M. arnerW and Patrick R. Quinlan paid money to Rubino; that Rubino paid money to John H. Delahey, and that Delaney and Rubino arranged to have the 9-cent oil asphalt of the Warner-Quinlan Company taken out of the class of Standard Oil and United States Oil and put in a higher grade, and that Quinlan paid money to Rubino to the extent of $10,000 on one occasion, and that Quinlan and arWner paid money to Rubino to the extent of 10,000 on another occasion; and that that money was divided between Rubino and Delaney and other persons in the Highway Department.

Mr. Rubino, at his office, 32 Nassau Street, denied yesteday that he had ever had any dealings with John H. Delaney, who is the State Commissioner of Efficiency and Eeconomy.

"These remarks by Mr. Hennessy," he said, "implied that I was not an honest lawyer and had bribed Delaney and others in order that a cheap grade of asphalt might be sold at a higher sum. My reputation is at stake and I intend to show what kind of a man Hennessy is."

STORM'S DAMAGE RAPIDLY REPAIRED

RECORD IN SNOW REMOVAL

Sun Melts as Much as 20,000 Men Clear from Streets—Many Days' Work Ahead.

While New York has practically recovered from the worst effects of the snowstorm of Sunday and Monday, New Jersey towns, particularly on the coast and in the northern part of the State, are still in a badly crippled condition. Very few telegraph and telephone wires across New Jersey had been repaired. Thousands of poles are still down. Philadelphia can be reached by wire from New York only in a roundabout way through Chicago, or through the American Telephone and Telegraph Company's underground cable that runs from Boston through New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore to Washington. Conditions were much improved through upper New York yesterday.

All passenger and milk trains of the railroads operating from New York City or the towns across the Hudson ran on regular schedules yesterday. The freight service through New Jersey is approaching the normal, but on some lines is still slow. The lost telegraph wires continued to handicap the operation of trains on all lines running west except the Lackawanna, which replaced the wire service with wireless. A Marconi portable wireless station was put up at Dover, N. J., yesterday, which, with the wireless stations at Hoboken, Scranton, and Binghamton, gave the Lackawanna unbroken communication all along its line to Buffalo. The wires between Binghamton and Buffalo withstood the storm.

Three thousand of the 30,000 telephones in New Jersey put out of commission by the storm were restored to service yesterday. Fifteen hundred were restored the day before. Many of the central offices in New Jersey were without power yesterday. In some cases electric power was generated by the engines of automobiles stationed in front of the exchanges.

The telephone and telegraph companies and the railroads have put every available man to work in New Jersey erecting poles, stretching wires and clearing snow from rights of way. The Western Union Company has 1,500 alone and the Pennsylvania Railroad 3,500. It was estimated yesterday that the storm had cost the Western Union Telegraph Company and the Postal Telegraph Company $500,000 each, and the New York Telephone Company $300,000. The railroads were put to heavy expenses also.

More snow was removed from the streets of New York yesterday than ever before in one day. In the boroughs of Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx an estimated 128,331 cubic yards were carried from the streets in carts. Much more was melted by the sun and washed from the streets by streams of water. William Williams, Commissioner of Water Supply, yesterday placed 55,000,000 gallons of water a day at Street Cleaning Commissioner Fetherston's disposal. More than 20,600 men working for the city and the snow removal contractors attacked the snow yesterday. Many gangs of men were engaged to work all night last night, principally below Fourteenth Street.

The citizens rallied yesterday to the call for co-operation issued by Acting Mayor McAneny in a way that gratified Commissioner Fetherston. Snow was removed in front of many private premises with no aid from the city. Chief Engineer Beardslee of the Hotel Plaza constructed a box lined with steam pipes connected by a hose to the boilers in the hotel, and by its use cleaned away the snow in front of the hotel in short order. Six men shoveled the snow into the box, in which it melted rapidly and flowed through a pipe to the gutters. The women of the Greenwich Settlement at 26 Jones Street removed the snow around their place.

Commissioner Fetherston reported last night that the principal streets practically cleared of snow at that time were:

Broadway from the Battery to Seventy-second Street and partly to Manhattan Street, Third Avenue from Ninety-fourth Street to 116th Street, Fifth Avenue from Washington Square to Fifty-ninth Street, the shopping district of Sixth Avenue, Forty-second Street from Ninth Avenue to East River, the ferry streets downtown, the main streets of the financial district, and the more important thoroughfares of the lower east side.

Gangs of men were set to work last night piling the snow on West and South Streets, and Commissioner Fetherston said that he expected these streets to be open for heavy traffic by this morning. Gangs also worked in Spring, Lafayette and Fourth Streets, east of Broadway all night. If warm weather prevails, the Commissioner said, all of the snow in the city would be removed within nine days.

The weather forecast for to-day and to-morrow is continued moderate temperature, with cloudiness and probably rain. The prospect of rain is not worrying the Commissioner, however, for, he said, although the rain might drive many men from work, it would melt at least as much snow as they could remove.

Surface car, cab, and taxicab service was about normal all over the city yesterday, according to reports. Fire Commissioner Adamson ordered all trials of firemen under charges postponed yesterday so that as many men as possible could be on duty.

APPROVE SNOW WORK.

Directors Commend Shonts for Handing of Street Cars.

The Directors of the Interborough-Metropolitan Company passed a vote of commendation at their meeting yesterday afternoon at their offices, 165 Broadway, for President Theodore P. Shonts and his staff for their performance during the last storm. A year ago President Shonts reorganized the service for dealing with snow conditions. The seventy sweepers and twenty-four scrapers were overhauled, equipped with stronger machinery, and inclosed so that the crews would be sheltered from the storm.

A "snow schedule" was made out which assigned selected employes to man the street-cleaning cars in case of storm. Whenever snow started falling before 10 o'clock in the evening the men on the "snow schedule" were instructed to report for work on the sweepers and cleaners. When the snow began to fall later at night than 10 o'clock, these employes were called out by telephone and messenger service. Last Fall duplicate keys were made to the houses of many men on the "snow schedule" in order to enable messengers to enter their homes and awaken them in case of necessity.

In consequence the full snow-fighting apparatus of the company was out on the streets within a short time after snow began to fall. During the recent storm more than 1,000 extra men were employed on the street railways by the Interborough-Metropolitan Company, and a total force of 3,000 men was at work on the snow.

MUST CONSERVE COAL.

Enough for Those Who Are Out, Says M. F. Burns.

There is no danger of a coal famine nor even of a serious shortage of coal in New York if the present supply in the city is only drawn upon by those who actually need fuel, according to several leading coal dealers seen yesterday. On the other hand, if the fear of a famine becomes widespread, the coal men said, a "coal panic" that might cause a famine was possible.

M. F. Burns, of the firm of Burns Brothers, coal dealers, summed up the situation. He said:

"Everything will be all right if everybody will keep calm and order no more coal than they will need this week. We are practically certain that the railroads will be able to deliver all the coal into the city we shall need by next Monday, and there is enough coal in the city now to last until then if it is sent only to those who need it. We have 30,000 tons in our yards and other large dealers are as well supplied, I have been told.

"The only danger in the situation is that the people will become panicky and try to have their cellars stocked with enough coal to last them the rest of the Winter.

"We have already begun to keep our eyes open to prevent coal being delivered where there is already a good supply, but we haven't been able to prevent every unnecessary delivery. For instance, the proprietor of an apartment house came clamoring for coal this morning. He said that he was entirely out of fuel and needed three tons quick. We sent it to his house and our men found ten tons already in his cellar. When I reproved him for ordering coal while he had plenty and others did not, he said that he was afraid there would be a famine, and wanted to protect himself. If there is a famine, it will be created by just such people as this man."

Mr. Burns said that the streets had now become so well cleared that deliveries of coal could be made without much delay.

TO SEEK BODIES IN RUINS.

Fear That Three Perished When Inn Burned Down.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, March 4.—County Detective John W. Courter, who lives at Campgaw, and reached the Prosecutor's office at Hackensack this morning after having been snowed in at his home since Sunday, said that nothing had been seen of A. N. Allen, his wife and aged mother since the Brookside Inn near Oakland, was totally destroyed by fire in the blizzard on Sunday night.

There was also an unconfirmed rumor that Mr. Allen had thrown his wife from an upper story window and jumped out after her.

Courter said he would get a number of men together to-morrow to dig their way through the drifts and start a search in the ruins for the bodies of the hotelkeeper and his family.

200 MILES OF ICE FIELDS.

Reported Off Newfoundland Coast by the Steamship Riverdale.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., March 4.—Ice fields extending 200 miles off the Newfoundland coast were reported to-day by the steamship Riverdale, Aberdeen for Philadelphia, which was forced to put in here to replenish her coal bunkers.

The Riverdale was thirty-four days in making the trip because of tempestuous weather, during which her decks were swept repeatedly.

It is seldom that field ice has been found so far off shore this early in the season.

Barge Wrecked, No News of Crew.

NORFOLK, Va., March 4.—That the Philadelphia canal barge Saturn was lost in Pimlico Sound during the recent coastal storm was established to-day when wreckage was found by life savers of the Hatteras Inlet station. The fate of the crew is unknown. Eleven hatch coverings and a pilot house, supposed to be from the Saturn, have come ashore near Leggins Reef.

Barge Founders Off Montauk Point.

FALL RIVER, Mass., March 4.—With the arrival here late last night of the tug Cuba, Capt. Bartlett reported that the coal barge Sagus foundered Monday morning off Montauk Point. Capt. Snowden and a crew of four men of the Sagua were picked up by the Cuba and brought to this city.

ABBOTT DEFENDS COLONEL.

Outlook Official Calls Reports of Brazilian Ill Feeling "Silly Gossip."

Lawrence F. Abbott, President of The Outlook Company, denied yesterday a story cabled from London to a Chicago newspaper and published here yesterday morning that Col. Rosevelt had treated his hosts in Rio Janeiro "in an ungerous, not to say a grasping, spirit" by demanding $3,000 for a brief speech to Brazilians who gathered to welcome him.

"The story on its face bears all the evidence to prove that it is silly, if not malicious, gossip," said Mr. Abbott. "It purports to be the statement of some unknown Chicago man repeating rumors which he says he understands are current in South America.

"The facts are that Mr. Roosevelt made his visit to South America in response to an invitation from the Museo Social of Buenos Ayres, conveyed personally by Dr. Naon, Argentine Minister at Washington. In its intellectual, sociological, and scientific character the Mueso Social may be compared to the French Institute.

"For his lectures before this learned society, Mr. Roosevelt was offered in advance an honorarius such as it is customary to offer university lecturers in this country. The offer was made without suggestion or expectation on Mr. Roosevelt's part. He has made no financial arrangements whatever for any other public speech or address in South America. Hwover, I am not surprised at the mean and petty gossip. I have been through it before.

"In 1910 Mr. Roosevelt made three addresses in Europe when I happened to be with him in charge of his affairs. For one of these—the Romanes lecture for that year at Oxford—Mr. Roosevelt received an honorarium of £25, which represented the income of the fund established by Prof. Romanes to be paid to each lecturer on this famous university foundation.

"No honorarium was asked or expected by Mr. Roosevelt for the other two addresses which were delivered at the Sorbonne and the University of Berlin. Yet after he returned home many people asked me about a rumor that was current here to the effect that he had presented a bill to the Sorbonne, and had refused to speak until the money was paid cash down."

By Marconi Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—"There is nothing in the reports that Col. Roosevelt is creating an unpleasant impression in South America," said today Allyn Ryerson Jennings, who has just returned from Brazil.

"I heard these reports while I was in Brazil, and as far as I could I investigated. It was rumored that Col. Roosevelt sent bills for speeches to the Young Men's Christian Association and the Historical and Geographical Society. I spoke of this to Myron Clark, head of the Brazilian Young Men's Christian Association, and he assured me that the report was groundless. Clark was Col. Roosevelt's interpreter while the former President was in Rio de Janeiro."

J. G. OAKLEY REARRESTED.

Special to The New York Times.

MOBILE, Ala., March 4.—The attempt of James G. Oakley, former President of the State Convict Board, charged with embezzling more than $250,000 of State funds, to have his case continued on the ground of illness failed at Montgomery to-day, the Court disputing the certificate of his physician and ordering him re-examined at Birmingham by experts, who reported back that the man was not disabled in any manner.

His bond of $75,000 was forfeited and his rearrest ordered at once.

OLD VIRGINIA DEBT IN A NEW DEADLOCK

West Virginia Now Claims $5,000,000 Equity in Securities Held by the Mother State.

OFFERS TO PAY $2,327,195

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 4.—The controversy between Virginia and West Virginia over the $30,500,000 debt incurred by the States before they were separated, bids fair to be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States for a second time. At a joint meeting of commissions representing the States at the New Willard Hotel this afternoon, the West Virginia Commission notified the Virginia men that it had discovered an equity of about $5,000,000 in securities held in the Virginia Treasury which had hitherto been concealed. The West Virginia representatives offered to meet that State's share of the liability with a cash payment of $2,327,195, which was the difference between the equity and the part of the debt apportioned to it by the Supreme Court. The offer was refused.

Attorney General A. A. Lilly of West Virginia immediately notified the Virginia Commission that suit would be brought in the Supreme Court to force Virginia to pay into West Virginia's treasury the value of the equity. The West Virginia Commission, it appeared, had had a large force of accountants going over the records of the Virginia Legislature from Jan. 1, 1861, to the present time, and it was said that extensive purchases of railroad securities were shown to have been made by the State from funds raised in the days when the Virginias were a unit. Some of these stocks had been sold afterward, but West Virginia never had received any benefit from the sale.

The difficulties between Virginia and West Virginia were taken before the Supreme Court in 1906, after protracted negotiations between the States. The task of straightening out the tangle was turned over to ex-Congressman Charles E. Littlefield of Maine as a Special Master. The evidence adduced before Mr. Littlefield was passed upon by the Supreme Court in 1911, and Justice Holmes reported that West Virginia's share of liability should be placed at 23.5 per cent. of the whole, amounting to $7,182,507. Justice Holmes noted that West Virginia was not credited with any assets in the transaction, and left it to the commissions formed by the States to find a ground for settlement.

In its search for an equity in Virginia's possessions, the West Virginia Commission discovered numerous valuable investments made by Virginia, in addition to $1,104,927 in cash which had accumulated in the Virginia exchequer during several years before the partition of territory occurred.

Virginia was found to have purchased before the civil war 2,752 shares of stock in the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad, a line giving an entrance into Washington to the Seaboard, the Southern, and the Atlantic Coast Line. The value of the shares was placed at $275,200. Other purchases of railroad securities, in roads which afterward became parts of the great trunk lines of the South, were uncovered to a total value of $6,313,352. These securities had been sold, but the West Virginia Commission reported that there was no record of their State having profited by the transaction.

In addition to these investments it was found that the States owned in 1861 bank stocks worth $3,710,000 and about $5,000,000 worth of other shares, which afterward had been sold by Virginia for $4,000,000. Altogether the authorities of West Virginia announced that there was a total of $20,810,000, in which, according to the Supreme Court's ruling, the State was entitled to 23.5 per cent., the equivalent of $4,855,312 after certain adjustments of interest and tax claims had been made.

The West Virginia Commission told the Virginia Commission that it would credit this amount to itself and settle up the balance of $2,327,195 in cash. Consent to such an arrangement would have left Virginia with more than $28,000,000 to pay in retiring the 5 per cent. certificates which represented the loans made before the war. The commission was not long in deciding to refuse the offer.

The Virginia-West Virginia debt is represented by certificates issued by Brown Brothers & Co., which are largely held abroad. The banking firm several years ago called for the deposit of the old Virginia deferred debt certificates and issued in their place its own certificates. These are traded in on the Stock Exchange.

HITS DEFAULTING STATES.

British Corporation Thinks United States Government Should Act.

By Marconi Transatlantic Wireless Telegraph to The New York Times.

LONDON, March 4.—The Corporation of Foreign Bondholders, in its annual report, issued to-day, again refers to the nine defaulting States of the United States, and says:

"It is indeed deplorable that these prosperous and progressive States of the great American Union take no steps to settle their defaulted debts, and it seems, to say the least, it is an anomaly that the United States should insist on compliance with its obligations by a country like Santo Domingo when so many States within its own borders are not observing their own engagements.

"Its counsel again regrets to report that no settlement of the claims of the British holders of Dominician bonds has been made, and it appears to them that it is incumbent on the Government of the United States, which is responsible for the arrangement under which the bonds are held in this country, to take up the question and see that they are equitably treated."

BLAMES FOREIGN TRUSTS.

Lawyer Says They Keep Up Cost of Living Here and Proposes Curb.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Horace Stern of the Philadelphia bar, who testified before the House Judiciary Committee to-day concerning the Administration anti-trust programme, urged the broadening of the scope of the Sherman anti-trust law so as to embrace foreign trusts and combines.

The rather novel proposition advocated by Mr. Stern was that a prohibition be established against the sale within the United States—by selling agencies of foreign trusts and combinations—of goods manufactured or owned by such foreign trusts, or sold here under price maintenance agreements entered into in foreign countries. The amendment would impose criminal liability upon the resident agents violating the prohibition, and seek to render illegal and void all contracts of sale negotiated by such agents in disregard of the act.

"Notwithstanding the passage of measures against domestic combinations," said Mr. Stern, "we are still met with the cry that no real relief has been given, and that the necessaries of life have not become any cheaper. The trouble seems to be that there exists in forign countries, notably in Germany and France, very large combination and trade associations formed for the restriction of free competition with a view to increased profits. These associations are merely pocketing, as additional profits, the tariff duties formerly collected b your own Government. Our tariff policy, in other words, is arbitrarily defied by foreign trusts."

Tribune Employes to Appeal.

Ex-District Attorney Henry A. Wise discussed yesterday with District Attorney Marshall the case of The Tribune employes, who have been fined $500 each by Judge Hand for contempt of court in refusing to answer the questions of the Federal Grand Jury. He told Mr. Marshall that he intended to take an appeal direct to the United States Supreme Court, on the ground that questions involving the constitutional rights of the defendants were involved.

MUSTER FOR BATTLE OVER TOLLS REPEAL

Friends and Foes Become Active on the Eve of the President's Appeal.

PASSAGE IS PREDICTED

Houses of Congress Will Meet in Joint Session To-day to Hear Wilson.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Resolutions were adopted by both Houses of Congress to-day providing for a joint session to-morrow afternoon at 12:30 o'clock to hear an address by President Wilson, urging the repeal of the provision of the Panama Canal act exempting American coastwise shipping from tolls.

President Wilson's determination to urge this reversal of policy with regard to tolls by a personal appeal to the Congress stimulated interest in the controversy to-day.

Democrats who intend to fight against repeal are planning to carry on their struggle with all possible vigor. For several days, however, it has been apparent that the President has been gaining converts to his opinion that toll exemption is in violation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

After the President has read his message, it will be referred to the House Committee on Interstate Commerce, which will draft legislation to carry out his recommendation.

It is expected that the committee will revive a bill by Representative Sims of Tennessee, introduced at the last session, which would provide for the flat repeal of the toll exemption. Although some opposition to the bill will develop in committee, it is assured of a favorable report, and an effort will be made to hasten its consideration in the House.

Many Democrats, including the majority leader, Mr. Underwood, oppose the repeal, but Mr. Underwood has stated that he will not attempt to organize the opposition. He intends to speak against it, however.

On the Democratic side in the Senate the opposition will be directed by Senator O'Gorman, Chairman of the Committee on Inter-Oceanic Canals, and Senator Chamberlain of Oregon.

Supporters of the repeal have assured the President that the bill will pass both houses.

RADIUM ILLUMINATES SIGN.

Novelty to be Shown by Colorado Mine Commissioner.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, March 4.—Radium spelled in its own fire furnishes an illuminated sign which is to be used to exploit Colorado's mineral resources.

State Mine Commissioner T. R. Henahan has had a sign made containing the single word "Radium." It is self-illuminating by reason of the use of an infinitesimal fraction of radium treated by a process known only to the corporation that made the sign. If scientists are correct in their estimate of the life of radium the sign will continue to give out its illuminating rays for a period of 2,000 years.

The feature of radium as an illuminant is that it requires no attention. It simply illuminates all the time.

"We purpose to use this sign at conventions and other gatherings as an illustration of the remarkable qualities of radium," said Commissioner Henahan.

Loeser's

Good Morning!

This is our invitation to a Sale of Oriental Rugs out of the ordinary. It is a March event which will help our customers to a profit of several thousand dollars in the purchase of choice and beautiful floor coverings. Our reason for the sale is a desire to clear our floors in preparation for the summer Rugs that will soon be shown.

There were $178,000 worth of Rugs on our floors when the sale started, and these show an aggregate reduction that lessens their price to $112,000.

On each piece there is a saving of 30 to 50 per cent. Every kind, and size, and color and weave of Oriental Rug is represented.

Another Home Sale—Refrigerators.

Every sample Star and Alaska Refrigerator on our floors is marked at reductions from ten per cent. to a third.

A train from the west is bringing us a complete sample line of new Alaska and Star Refrigerators, to arrive this week. Before they come we hope to dispose of every sample here. So well known are these makes that it is hardly necessary to emphasize their splendid construction and the fact that they are economical in operation.

Spring Is in the Air

even if there be a slight reminder of winter under foot. The store is alive with the new spring things—it is blooming like a rose garden.

One of the new things to be had only at Loeser's in Brooklyn is the India Ripple Parasol. It is built upon the India Crystal frame with its subtle double curves.

The cover is rippled, not only on the frame, as is the India Crystal, but with a double rippling in each section. When closed the lower ripples stand out in a puff at the ends of the ribs; when open the two ripples gracefully divide the surface like the ripples of a brook. Covered to our order in the newest shades, such as royal purple, turco, tango, Prussian green, hunter green, fox glove, etc.

Very moderately priced at $12.

SIEGEL DEPOSITORS RIOT IN U. S. COURT

Adjournment of Bankruptcy Hearing Drives Them to Angry Shouting.

Marshal Henkel Drives Crowd from Federal Building—Hoped to Examine Siegel and Vogel.

Incensed at missing the opportunity to question in bankruptcy proceedings Henry Siegel and his partner, Frank E. Vogel, fifty angry depositors of the defunct Siegel bank gave vent to their wrath yesterday afternoon in the Federal Building, when a postponement of the bankruptcy examination before United States Commissioner Gilchrist was announced. Shouting threats of vengeance they made riot in the office of the Commissioner until United States Marshal William Henkel, with four deputies, appeared and tried to pacify them. When he saw that his efforts were without result the Marshal and his men swept the turbulent gathering out of the building.

The hearing in the bankruptcy proceedings against Siegel and Vogel before the United States Commissioner was scheduled for yesterday afternoon on an order issued by Judge Hand, on the petition of Irving L. Ernst. Henry Siegel and Frank E. Vogel were to have been there for a complete examination of their affairs, and the depositors were particularly anxious to discuss the extent of their private resources in order to guide themselves as to the wisdom of accepting the 30 per cent. cash and 70 per cent. in notes, which had been offered them in settlement. This offer is to be considered at the meeting of creditors before ex-Judge Holt on Monday.

The depositors appeared at the Federal Building shortly before 2 o'clock, led by Miss Jessie Martin and Abraham N. Bresel, who have been spokesmen for an element usually opposed to the course of action pursued by the original Depositors' Committee of Ten, of which J. P. Munch is the head.

Miss Martin has frequently made herself heard above the noise of stormy meetings of depositors at their headquarters, 43 West Thirteenth Street, and also has expressed her views at the public hearings before Special Master Holt. Mr. Bresel, a man of medium height, with iron gray hair, gray mustache, and dark eyes, is quite as well known to the depositors.

When Miss Martin and Mr. Bresel entered Commissioner Gilchrist's room, however, they learned that Mr. Ernst had asked for a postponement of the proceedings until next week. The effect of this would be to postpone the examination of Siegel and Vogel until after the meeting, at which the offer of the settlement would be considered.

Miss Martin at once began a vigorous protest. She referred to the money placed by the depositors in the Siegel bank first as "hard-earned money," then "blood-earned money," and finally as "blood money." She said she spoke on behalf of a large number of depositors who, though unable to be present, felt that there was "a plot in the name of the United States Court" to help put through the settlement offer. Meanwhile Bresel was clamoring for Commissioner Gilchrist's attention. He charged that certain interests were trying to have adopted a proposition which only the minority of the depositors wanted. The greater number of the 15,000 depositors, he said, had not been represented by counsel or otherwise at any of the proceedings.

At this juncture Joseph Labozzeta of 310 East Fourth Street arose. He pulled his bankbook from his pocket and slammed it down on the table before him, shouting that he had been put out of his house, that he had lost $500, and that he had been forced to hunger through the failure of the bank.

Miss Martin hurried over to quiet him, pointing him out as an exhibit of the misery brought by the collapse of the Siegel firm.

"He is crazed by his troubles," she said.

Labozzeta picked up his bankbook and struggled through the crowd to the corridor. Outside he flung the book to the floor and stamped on it, shouting unprintable epithets. Again he picked it up and again he slammed it to the floor with fresh terms of abuse.

In the meantime a woman depositor was weeping in the Commissioner's room.

"We're a gang," she sobbed; "we're a gang," and would say nothing more.

It was learned that she had overheard some one say to the Commissioner, "I'd adjourn the hearing if I were you. There's a regular gang outside," and the phrase had hurt her feelings.

Marshal Henkel suddenly appeared at the door with four of his deputies ahead of him.

"I want order here," he shouted.

Miss Martin realized that he was in authority, and, pointing to Commissioner Gilchrist, cried:

"You're an official, a man of honor. Make this man tell us who called us 'a gang.'"

The Marshal hurriedly informed her that the Commissioner was the presiding officer of the gathering and said:

"He's a man of honor and probity. He'll tell you all he can."

Mr. Ernst announced that Judge Hough wanted to see Miss Martin and Mr. Bresel, and as they obeyed his summons, the Marshal had his deputies clear the corridors. None too gently his orders were carried out, and the depositors were hustled from the Federal Building, not being permitted even to await the elevator.

Outside they gathered on the sidewalk, still calling for vengeance against Siegel and Vogel. Some of them asserted that they were going to get 100 per cent. of their claims, if they had to go to the Fourteenth Street Store and the Simpson Crawford Company and raid those establishments. The police moved them along, and they drifted up Broadway, stopping for protest meetings at every corner.

Persons who overheard their threats notified the Fourteenth Street Store and the Simpson Crawford Company. They sought the aid of the police of the West Eighteenth Street Station, and Capt. Mason with the reserves hurried to the stores. The floor managers were ordered to be on the lookout for the raiders, and their preparations could not be concealed from the salesgirls. There was evident excitement among them, and their apprehension did not diminish until the stores were closed at 6 o'clock.

The depositors as a matter of fact went to their headquarters in West Thirteenth Street and held a further meeting of protest. When Miss Martin, Bresel, and another of the depositors saw Judge Hough, he asked them to state their grievance. They explained that they thought the postponements were evidence of an effort to railroad through an acceptance of the settlement offer. Judge Hough explained the situation to them, and they left apparently satisfied with his assurance that everything should be done justly and in accordance with the law, and that the depositors would get their full share in any settlement.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock the depositors will hold another meeting at their headquarters. On Friday night they will meet in Public School 27, Forty-second Street, near Third Avenue, and on Sunday afternoon at the University Settlement, 184 Eldridge Street.

2,000 ILL WITH TYPHOID.

Many Deaths from Epidemic Along Richelieu River, Canada.

ST. JOHNS, Quebec, March 4.—The seriousness of the epidemic of mild typhoid in St. Johns and Iberville, and Sabrevois County generally, was realised to-day when it became known that at least 2,000 persons out of a total population of 7,000 are suffering from the disease in its various stages. Factories are working short-handed and business is being greatly interfered with.

Many of the members of the Royal Canadian Dragoons have contracted it, and the Militia Department has ordered an investigation.

In the early stages the disease is difficult to diagnose and often is mistaken for grippe. Already several deaths have occurred. The epidemic has gained such a hold that it is difficult to obtain isolation. Medical men believe that the water and milk supplies are the medium of contagion.

Motor Fire Engine Flywheel Bursts.

While Motor Engine 3 of the Passaic, N. J., Fire Department was plunging through the slush on Sherman Street to answer a still alarm early yesterday afternoon the flywheel of its engine burst. One of the fragments struck George Burke, an employe of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, knocking him down and inflicting a painful scalp wound. Capt. William Clemons, who was driving, and Fireman Joseph Zachara, who was riding with him, escaped injury. They picked up Burke and sent him to his home, 194 Oak Street, Paterson, where he received medical attention from a private physician. The fire proved inconsequential.

H. E. FANSHAWE GETS INHERITANCE BACK

Signed Away $49,000 Interest in Trust Fund to Protect Creditor for $12,735.

He Assigned to E. G. Gates, Who Claimed His Fortune — Court Sets Assignment Aside.

Soon after Maria Louise Fanshawe, the widow of Henry Albion Fanshawe and the daughter of the late John M. Davies, died on Sept. 8, 1912, a number of creditors turned up with claims against her son, Henry E. Fanshawe. There was coming to him under the will of his grandfather one-third of a trust fund of $148,158. Only the income was to be his until his mother's death, and then the principal was to revert to him. Mr. Fanshawe evidently had done everything he could to spend this money before he got it, and in order to straighten out the tangle the United States Trust Company, which had charge of the fund, asked the Supreme Court to settle the question of the division of the property, and to find out just how much of it would have to be turned over to Mr. Fanshawe's creditors.

Yesterday Justice Greenbaum decided that all of the $49,386, with the exception of about $20,000, should be paid to Mr. Fanshawe. The story of the latter's efforts to spend his inheritance and why he failed is told in the legal papers in the case.

At first Mr. Fanshawe nearly fell into the hands of the loan sharks. He got $5,000 from them, and they would soon have had him hopelessly in their clutches if it had not been for Egbert G. Gates, who was the Secretary of Col. William C. Greene, at one time a big dealer in copper stock. Mr. Fanshawe had desk room in Col. Greene's office at 24 Broad Street, and he and Mr. Gates became very friendly. The story of the tied-up inheritance and how the loan sharks had a grip on it was related to Mr. Gates, and he agreed to loan Mr. Fanshawe $5,000 to get rid of the sharks.

Later Mr. Fanshawe borrowed more money from Mr. Gates, until he owed him $12,735. In order to secure these various loans Mr. Gates insured the life of Mr. Fanshawe for $20,000 and punctually paid the premiums. That was in 1906, and a little later Mr. Fanshawe told his friend Gates that he had been offered $14,000 for one-half of his interest in his grandfather's estate. Money was sorely needed by Mr. Fanshawe and he was strongly tempted to accept this offer. His creditors were many, and every footfall and every rustle of a paper made him anxious.

Then came Leonard D. Baldwin, counsel for Mr. Gates, and suggested that Mr. Fanshawe assign his entire interest in the estate to Mr. Gates. On Dec. 17, 1907, an agreement was entered into by which an assignment was made to Mr. Gates for $14,500. Mr. Fanshawe insisted that he never assigned his entire interest in the estate, but both Mr. Gates and his counsel were under the impression that he had.

After the death of his mother Mr. Fanshawe wrote to Mr. Gates asking him for a statement of his account, and Mr. Gates replied that he had bought all of Mr. Fanshawe's interest outright. Justice Greenbaum decided that the assignment given by Mr. Fanshawe was only for the purpose of protecting Mr. Gates and that there is still due the latter only $13,752.

Among the other creditors of Mr. Fanshawe are R. M. Haan, the restaurant man, whose bill is $1,173, and Richard Irving, to whom Mr. Fanshawe owes $4,627. The court directed that the assignment to Mr. Gates be canceled.

BELATED TAX RETURNS.

500 Additional Declarations Received Yesterday by Collector Anderson.

About 500 additional income tax returns from individuals were received by mail yesterday at the office of Charles W. Anderson, Collector for downtown Manhattan, in the Custom House. These came from remote points, and were mailed presumably in time to reach New York by March 2 under ordinary conditions.

The question of their acceptance as coming within the time limit will be referred to Internal Revenue Commissioner Osborn. Some of the returns came from Spain, Cuba, and California. The clerks were busy yesterday getting the individual returns into alphabetical order, which will take several days.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—More than two-thirds of the sixty-three internal revenue districts had reported their income tax returns to the Treasury Department to-night. Officials have not begun the tabulation, however, nor attempted any estimate of the amount of collections to be made before June 30 on these returns.

An official count of the individuals making returns will be made probably to-morrow, but it is not believed that the tables will be accurate and final for at least a month, because of the thirty days' extension granted by the law in case of sickness or absence.

SHARES WITH ITS EMPLOYES

Smith Carpet Company Unexpectedly Gives a Bonus

Employes of the Smith Carpet Company of Yonkers received a bonus in their pay envelopes yesterday. It was not the first bonus, for in August, 1911, the corporation inaugurated a plan of sharing profits with its employes. The latest dividend, however, was unexpected, for on Jan. 23 the employes received in their pay envelopes a notice of a general reduction of 10 per cent. in wages, to take effect on Feb. 1.

More than 2,200 persons shared in the distribution yesterday of $75,000, making a total of $420,000 that has been paid out in this manner.

The basis for payment is 10 per cent. of earnings for six months to employes of ten years' service and 5 per cent. to employes of five years' standing

POLICE KEEP COSTLY GEMS.

Refuse to Surrender Earrings to Men Who Say They Found Them.

James Gannon and Michael Vance, who were arrested on Feb. 19 after they had attempted to pawn a pair of diamond earrings worth $2,000, demanded them yesterday from the property clerk at Police Headquarters. The men were discharged in court for the police had no evidence to disprove their story that they had found the gems in Fourth Avenue, near Thirty-fourth Street.

The police refused to give up the earrings yesterday to Gannon and Vance, and will hold them for six months.

GILL AGAIN SEATTLE MAYOR.

Labor Candidates Also Victorious in City Elections.

SEATTLE, Wash., March 4.—The surprise of yesterday's city election was the great majority—14,000— by which Hiram C. Gill was chosen Mayor. Gill carried every ward but one, and got big majorities in residence precincts, where he had always been beaten before.

Apparently the only charter amendment adopted was that fixing a minimum wage of $2.75 a day for all city employes.

Robert B. Heesketh, President of the City Council and Vice President of the International Cooks and Waiters' Union, was re-elected to the Council, receiving more votes than Gill. Councilman Oliver T. Ericksen, also indorsed by organized labor, was re-elected by a large majority. Some, if not all, of the five labor candidates for membership on the Freeholders' Committee chosen to revise the charter, were elected.

POLES LEAVE $38,000 BUNDLE IN STATION

WAS FRUIT OF TOIL HERE

Homeward-Bound Party from the West Intrusted Savings to Woman's Care—Money Is Restored.

When the Mercantile Express from Chicago arrived in the Pennsylvania station a little after 6:30 o'clock yesterday morning twenty-eight persons, evidently of foreign birth, alighted from it. They were accosted at once by Francis Obradovich, emigrant agent for the Pennsylvania Railroad, who soon learned that they were Poles returning from a mining settlement in Montana to their European homes. They were led by a man who had been a saloon and boarding house keeper in the settlement with whom all of the party had lived. With the man was his wife, who carried a three months' old baby.

Mr. Obradovich, who had to talk to the travelers in Polish as none of them could speak English, had breakfast ordered for them in the emigrant room in the station. As soon as it had been served the leader asked the way to the White Star Line's piers, saying that passage had been reserved for the party on the Olympic. Mr. Obradovich saw the Poles safely on a southbound Eighth Avenue surface car and then returned to the emigrant room.

As soon as he entered he saw that the Poles had left a white bag on the floor with a smaller bag lying on top of it. He kicked the larger bag to see what it contained and the other fell, chinking and clinking to the floor. Mr. Obradovich quickly opened it and found that it was full of money—$20 bills, $1 bills, and gold.

The emigrant agent took the money to the stationmaster's office. There was $1,000 in bills of $20 each, $100 in bills of $1, and almost $37,000 in gold. When the money was counted and stacked in front of him the stationmaster had only one "old faithful" exclamation at his command to express his feelings—and he didn't quite have time to give utterance to that. He started:

"Well, I'll"—and stopped suddenly when pandemonium in the station concourse attracted his attention. He looked out and saw the party of Poles. They were running about this way and that, shouting excitedly and evidently searching for the emigrant room or Mr. Obradovich or some trace of their money.

Mr. Obradovich called them to him and handed the money to their leader, who said that his wife had carried the bag and had put it down and forgotten it. He had given it to her, the man said, because he didn't entirely trust all of the men in his party. The money was the combined savings of all of the Poles, who had made the boarding house keeper their banker. The woman missed the bundle soon after she had got on the surface car.

Arrested in a Stock Deal.

Joseph N. Ely, President of the Crescent Sand and Gravel Company, was arrested yesterday on an order signed by Supreme Court Justice Bijur and held in $7,500 bail. The complainant is H. J. Lamar, who accuses Mr. Ely of having sold him 280 shares of the Crescent Company, representing them to be worth par when they were really worth only 25 per cent. of par. The amount involved in the proceeding is $31,000.

LE COMPTE WINS MOTION.

Certificate of Reasonable Doubt Granted on Workhouse Sentence.

Edward Le Compte, electrical engineer, is still fighting to save himself from serving a sentence of thirty days in the Workhouse, while his wife, Mrs. Madelon Le Compte, has already served her sentence and regained her freedom. Through his counsel Mr. Le Compte obtained yesterday from Justice Jaycox a certificate of reasonable doubt and the bond of $1,000 on which Le Compte was liberated pending the motion was continued.

The Le Comptes up to a year ago lived in a handsome residence at 209 Woolsey Street, Astoria. They disagreed over the alleged refusal of Mrs. Le Compte to reconvey to her husband the Astoria property, which was free and clear and was worth about $30,000. Since that time they have been frequent visitors to the courts, and about a month ago, when they both appeared before Magistrate Fitch with counter charges, he caused the policeman who arrested Le Compte on the street on complaint of his wife, to make a charge of disorderly conduct against both, and the Magistrate then sentenced each of them to thirty days in the Workhouse.

Le Compte immediately set about trying to obtain his liberty while Mrs. Le Compte settled down and complacently served out the sentence.

Carnegie Not at Library Dedication.

OSSINING, N. Y., March 4.—Andrew Carnegie did not attend the dedication exercises to-day of Ossining's new $30,000 Carnegie Library. He sent a letter of regret. Two local clergymen, the Rev. James A. McWilliams and the Rev. D. H. Baragwanath, spoke. The new library contains 7,000 volumes.

JOHNSON DOES NOT FEAR BASEBALL WAR

American League Head Says Gilmore Is Doing All the Worrying.

CHICAGO, March 4.—President Johnson of the American League and President Chivington of the American Association, were among the passengers who left to-day for New York to meet the returning world tourists. August Herrmann, Chairman of the National Commission and twenty others from Cincinnati will join the party on the way.

A special from the training camp of the Chicago Americans at Paso Robles said Hal Chase, the holdout first baseman, had finally come to terms and would join the team in a few days at Oakland. A cut from the salary Chase received as manager of the New York Americans, it is understood, was the cause of the difference.

"If the Federal Leaguers want war, they can have it," said President Johnson as he boarded the train. He discussed briefly President Gilmore's threat of war, conveyed in telegrams yesterday to him and to President Tener of the National League, and in the foregoing phrase showed the attitude of organized baseball toward the Federals. He said he would not answer the telegram.

"Gilmore seems to be doing all the worrying," he said. "Organized baseball does not fear any war. As for the Blanding case, on which Gilmore's complaint of injury is based, President Somers of the Cleveland Club, was confident he was within his rights in re-signing the pitcher. I have personal knowledge tat Blanding never wanted to leave the Cleveland Club."

President Johnson refused to discuss the reserve rule, but said the American League was ready at any time to make a court test of it.

Work was begun to-day on the Chicago Federal League Club's plant at Addison Avenue and North Clark Street. A band concert and brief speeches by President Gilmore of the league and President Weeghman of the club, were features of the ceremony attending the turning of the first spade of earth. Mayor Harrison, who is recovering from a serious illness, could not attend, but he was represented by Henry Ericsson, Building Commissioner, who spaded a shallow hole in the ground near the site of the main entrance and into the hole the contents of a bottle of champagne was poured. A large crowd was present. The contractor agreed to have the plant finished by April 25.

President Gilmore, with Mr. Weeghman and William Walker, of the local club, and E. E. Gates of the Indianapolis Club, left this afternoon for New York, where with other club owners, they expect to meet the returning world tourists. On another train a party of friends of C. A. Comiskey and others on the tour, left to greet the travelers.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 4.—"The organization will back the Cleveland Club to the limit should the Federal League carry out its threat to wage war for the services of Pitcher Blanding," said Ban Johnson, President of the American League, to-night after a conference with Charles W. Somers, owner of the Cleveland Club.

Johnson and other baseball magnates were on their way to New York to meet the members of the Comiskey-McGraw party on its return from the trip around the world.

"Pitcher Blading returned to the Cleveland Club of his own volition," continued Ban Johnson. "Neither Mr. Somers nor I prevailed upon him to return. The other members of the club, realizing the strength that Blanding would add to their team, and with visions of a possible world series, petitioned the pitcher to return. In a public statement Blanding admitted that he made a mistake when he joined the Federals. We will protect this player to the limit, and the fact that he deserted the organization at an earlier date will not lessen the strength of our campaign of protection."

LEAGUE LOSES 30 PLAYERS.

President Barrow Says International League's Losses Are Not Serious.

The International League will hold no loving peace meeting with the Federal League, according to the statement made by President Barrow yesterday.

"We will meet them with our 'dukes' up," said Mr. Barrow yesterday. "The best way to deal with the new league is to let it go ahead on its own hook, and it will come to grief quick enough."

Mr. Barrow stated that there was not the slightest chance of the league making a change in its circuit. The Federal League will simply be ignored. The International League will not move the Jersey City Club to Brooklyn.

"We do not believe," said President Barrow, "that the Federals have as many of our players as they claim to have. At the outside, I think they may have perhaps thirty players, but you must remember some of these are youngsters who have come to us in trades and have not yet been tried out. The losses at Rochester and Montreal are not as serious as they appear, and I think when the season opens we will have just as strong a circuit as last season."

The International League will meet to-morrow afternoon at the Hotel Imperial at 2 o'clock. The meeting, according to Mr. Barrow, is more in the nature of a conference. There will be an informal talk on the situation of players and the club owners will check up the men and determine just how many are missing. Mr. Barrow stated that he did not think it would be necessary for the clubs to furnish Montreal or Rochester with players to take the place of the men who jumped to the Federals.

Hummel to Play in Newark.

Silent John Hummel, Brooklyn's utility player, will probably be at first base for Newark this season. Manager Smith of the Indians is badly in need of a firstsacker, to take the place of Swacina, who jumped to the Baltimore Federals. Newark is also in need of a catcher to help out Smith and O'Rourke, and it is likely that the Dodgers will let Heckinger go to the Indians. Brooklyn may take Bill Zimmerman, the outfielder, in a trade for the pair. Hummel will be made field Captain if the deal goes through.

Stovall After Pitcher Leverenz.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 4.—George Stovall of the Federal League Club left last night for New York, where he will meet the world's touring baseball teams. Stovall said he expected to secure Pitcher Leverenz of the local American League team, having conferred with him after the close of the season last Fall.

Suggs Signs Life Contract.

GREENSBORO, N. C., March 4.—George F. Suggs, a pitcher of the Cincinnati National League baseball team, and Miss Mozelle Cox of Winston, N. C., were married to-night in Winston, the home of the bride, and former home of Suggs.

Chase Joins White Sox To-morrow.

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 4.—That Hal Chase, the hold-out first baseman, would join the Chicago White Sox at Oakland, Cal., Friday was confirmed in a message received here to-day. Chase is in San Jose, Cal.

GIANTS PLAY FIRST GAME.

Mathewson's Team of Veterans Shut Out by Youngsters.

Special to The New York Times.

MARLIN SPRINGS, Texas, March 4.—Weather or no weather, the Giants to-day began their season of practice games. They had a cold and blustery day, and the opening of the fracas between two picked teams was reduced to three innings, topping off preliminary capers with medicine ball, handball, and batting practice.

Mathewson picked a team of veterans and pitchers to do battle with the team which is to play in Dallas on Saturday and Sunday. Matty's was a makeshift aggregation and, compared to the opposing array, was sadly out of practice. The ten days' work of the Dallas contingent showed to pronounced advantage as compared to the uncleared eyes of the other side, and the youngsters who composed the Dallas nine whacked their rivals by a score of 7 to 0. The teams were made up as follows:

Matty's—Bescher, c. f.; Burns, 3b.; Fletcher, ss.; Fromme and Drucke, p.; Murray, r. f.; Prieste, 2b.; McLean, c.; Spencer, l. f.; Mathewson, 1b. The score by innings:

Mattys	0	0	0	—	0	1	2

The solitary safe swat culled by the Mattys came from the bat of Prieste, while Jordan, Snodgrass, Harrison, Dyer and Johnston did the clouting for the winners. Jordan and Snodgrass each hit for a two-bagger and a triple. Drucke helped the winners along with a balk, and was rapped with freedom. Shauer and Schupp were too much in the box for the untrained opposition. Bob Bescher showed his lack of preparation both at the bat and in the field, striking out and misjudging a fly, but it was a treat to see him move on the bases in the preliminary batting and running practice.

A number of pitchers worked out, Tesreau, Palmero, and Shauer operating freely. McLean had to caution Shauer to go slower. Palmero says he is ready for business right now, and will show his skill against the Dallas Texas Leaguers. The grounds were too moist for much morning practice, while the afternoon siege, with its brief game and other diversions, was lively for such a raw day.

Claude Cooper came over from Fort Worth and had a talk with Dick Kinsella, and is still a hold-out. He didn't get what he asked for and went home this afternoon. He has an offer from the Federals, he says, and the indications are that he will go there.

FEDERALS WILL NOT LAST.

"Mike" Sexton Predicts the Outlaw League Will Not Finish Season.

Michael H. Sexton of Rock Island, Ill., President of the National Association of Minor League Baseball Clubs, arrived here yesterday and will take a prominent part in the conferences which will be held in this city to-morrow by all branches of organized ball. Up to the present time Mr. Sexton has not committed himself on the Federal League situation, but he stated at the Hotel Biltmore last night that he did not believe that the outlaws would amount to much.

"I believe," said Mr. Sexton, "that they will get started, but it is a big question how far they will get. There is no danger, whatever, of the Federals getting any of the minor leagues away from organized ball as President Gilmore predicts. The minor leagues to-day are in better condition and are better satisfied than at any time in the history of the game. The ball player is protected jusa as much as the club is protected, and I have not heard of any of our leagues that are at all dissatisfied.

"Our orginization is a strong body, and its influence is far-reaching in the national game," he continued. "In the National Association are more than forty leagues, playing in over 300 cities all over the country. In these leagues are more than 8,500 players, and the annual slary list of these leagues amounts to more than $4,000,000."

"I did not come here to attend any so-called 'peace conference' with the Federal League. If such a meeting is to be held I know nothing of it. Organized ball has nothing to compromise with the Federals. I cannot see where that new league can get anywhere."

"Dou you thing," Mr. Sexton was asked, "that organized ball will take the Federals in the fold if they make good next season?"

"It is a question whether they will last the season out," he answered.

Secretary John H. Farrell of Auburn, Secretary of the National Association, is also in town, and both officials will confer with the National Commission to-morrow on the Federal League raids in the various leagues.

FEDERALS OPEN MAY 10.

Secretary John Ward Says Brooklyn Outlaws Have 27 Players.

The Brooklyn Federal League Club has been decided upon, and John Montgomery Ward, the Secretary and Business Manager, said yesterday that twenty-seven players had been allotted to the club at the meeting of the league in Chicago last week. Mr. Ward will announce the names of the players next week, he said, at which time the name of the manager will also be announced.

Mr. Ward seemed highly pleased at the players given to Brooklyn, and he said yesterday that the aggregation would measure up to the Dodgers in actual playing strength. Brooklyn will not try to open at Washington Park at the beginning of the season, for the Wards have been informed that it will be impossible to build the grandstand in time. The plan, as announced by Secretary Ward yesterday, is to keep the Brooklyn club playing on the road until May 10.

"The contractors have assured us," said Secretary Ward, "that the stands will be completed at Washington Park about May 1. The Schedule Committee will meet at Baltimore late in this month. Of course, it will be impossible to say when the Brooklyns will open at home until the schedule has been adopted, but in no case will the dates conflict with the Brooklyn Nationals if it is possible to avoid doing so. In Chicago and St. Louis the dates naturally must conflict with the three leagues."

Mr. Ward said that the players on the Brooklyn team were all high-class men, and when they were seen in action Brooklynites would be agreeably surprised. "I want to tell you," said Mr. Ward, "that our club has a better shortstop right now than the Brooklyn Nationals have with all the nine candidates they have announced as trying for the position.

"Had this league started a month earlier," continued Mr. Ward, "it would have made organized ball sit up and take notice, but before long I predict that organized ball will seek to make terms with the Federal League. Men with money are behind this organization, and they will secure the best that the market affords."

The Brooklyn club is after both Speaker and Crawford, and if either man is signed he will be appointed manager. The other clubs will not interfere with Brooklyn's efforts to land the two stars.

Eastern Association in Session.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 4.—Eastern Association baseball directors met here in a five-hour session to-day, adopted a schedule of games, provided for a sinking fund for emergencies, and discussed th emuch-mooted question of Sunday playing. The season will open on April 28 and close Sept. 12. It was voted to make arrangements for a long-term agreement with the New England League for post-season series. By a vote of 7 to 1 10 per cent. of the gross receipts will be used for a special sinking fund to aid clubs in financial difficulties or to meet any emergencies. No definite action was taken in regard to Sunday playing.

Evers in Chicago Uniform.

MACON, Ga., March 4.—Johnny Evers arrived here to-day. Dressed in a Chicago uniform he appeared on the diamond a few minutes after his arrival and joined the Boston Nationals in practice. The Cubans, Luque, Villazon, and Gonzales also joined Stallings's club to-day, as did Pitcher Hogg.

SELECT DATES FOR DAVIS CUP MATCHES

Challenge Round to be Played Aug. 13, 14, and 15—Nations Notified.

In selecting the playing dates in the preliminary and challenge rounds for the Davis Cup yesterday the International Cup Committee decided on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, Aug. 13, 14, and 15, for the international challenge matches, and, as the American national amateur lawn tennis championship tournament will begin at Newport on Aug. 24, the foreign players will have an opportunity to compete for the American championship.

The dates for the Davis Cup matches were announced yesterday by Robert D. Wrenn, President of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, after a conference with George T. Adee, Secretary of the International Cup Committee, the third member of the committee, Henry W. Slocum, being absent in Bermuda. While the dates for the championship were selected, the places at which the international matches will be played were not chosen on account of the absence of Mr. Slocum. The places probably will be announced at the Executive Committee meeting of the U. S. N. L. T. A. in this city on March 20, when the schedule of tournaments throughout the country will be announced.

The International Cup Committee yesterday notified the six nations challenging for the Davis Cup that the matches in the first round between Canada and Australasia and the British Isles and Belgium, must be completed by July 25. The semi-final round, in which Germany will meet the winner of the Canada-Australasia series, and France faces the victor in the British Isles-Belgium matches, must be completed by Aug. 1. The final match to decide which nation may challenge the American defenders of the cup must be finished by Aug. 8.

The schedule of matches adopted must be played on or before the dates selected, and any failure on the part of the challenging nations to agree upon a time and place will result in the American committee deciding the point, which probably would result in the match or matches being played in this country.

The arrangement of the various dates will avoid a conflict with the American and English championship tournaments. It is understood that Anthony F. Wilding of the Australasian team is anxious to defend his title in England. By the present arrangement he will be able to do so and at the same time will be in a position to take part in the American championship. The latter tournament will begin later than usual to avoid crowding on the heels of the international event.

Duke of Manchester Loses at Tennis

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—The Duke of Manchester, who is an enthusiastic follower of court tennis, played two sets on the courts of the Racquet Club here yesterday with Walter Hallahan, a member of the club. The visitor was somewhat handicapped by his unfamiliarity with the courts and lack of practice. He lost both sets, 6—4.

GIANTS TO LAND TO-NIGHT.

Tourists May Leave Lusitania in the Lower Bay Late This Evening.

The Giants and White Sox party of baseball tourists, who are returning on the Lusitania from the trip around the globe, may be able to land late to-night if the Cunarder keeps up her present rate of traveling. At 2:45 yesterday afternoon the liner was 840 miles east of Sandy Hook and was making 25 miles an hour. A wireless to Sable Island states that the weather is pleasant.

At this rate the Lusitania will be in the bay in about thirty-three hours, which will be about 11 o'clock to-night. With the permission of the Collector of the Port the party could be brought up the bay. It is not known whether this will be done. If not the party will wait until the boat docks on Friday morning about 8 o'clock.

It is not unusual for the Collector to permit passengers to leave liners at night. The Lusitania will dock at Pier 56 at the foot of Fourteenth Street at 8 o'clock to-morrow morning. The office of the Surveyor of the Port was besieged yesterday by friends of the tourists for permits to the pier.

BROOKLYN REGULARS WIN.

Special to The New York Times.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 4.—After two good work-outs under a hot sun Manager Robinson lined his players up for a six-inning game, which was won by the regulars by the score of 5 to 3. Pitchers Brown and Aitchison opposed each other for the first two innings, and for the first time took a few liberties with their pitching arms. Catcher Fischer led in the batting with a home run to deep left field, and Pitcher Ragon furnished the fielding feature with a long running catch in deep centre. Allen and Schmutz were the other pitchers.

Rucker and Ragon got in last night, and Capt. Jake Daubert arrived this afternoon in time for practice. The arrival of Daubert relegated Hummel to third base on the second team. Rucker's appearance was a big surprise to the Superbas' new boss. The National League's crack southpaw is ten pounds lighter than when the team started North last Spring. Ragon, like Rucker, showed the benefit of their boiling out at Hot Springs for nearly two weeks.

Hoppe and Yamada Win.

CHICAGO, March 4.—Willie Hoppe defeated George Slosson in the night session of the 18.2 balk-line billiard tournament here, 500 to 35. Hoppe ran out in seven innings, making a high run of 216 points in the sixth. His average was 71 3-7 to Slosson's 5. Score by innings:

Hoppe—77 86 0 29 1 216 89—500. Average, 71 3-7.

Slosson—1 1 30 1 2 0 0—35. Average, 5.

In the afternoon game Koji Yamada defeated C. Demarest of Chicago, 500 to 414 in twenty-eight innings. The Japanese made a high run of 57 and Demarest of 60.

Winners with the Cue.

Charles P. Conway was unable to concede a handicap of 10 points to Christian Scheidig, and was defeated by the latter last night in the amateur handicap 18.2 balk-line billiard tournament at Keeney's Billiard Academy, in Brooklyn, by the score of 240 to 206. Conway was playiung for 250 points, while his opponent was required to tally only 240. Scheidig maintained the lead practically from the beginning of the contest and completed his string of 240 points in fifty-two innings for an average of 4 32-52. He had high runs of 27, 17, and 15. Conway's best efforts netted him high runs of 26, 21, and 20, with an average of 3 50-52. This evening Charles E. White will endweavor to tally 260 points before Dr. H. D. Jennings can score 225.

William Irvine won another victory last night in the Harlem amateur Class C 18.2 balk-line billiard championship tournament at the Morningside Billiard Academy, 125th Street and Lenox Avenue, when he defeated Charles Barnett by the score of 100 to 86 in forty-six innings. Irvine played in excellent form from the start of the game and throughout maintained a comfortable lead. He had high runs of 14 and 11, with an average of 2 8-46.

Fred Eames, the Denver billiardist who is matched to oppose Alfredo De Oro for the three-cushion carrom billiard championship title next week, began his course of training yesterday at Doyle's Billiard Academy, where he contested in two games with Albert G. Cutler of Boston, former holder of the amateur balk-line title. In the afternoon the Westerner won by the score of 40 to 31, making a high run of 5 points, but in the evening contest Cutler was victorious, the final score being 40 to 25. Cutler's highest run was 6 points.

BAKER FAVORS CONTROL.

Australian Promoter Advocates International Regulation of Boxing.

Reginald L. (Snowy) Baker, the boxing promoter of Australia, escorted by "personal conducter" James Johnston, "sat in" with the members of the State Athletic Commission at the weekly meeting yesterday, listened to the testimony in the cases which were heard, discussed international control of the sport, and at the close of the meeting declared that he was strongly impressed with the idea of a commission governing the sport in other localities.

"I understood that boxing was regulated by a commission," said Mr. Baker at the close of the meeting, "but I never realized the powers of that commission were so extensive or its control of the sport so strong. It was very interesting and just as instructive to find how thoroughly the individual cases are heard. We have held meetings in Australia to decide upon certain features of the boxing game, but we have no commission with any such powers as are vested in the State body here. Why, the commission is really a court to regulate all matters pertaining to the sport, and after attending a session and learning of the changes which have already been adopted for the good of the game I have reached the conclusion that the sport cannot go wrong under such control."

During the meeting Mr. Baker made known to the Commissioners his ideas on the international control of the sport, and they in turn told him what they thought of the plan. As a result of this conference action will be taken within the next two weeks which will bring the promoters of the leading boxing countries closer together than ever before. The idea has been discussed for some time, but it now seems close to realization.

Mr. Baker will sail from New York on the Lusitania on March 10. While in Europe he expects to have conferences with Victor Breyer, the leading boxing promoter of France, and A. F. Bettinson of the National Sporting Club of London. He will explain to them his ideas and the ideas of the New York State Athletic Commission in regard to uniform weights, penalties, and general rules of the sport, particularly that relating to the length of time a champion will be allowed to retain his title after being legitimately challenged. In Australia there is a rule that a champion must defend his title within six months after a legitimate challenge, and this idea seems to prevail among the members of the local commission.

BOXING COMMISSION ACTS.

Contestants Not to be Allowed to Sell Tickets of Admission.

The long-established practice, especially among the smaller boxing clubs, of distributing tickets among the boxers who are to appear at the club's shows, for the purpose of having the boxers sell them to their friends, will be legislated out of the boxing game at next week's meeting of the State Athletic Commission. This much was decided yesterday when the matter, which had been previously discussed, received a fresh airing.

The rule, which the Commissioners drew up and then put-over until next week for action, stipulates that no tickets for boxing exhibitions can be sold except at the box office of the club. It is expected that there will be a storm of protest from some of the smaller clubs which have been using practically all of their boxers as ticket sellers.

Other business at yesterday's meeting consisted in the settlement of a complaint by Young Ryan against the Postman A. C. of Brooklyn for $10, and hearing a complaint by Jim Buckley, charging that a rival manager had done one of his boxers an injustice by spreading false reports about a bout. This case is to be fully aired at next week's meeting.

Gibson Matches Levinsky and Coffey

Manager Gibson of the Garden Athletic Club has arranged a return match between Battling Levinsky and Jim Coffey for Madison Square Garden Monday evening. Levinsky's manager has been holding off the contest as long as possible in order to permit his charge every opportunity to get in proper shape after his recent injury. Coffey has been coming along in the past months, having stopped Tony Ross and receiving a shade the better of a six-round bout with Levinsky at Philadelphia. In the case of a victory over Levinsky for Coffey, Gibson, who is looking after his interests, will issue a challenge to Gunboat Smith. Two other ten-round bouts between evenly matched boxers will be arranged to precede the final event.

McFarland Wins and Loses.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 4.—The suspension of Packey McFarland for one year from engaging in boxing contests in Wisconsin, ordered by the Wisconsin Boxing Commission on Dec. 16, for alleged "stalling" in his contest with Jack Britton in Milwaukee on Dec. 3, was to-day set aside by Judge Eschweiler of the Circuit Court, as he said the proceeding was irregular. The suspension ruling of Monday last stands, however, as McFarland was given an opportunity then to be heard by the commission, but failed to make his appearance, either in person or by counsel.

Leach Cross to Box Bloom.

Leach Cross after a long absence will get back into action to-night at the Empire A. C., when he will be opposed by Phil Bloom, a local lightweight, who has been coming steadily to the front ranks of local performers. The Cross-Bloom encounter will be the final of an interesting card from start to finish. In the semi-final also scheduled for ten rounds will show Johnny Lore of the west side and Jimmy Coffey, known as the Mohawk Indian. The first ten-rounder will bring together Ray Campbell, a lightweight, hailing from California, and Young Brown.

Coffroth Here for Bouts.

State League Wrangle Over Dates.

UTICA, N. Y., March 4.—The annual schedule meeting of the New York State Baseball League was held here to-night and developed into a protracted session. John H. Farrell of Auburn, President of the league and Secretary of the National Association, presided. At the last meeting it was decided that the league season would open April 29. This has been changed to one day later, the 30th. The season will close Sept. 13. The preliminary schedule submitted to the different teams met with considerable opposition, and the session became somewhat heated during the demands for holiday, Saturday and Sunday playing dates.

Intercollegiate Wrestling Tourney.

The preliminary arrangements for the intercollegiate wrestling championships, which are to be held at Philadelphia on March 27 and 28, have just been announced. Hugh Leonard of the New York Athletic Club will be the head referee, and will be assisted by Wolff of Pennsylvania and Bradley of Cornell. All contestants will be requested to weigh in at noon on March 27, when they must be within at least one pound of the necessary weight. On the following day they will be weighed in at 11 o'clock, and they will then be allowed a four-pound leeway. Because of its failure to attend the annual meeting in November, Yale will not compete in the championship meet, although it is a member of the association.

MERCHANTS WANT ARMY-NAVY GAME

Local Association Petitions Washington to Allow Big Football Event to be Played Here.

The annual football game between the Army and the Navy holds first rank among amateur sports in this country. The meeting between the Cadets of West Point and the Middies of Annapolis always attracts an enormous crowd of spectators from all over the country. Not infrequently the President himself attends the game, and the Secretaries of War and of the Navy, with the heads of the military and naval establishments, occupy places of honor.

At first these games were played either at West Point or at Annapolis, but for six years up to 1913 they were played in Philadelphia. New York City, through the Convention Bureau of the Merchants' Association, is endeavoring to bring them here.

The Board of Directors of the association has adopted resolutions asking that New York be chosen as the scene of the combat and setting forth the reasons why. These resolutions will be presented to-day to the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy in Washington by S. C. Mead, Secretary of the association. They are as follows:

Whereas, It appears that the site for this year's football match between the Army and Navy has not as yet been selected; and

Whereas, It has been demonstrated that New York is the only city that offers facilities for making this event truly national in character;

Therefore, be it resolved, That the Honorable Secretary of War and Secretary of the Navy be respectfully urged to recommend New York City as the place where the Army and Navy football games should be played, and that a copy of these resolutions be at once placed in their hands.

This event has come to attract the attention of the entire nation; it has so grown in national interest that the question calling for solution is to find a field that will satisfy the legitimate demands of supporters of athletics at the national schools. New York offers:

First—A splendid playing field.

Second—A greater number of seats than can be found anywhere else.

Third—A better arrangement of seats than can be found anywhere else; every spectator at New York sees the game as well as every other spectator. The arrangements for spectators are nearly perfect. In 1913 the control of the sale of tickets was practically absolute, very few finding their way into the hands of speculators.

Fourth—Facilities for reaching the field, already excellent. These are, nevertheless, to be greatly improved before the date of the game.

Fifth—A written guarantee of not less than $12,000 a year to the relief societies of the Army and Navy, respectively, making $24,000 in all to these excellent charities.

Sixth—Easy accessibility to both academies, to Washington and to all Eastern cities. If played in New York, the game is within easy traveling distance of 15,000,000 of people; in other words, of a greater number of people than can be reached anywhere else.

Seventh—Superior accommodations for the entertainment of visitors, as compared with those of Philadelphia. The hotels at Philadelphia are simply unable to meet the demand of those who attend the game.

In support of the claims of New York, the following additional reasons are adduced:

First—The objection of the Naval Academy to the greater distance to New York as compared with Philadelphia, and the fact that the midshipmen had no liberty last year on account of having to entrain immediately after the game, can be overcome by returning to Annapolis in sleeping cars, leaving New York at 10 P. M. This can be arranged without additional expense to the midshipmen.

Second—By playing the game in New York the two services are brought before the public through the press as they never have been brought before. It is certain that, by continuing to play the game in New York, great good cannot fail to result to both the Army and Navy.

Third—Not the least important feature of the game, if played in New York, is the opportunity it gives the greatest city in the land to come in personal contact, both during the game and after it, with the cadets and midshipmen, thus giving our citizens an opportunity of judging for themselves the results achieved by the two national academies. This contact, too, will certainly operate to broaden the horizon of all these young gentlemen by giving them an opportunity to enjoy the hospitality of the metropolis of the nation.

Fourth—The Naval Academy has already scheduled a game to be played with the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia on Oct. 17, thus already affording that city an opportunity to see a championship game in which the Navy is a contestant. It seems to us only fair, since the Navy has already decided to play a game at Philadelphia, that the great national match between the two academies should be played in New York.

Oxford Football Coach for Tigers.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 4.—Wilder Graves Penfield of Oxford University has been engaged to coach the Princeton 'Varsity football team next season, according to an official announcement made here to-night. He has been granted a half year leave of absence from Oxford, but will continue his studies in America and receive credit therefor at the English institution. Penfield coached the Princeton freshmen eleven last year.

Sportsman's Show at the Palace.

The Grand Central Palace has been transformed into a sportsman's paradise, and for the next ten days tales of the road, wood, and river will be oft told. The Third Travel, Vacation, and Sportsman's Show will open this afternoon, with a collection of fur-bearing animals, birds, and trophies of the chase, together with hunting and fishing paraphernalia, which is essential to the sportsman's comfort and success. Among the innovations this year will be a moonlight shoot every evening, individual and team matches for men and women, intercity, interclub, intercollegiate competitions, and the individual amateur and professional championships. More than 200 trapshooters are entered in the various events, which will be one of the daily attractions of the exhibition.

Gymnastic Championships.

The Metropolitan Championship Committee, appointed by President James E. Sullivan, will hold the championship meet this year under their own management at the New York Turn Verein, Eighty-fifth Street and Lexington Avenue, Wednesday evening, April 1. It has been decided to add dancing to the programme to immediately follow the games as an added feature to encourage the attendance of ladies and to create new interest in gymnastics. The meet this year promises to be an open one as the 1913 champions, P. Krimmel and Roy E. Moore have both turned professional. From the present outlook it will be a contest between the Swiss Turn Verein and the Bohemian Clubs with the New York Turn Verein making a three cornered fight for the club trophy. Entry blanks can be procured from the A. A. U. office, 21 Warren Street, and contestants are notified that the entries close March 25.

PHILADELPHIA, March 4.—During the indoor track meet at the University of Pennsylvania this afternoon Sewell, a sophomore, broke the Franklin Field indoor record for the pole vault, with a leap of 11 feet 6 inches. The 1,000-yard run was won by Webster, with a handicap of 30 yards, in 2:25. McCurdy, scratch, was second. Ted Meredith won the final of the sixty-yard dash in 0:06 2-5.

REIMHERR IS CHAMPION.

Turn Verein Fencer Wins National Junior Foils Title.

George Reimherr, Jr., of the New York Turn Verein, won the junior foils championship of America last night at the Turn Verein when, in the final bout of a protracted series he defeated P. W. Allison, New York A. C., by 5 touches to 0. The series was greatly prolonged by the indecision of the judges, who debated nearly every point scored in the tournament. By his victory Reimherr now becomes ineligible for future foil competitions.

Fifteen fencers, representing the New York A. C., Columbia University, New York Turn Verein, West Side Young Men's Christian Association, Fencers' Club, and Polytechnic Preparatory School, made their bids for the honors, the teams being made up as follows: New York A. C., F. J. Byrne, F. B. O'Connor, J. B. B. Parker, and P. W. Allison. Columbia University, Norman Clough, and Louis Mouquin. New York Turn Verein, Anton Reith, C. Cathcart, George Reimherr, Jr., and S. Montgomery. West Side Y. M. C. A., L. Schoonmaker, Paul Rosler, and H. H. Davis. Fencers' Club, H. A. Hirsch. Poly. Prep., S. Valentine, Jr.

Allison was injured early in his fray with Reimherr, which marked the concluding bout of the night, when he suffered a stab on the back of his hand as the result of a forceful lunge by his more powerful opponent, who went through the series undefeated.

After the teams had been divided into squads of five the work of finding the qualifiers for final honors proceeded with dispatch on the first and second strips, with P. W. Allison, New York A. C.; Norman Clough, Columbia; J. B. B. Porter, New York A. C., and George Reimberr, Jr., the victors. On the third strip the bouts were unusually long drawn-out, and found C. Cathcart, Turn Verein, the first to qualify. F. B. O'Conner and F. J. Byron, both of the New York A. C., tied for the other position, with three wins each and eight touches against, necessitating a fence-off, in which O'Conner won by five touches to four. Allison, New York A. C., and Reimherr, Turn Verein, both went through their bouts in the trials undefeated.

First to meet in the finals were Allison and Parker, both of the Winged Foot club. The bout was spirited and witnessed a victory for Allison by 5 to 2. Clough of Columbia then made short work of Cathcart, Turn Verein, both being left-handers, by a score of 5 to 0. In the bout between Reimherr and O'Connor it was remarked that the judges overlooked several touches which were made by the first named, who was eventually declared the winner by 5 touches to 4.

ATHLETE LOSES FINGER.

Submits to Amputation to Improve His Weight-Throwing.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., March 4.—John P. Lauler of the Irish-American Athletic Association of this city, winner of second place in the 24-pound shot and third in tossing the 56-pound weight at the national indoor championships at New York Monday night, has undergone the amputation of the middle finger of his right hand in the belief that his work with the weights will be improved thereby.

Several years ago he broke the finger and the bone knitted together badly, causing the digit to be stiff and rest diagonally across the others. When he started putting the shot he found the deformed finger bothered him greatly. Nevertheless, he won the New England championship title, although getting only second in New York. Lauler believes that with the finger amputated he will eventually be able to equal the world's record with the shot for distance and with the weight for height. The operation was performed at the Boothby Hospital in this city.

USE RELIANCE PLATFORM.

Old Cup Defender to Supply Parts for New Syndicate Yacht.

BRISTOL, R. I., March 4.—Some of the parts of the old cup defender Reliance will be used in the construction of the new Vanderbilt syndicate yacht now being built at the Herreshoff works here. Workmen from the Herreshoff plant to-day went to New York to remove the platform below the deck of the Reliance where the mast is stepped and bring it here to be placed in the new candidate for cup defender. The Reliance is at City Island and is owned by the Iselin syndicate.

The new boat, which is still nameless, is more than half completed. It is predicted that she will be ready for launching sooner than was expected.

Starting from scratch, Cobb forged to the front in the seventh lap and, after a short struggle with T. E. Nelson, who was placed on the ten-yard mark, won by twelve yards in 2:06 4-5. The old record, held by W. Anderson, was 2:08 2-5.

AUTO LICENSE BILL FOR CALLAN LAW

Imposes Higher Rates and Requires Owner Operators to Register.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 4.—A new motor vehicle bill to take the place of the Callan law was introduced to-day by Senator Walter R. Herrick of New York. The bill, which was drafted by Frederick R. Coudert, counsel to the National Highways Protective Association, re-enacts some of the provisions of the present law, but makes some radical changes. Senator Herrick says his bill contains provisions taken from motor vehicle laws of other States and from New York City's motor ordinances.

The registration fees proposed by the Herrick bill are higher than the prevailing rates. Automobiles are divided into five classes, as follows:

First—Those under 22 horse power, and weighing less than 2,000 pounds, paying a license fee of 50 cents a horse power.

Second—Those under 22 horse power and weighing more than 2,000 pounds, paying 60 cents a horse power.

Third—Those between 22 and 36 horse power, and weighing under 3,000 pounds, paying 70 cents a horse power.

Fourth—Those having between 22 and 36 horse power, and weighing more than 3,000 pounds, paying 80 cents a horse power.

Fifth—Those of 36 horse power or more, paying $1 a horse power.

Commercial trucks weighing more than two tons are to pay the license charge as above, with $10 extra. There is a flat rate of $10 for electric vehicles, except that electric trucks are to pay an excess weight charge of $10.

The Herrick bill requires operators of motor vehicles to be licensed, whether owners or chauffeurs. The licenses are to be revoked by the Secretary of State for cause. The question of revocation is left to the discretion of the Secretary of State. Following a fatal accident the driver of a motor vehicle loses his license by suspension, and he cannot secure another license unless he proves he was not responsible for the accident.

The bill requires that motor cycles shall be licensed upon the same basis as automobiles. It also requires that all operators shall wear badges. Owners of automobiles who file an affidavit that they have driven their cars 500 miles or more are exempt from examination for licenses.

Automobiles are limited in speed to fifteen miles an hour in territory which is "built up." The bill takes the definition of "built up" from the New York City ordinance. The Secretary of State is required to prepare and post notices at the limits of all territory coming within the definition "built up." The notices shall plainly set forth the speed limit allowed under the law.

MOTOR COMPANY SLEUTHS.

Dealers Put on Track of Stolen Cars from Central Department.

One of the large automobile companies has developed a system of tracing stolen cars of its marque through its own dealers. Accurate record is kept of all the numbers stamped on the motor chassis and various other parts of each car and its equipment. Some of these numbers are hidden, others are in plain sight, but when they are removed or defaced by the thief inquiry is pretty sure to follow. The man in charge of the system at the headquarters in Detroit, if given half a dozen numbers, can identify any one of the 150,000 or so cars of this make and supply the name of the original owner. A simple bulletin service from this department puts about 2,000 dealers in every part of the country on the trail of a stolen car.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Automobile Dealers' Association to elect officers, R. H. Johnston was elected President, Charles H. Larson was re-elected Vice President, and Frank Eveland was re-elected Secretary and Treasurer. Charles A. Stewart continues as General Manager. The large number of bills relating to automobiles pending before the Legislature as well as the number of ordinances before the Board of Aldermen in this city were discussed at the meeting, and it was decided to appoint a special committee to take charge of each of these subjects. Mr. Johnston will announce the personnel of the committees in a few days.

The cyclecar has made its début upon the stage, the occasion being a recent minstrel show in Tulsa, Oklahoma, in which one of these little vehicles was used. It may be that the cyclecar makers will have a show of their own in 1915, according to W. H. McIntyre, President of the Cyclecar Manufacturers' National Association.

"Automobile Row" was interested yesterday in the announcement of the receivership of the Palmer & Singer manufacturing Company of Long Island City, makers of cars of that name. Henry Drouet, of Drouet & Page, who have been the Eastern representatives of these cars, explained yesterday that the receivership, which would in no way affect the interests of his company, which represents also the Mitchell and Regal cars here, was entered into for the purpose of eliminating certain unfriendly interests in the company, and was not occasioned by financial stringency. Mr. Drouet added that arrangements had been made to continue service and parts supply. It was also said that Charles A. Singer, the representative of the company, intended to organize a new company to be called the Singer Motor Car Company, and continue the manufacture of cars.

College Swimmers After Titles.

Six events are scheduled for the individual intercollegiate swimming championships to-morrow night in the tank of the College of the City of New York. In the fifty yards swim Yale has entered seven men, C. N. N. Y., two, and Columbia, Princeton, and Pennsylvania, one each. The fancy diving will bring out a good list of contestants, in which all the members of the association will be represented, and will include Arthur McAleenan of Yale. There is a good entry list for the 100 and 200 yards swimming events, and the plunge for distance. A freshman relay race has been arranged between Pennsylvania and Princeton and an "outlaw" fifty yards swim is on the programme for colleges outside of the Intercollegiate Swimming Association.

Y. M. H. A. Championship Games.

The Metropolitan Young Men's Hebrew Association League will hold its second annual indoor championships in the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory. A full list of events will be contested for, and regular Y. M. H. A. gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded to the first, second, and third man to finish in each event.

JUMPING AT DURLAND'S.

Reve d'Or Wins Feature Event at Weekly Academy Ride.

The weekly horse show classes at Durland's have been discontinued until after the Spring horse show, which is to be revived next month. Instead of the show classes the usual cotillon ride will be held every Wednesday night, with games following the ride. Next Wednesday night polo or basketball will make up the remainder of the programme.

The cotillon last night brought out about seventy-five riders, led by Carl Sturzer and Miss Bennett. This was followed by a game of jeu de barre, in which the participants were Charles Dickel, F. Magdin, and Arthur Naylor. Mr. Dickel was the winner. In a special jumping class over a fence four feet six inches high H. Hansenn's Reve d'Or won the blue ribbon and G. W. Crossman's Wilton was second.

SAPOLIO CUP FOR HUNTER.

Miss Slee Wins the Chipchase Trophy Over the Jumps.

Competition for the Sapolio Cup donated by George Chipchase for jumping over the bars brought out clever horsewomanship last night at the Central Park Riding Academy, following the weekly music ride. Performances over the jumps only were considered, and when the nine nominations had completed their trials the judges were deadlocked in their opinions between Miss E. L. Slee, who rode the brown gelding Hunter, and Miss M. Content, on the bay gelding Romeo. Both horses showed themselves to be exceedingly good timber toppers, with the result that a jump-off was necessitated.

Both mounts took the three rounds in the regular performance without a falter, but in the jump-off at twice around both failed to make clean scores, with the decision going to Miss Slee. She was presented with the cup in the centre of the ring.

THE STATE DEPARTMENT'S LOSS.

Mr. JOHN BASSETT MOORE's resignation leaves a vacancy, not to say a vacuum, in the State Department. In the letter he has placed in the President's hands he refers to an understanding as to the length of time during which he was to retain his present office. Whether the conditions of Prof. MOORE's great service to the Government in the Department of State had become unbearable, as has been not infrequently reported, is not definitely known. What is known, what is plain to all men, is that in his retirement the Administration suffers a most serious loss.

We are fond of saying in this country that no man is indispensable, that if the organization is solidly built up all will go well no matter who retires. But the State Department's organization is not solidly built up. Mr. BRYAN is without the knowledge, the experience, and the habits of mind that qualify for the Secretaryship of State, and he finds it necessary, or at least convenient, to be absent from his post very often, sometimes when important negotiations are in a critical stage. No member of his staff can be looked upon as specially qualified to advise or guide his chief. The diplomatic service abroad has been completely transformed by the ravages of the spoilsmen; the tested men, the experienced men, have given way in favor of Mr. BRYAN's friends and the friends of Mr. BRYAN's friends. This circumstance makes it still more imperative that there should be competence and direction in the department.

There was competence, there was direction, so long as JOHN BASSETT MOORE held the post of Counselor to the Department, ranking next to Mr. BRYAN. International law is his special province, a branch in which he ranks very high as an authority. He is deeply versed in the principles and the traditions of diplomatic intercourse. His judgment of policies and procedures is so sound and his knowledge so extensive and varied that any Administration might deem itself fortunate in securing his services as Secretary of State. He was made second to the Secretary, and there has been an impression that routine duties have been imposed upon Mr. MOORE, duties belonging to the drudgery of the department which he never should have been called upon to perform, while in some important matters he has not been consulted. If these general beliefs accord with the facts it is not surprising that Mr. MOORE has resigned. His retirement at this time, when questions of importance and of much delicacy have arisen in our relations with several foreign powers, will be regarded with a misgiving comparable to that which would have been felt had Secretary SEWARD retired from Mr. LINCOLN's Cabinet, or HAMILTON FISH from that of President GRANT.

OPEN-AIR PRISON REFORM.

If the disease-breeding Sing Sing prison is done away with as a consequence of the conferences on prison reform, beginning with a mass meeting in this city to-morrow night arranged by the Woman's Department of the National Civic Federation, progress will have been made in the intelligent treatment of prisoners in this State. Confinement is not of itself a measure of reform; the principle as applied at Sing Sing has meant moral and physical infection and death.

Gov. GLYNN, who will preside at the mass meeting, will hear the record of achievement at the Central Experimental Prison Farm at Guelph, Canada, from the lips of its Warden, Mr. J. T. GILMOUR of Toronto, and Gov. WEST of Oregon will tell about the prison camps in that State and their successful application of the "honor" system. In New Jersey, in Pennsylvania, in the District of Columbia, and in many of the Western States the prisons are being established on great farms, and their inmates are transferred to work in the fields and on the roads. The cell blocks with their high prison walls are being abandoned and torn down.

A State farm prison should be built to replace Sing Sing, and that institution, if retained, should be used merely as a receiving station for convicted prisoners, who will be examined by scientific experts and assigned to various institutions wherein they may be aided to become useful citizens or treated for mental defects and diseases. The placing of the able-bodied prisoners on farms will make the State prisons and asylums largely self-supporting. The experimental farming at the Great Meadows Prison, at Comstock, and at the State Farm for Women at Valatie, in this State, is yielding the good results reported from other States, while the application of the "honor" system at Auburn since January last seems to warrant at least some modification of repressive methods of discipline.

It will be noted that public-spirited women of this city and State are prime movers in the coming conferences on prison reform. It is a province of discussion looking to the passage of non-partisan laws which women are occupying in most States. They are urging prison reform, and effectually. They do not appear to be handicapped for lack of votes. They have learned their lesson from men of light and leading who depend on sheer personal rather than political influence to effect far-reaching reforms in laws and customs. The women should be cheered for the broadening forces they are bringing to bear on public measures and policies.

ENCOURAGING RIOTERS.

Not so much to the followers of the detestable I. W. W., pursuing by obvious means their plan to create disturbance, but to the ill-advised abettors of their outrageous proceedings should the protests of the decent part of the community be directed. The I. W. W. agitators have been welcomed and fed by too many clergymen and others to whom this public ought to be able to look for encouragement of the law-abiding and discouragement of the lawless. We are quite aware that one or two of the ministers of the Gospel who have lent themselves too readily to the schemes of the mischief-makers are men who are not lightly to be accused of seeking self-advertisement. Therefore it would be unfair to specify others whose sincerity in the matter might otherwise fairly be questioned.

There has been too much temporizing with so-called socialism and anarchy in the churches, however, and it is as obviously the duty of a minister as it is the duty of a banker or a merchant to refuse to countenance the riotous spirit and to call for police aid when confronted by outlaws. If the clergymen who have laid themselves open to harsh, but justified, criticism by fawning upon the invaders of their churches, feeding them with kind words and unappreciated sandwiches, really believe that the outlaws represent the worthy unemployed let them provide work for these idlers to do. Firewood is always needed, and the provision of a few logs and axes would enable these fellows to earn money to pay for their own food and lodging. But it is perfectly well known that they are not workingmen out of employment. They will not work. The unions disown them. The raids are larks for them, and they are having great fun. Incidentally, they are helping the clergymen and their heedless assistants in the creation of a general spirit of unrest which may have serious consequences. These manifestations of the I. W. W.'s power for evil ought to be left to the police. It is their business to protect the city from rioters, and riot is the object of the I. W. W.

THE ISSUE.

We hear a good deal about the "fight" that President WILSON is engaged in for the repeal of the tolls exemption clause of the Panama Canal law. Most frequently it is spoken of as a contest with his own party; at other times as a contest with Congress. In all cases it is represented as his fight, in which his authority, his prestige, the success of his Administration, are involved.

So far as his own party is concerned, we do not see that the stand taken by the President can logically be opposed on grounds of party policy. It is true that it contradicts an expression in the party platform. It is equally true that that expression is in flat contradiction with the essential and well-established principles of the party. You cannot repeal a constitution by a resolution, and a paragraph in a platform inconsistent with a fundamental principle of the party cannot prevail against that principle. The Democratic Party, by its aim, by its spirit, by the history of its action when in or out of power, is definitely and irrevocably pledged to oppose monopoly and subsidy. The tolls exemption is a subsidy for the benefit of a monopoly. The course to which the party has long been committed cannot be changed lightly, without thorough discussion and mature reflection and freedom of action. Mr. WILSON, therefore, is in no possible sense in conflict with his party, but is its defender. He stands for what his party has stood for during the whole of its existence. He is protecting and rescuing it from betrayal. He is seeking to bring it back to a sound and consistent policy, to vindicate its good faith, to promote its usefulness for the nation.

But the matter is not in its essence merely a party matter, though it deeply involves the honor of the Democracy, which it is the duty of Mr. WILSON, as the authorized leader of the party, to preserve, or, in this instance, to restore. Here is a question of national honor, of the value of the word of the Government of the United States. It is on this ground that the President has taken his stand. He represents the nation in all its dealings and relations with other nations. He has in charge the national faith. He is bound to take note, not only of the obligation under which the nation lies to keep its promises, but of the immense and lasting interests which bid the Government to observe that high obligation. At the moment he is not likely to ignore these interests. In a situation of peculiar difficulty he has been called upon to ask the utmost patience and good-will of the chief Powers of Europe. He cannot but feel how important it is that in this situation the United States should be able to keep the confidence and respect of other nations. If, in matters where no treaty obligations exist, he asks, as he must ask, the trustful acquiescence and co-operation of other Powers, how absurd it would be to evade treaty obligations, to treat them with levity, to assert that we must be our own judges as to what binds us or does not bind us. For, if we can do that, if we are not too honest and too sensible to do it, what reliance is to be placed upon our less formal assurances, such as the President must give in the situation in which we are involved.

He has, therefore, the right, and it is his duty, to appeal with the utmost earnestness to the representatives of all parties, and especially to those of his own party, to retrace the mistaken step that has been taken, to support him and reinforce him in a matter in which he, as the head of the nation, has been needlessly and foolishly impeded and embarrassed. In this appeal he speaks for the American nation. He speaks as the latest of a long line of Presidents, who, however they may have differed in party views and aims, have steadfastly maintained a high standard of national faith. And we beg to assure the members of Congress who are inclined to oppose him that on an issue of this sort the judgment of the American people is not likely to be obscured by sophistry or warped by apparent interest, and it will visit severe condemnation on those who undertake to betray or deceive it.

THE PRIMARIES.

The newly elected Chairman of the Democratic State Committee, Mr. WILLIAM CHURCH OSBORN, begins well with the announcement that he accepted the Chairmanship because he wanted to see the direct primary law work successfully in the party's choice of candidates next Fall. Mr. WILLIAM ALLAIRE SHORTT, whom Chairman OSBORN has selected to be Secretary of the State Committee, will give special attention to this law to the end that it may be practically applied.

It should operate, as in New Jersey, on the first day of registration, thus assuring convenience and a large vote; the voters should have sample ballots five days before the primaries, so that they may pick their candidates at leisure, and watchers of both parties should be present to prevent fraud. Senator HERRICK yesterday introduced the National Democratic Club's bill embodying these vital provisions. If Senator BLAUVELT's Committee on the Judiciary palters with the bill or suppresses it the primaries will be in the hands of Mr. MURPHY. Then we shall see post-primary petitions circulated by the Progressives, and the Bull Moose will have an opportunity to present better candidates to the voters than the primaries will have yielded through the older parties. To ignore the amending bill would be poor political judgment as well as bad public policy.

A CHEERFUL VICTIM OF THE TARIFF.

President WOOD's report to the American Woolen Company, by some called a trust, strikes the right note not only as to the attitude of woolen manufacturers toward the new tariff, but of all business toward the law of the land. This is all the more creditable because the report had to take account of some adverse facts. The year reported upon had included a serious strike, which lessened sales and deliveries of goods. The passage of the tariff required a revaluation of all raw material and manufactured stock. The result was a reduction of the previous surplus by the year's deficit of $677,694, leaving, nevertheless, a very substantial surplus of over $8,000,000, and quick-assets of eight times the liabilities. The point is not the accounts of the company, but the spirit in which its management meets conditions which are a reverse for it, although they might well be envied by the less prosperous.

In the opinion of President WOOD, and many more like-minded, nothing is so bad as agitation and uncertainty. To have arrived at a new and sure starting point is a great gain, independent of what the starting point is. The company now knows the conditions on which it can do business, and it proposes to do much business, not only at home, but abroad. In the words of the report:

> We are going ahead with confidence in our great equipment and broad resources, * * * in the efficiency of our machinery, in the ability and loyalty of our personnel, and in the superiority of the woolen goods which the company makes over the mass of foreign goods of a similar description.

So great is the President's confidence that he welcomes the larger importations of foreign goods under the lower tariff, because the more of them Americans use the greater will be their appreciation of the home article. The changed economic policy of the country has caused the company to make thorough inquiry into foreign methods of making and marketing woolens, with the intention of introducing the American makes to foreign consumption, for the company believes that it has the means of manufacturing more cheaply than the foreigners, despite their lower wages.

The courage and good temper of this declaration, if imitated by others, would mark much progress toward that reconciliation of business to the law which is the first step toward prosperity under the new freedom. If business men are sore and grouchy they do no good for others and little for themselves. Full energy cannot be put both into fighting the law and doing business. Frank and complete acceptance of the law, whether the tariff or the law against trusts or any other law, is the first condition of the constitution of peace.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Denial that Need Not Wait.

JOHN T. LENFESTEY is known in Chicago, it seems, as a man of substance and repute—a merchant in a large way and member of respectable organizations, social, political, and commercial. As one of a delegation representing Illinois manufacturers, he has been traveling through South America with letters of introduction, including one from the Secretary of State, that vouched for him to all and sundry as a man to be trusted.

Evidently he has had a chance while on his travels to get large quantities of accurate and valuable information, and the natural impulse would be to take for granted the truth of anything heard by him that he himself thought to be true. At any rate, the natural impulse would not be to make off-hand denial, unqualified and prompt, of a statement of his. Yet, without the slightest hesitation and with no sense of danger, we pronounce false the story sent from London by Mr. LENFESTEY about Col. ROOSEVELT's conduct in Rio de Janeiro.

Probably somebody did tell the Chicago man that, after the Colonel had accepted the magnificent hospitalities offered to him in the Brazilian capital, he astonished and grieved his generous hosts by turning in a bill for $3,000 for a brief address delivered by him when made a member of Brazil's Historical and Geographical Society. Probably, too, Mr. LENFESTEY believed the story, the human mind having practically limitless powers in the way of believing what it wants to believe. Just the same, the story is absurd on its face. It has no more foundation in fact than did those not less gravely told, year after year, by slanderers and their fly-gobbling victims about the Colonel's drinking habits.

In that case there was a mild milk punch taken by medical order after a hard day's work on the stump; in this one there is, perhaps, the honorarium given to distinguished guests by many such societies as the one mentioned.

Col. ROOSEVELT, in the opinion of some of us, has his faults. They have not escaped notice or comment. But he cannot fairly be charged, and never before has been, with an unworthy exploitation for money of his fame, and he would not sin from ignorance when engaged in the exchange of courtesies distinctly international.

Only His Analogy Is Wrong.

An up-State Judge, in advocating the passage of a bill now before the Legislature giving to cities of the second and third class local option as to Sunday baseball, uses as argument the always dangerous logic of analogy.

He and some friends of his, he says, went out in a field of a Sunday morning and amused themselves by knocking small balls about with long sticks. No representative of the law molested them or even tried to make them afraid. In a neighboring field some other men, who knocked about a larger ball with larger sticks, were arrested and later were fined. This seemed to the Judge wrong, and, in expression of his disapproval, he put an end to so much of Sunday golf as happened to come within his jurisdiction as a golf club officer, and he declared that he would not let the one game go on until the ban on the other had been raised.

The analogy fails because the two games are so different. Sunday golf may imperil the souls of its players, but it never disturbs the devotions of other people, and it is not, as Sunday baseball too often is, an expedient for the collection of gate money.

But Sunday baseball, though lacking some of Sunday golf's mitigations and excuses, is not without others that, in the minds of not a few quite decent and considerate people, give it a strong claim for tolerance. To begin with, it is obviously better than not a few other Sunday amusements which are not prohibited, in spite of being equally noisy and even more mercenary. Any ball player who chooses to go to church has plenty of time for doing it, and is rather more likely to go than is he who seeks instead almost any of the irreligious joys to be found within four walls.

Properly restricted as to place, time, and commercialism, a good deal can be said for Sunday baseball in towns where a majority of the people want it. So we are obliged to reverse the up-State Judge as to the close connection between Sunday golf and Sunday baseball, but toward his conclusion that the bill he favors should be passed we seriously incline.

An Attack from the Grave.

How strange it is that so many people who show while alive a keen desire to keep family wars and rows from public knowledge should take seeming delight in bringing them to light at last by means of a will that fiercely attacks and denounces some close relative.

The widow of "R. L. S." is the last to do this posthumous ventilating of a domestic quarrel, for, in cutting off her daughter-in-law with a bequest of $5, Mrs. STEVENSON set down for all to see the charge that this member of her little circle was characterized by "incredible ferocity," and had pursued with "malicious slanders" one on whose bounty she had lived for many years.

There is something very terrible about a blow thus delivered from the impregnable safety of the grave. Not always undeserved, of course, it is yet always irresponsible, and the possibility of error made, of injustice done, is deliberately ignored in this form of punishment or revenge.

Toward the dead an almost invariable tenderness of consideration is shown. They owe the living something for that, and these maledictory wills repudiate the debt. Their [illegible] right of admission to probate is at [illegible].

PATENT LAW DELAYS.

Inventors Without Money Cannot Protect Their Claims.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your recent comment upon our outrageously imperfect patent laws, as applied to the Wright Brothers' invention of the aeroplane, could, doubtless, be duplicated in hundreds of other cases, but which are different from theirs in that unfortunately the inventors did not have the money to prosecute their just claims and so were forced to the wall.

Still more flagrant than the abuses of the Patent Office of which you speak are those which are under cover and of which the world seldom hears. As an illustration permit me to cite my own case. I applied for a further patent on my invention of the wireless telephone in August, 1908, and after having five claims allowed by the United States Patent Office, which brought the time up to October, 1910, (two years,) I did not permit the patent to issue as I was desirous of obtaining the other numerous claims to which I was entitled. Thus my cause was left pending in the Patent Office until July, 1912, when my patent counsel withdrew from the case and I then found that all the valuable claims which had been allowed me up to 1910 had been disallowed.

Here, then, is a patent in which two years were required to obtain five claims, and after these claims were allowed to stand for nearly two years more, they were, curiously enough, rejected. If it required two years for the Patent Examiner to ascertain that I was entitled to these claims it would seem it should not have taken him another two years, approximately, to find out that his previous conclusions were in error.

If I had sufficient funds I could even yet secure a monopoly on the wireless telephone which would be at least as effective as any now granted under the present laws and conditions. As it is my patent is still pending, and I am fighting, against desperate odds it is true, but I believe, as I have always believed, that I shall yet win out.

POISONED STUDENT'S FAULT.

Dean Rusby Says He Did Not Obtain Seeds in Classroom.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Kindly permit me to correct the erroneous statements which appeared in most of this morning's dailies regarding the poisoning of one of our students by eating jequirity seeds. The gentleman did not obtain these seeds in the classroom, but in some way unknown to us. As a part of the thorough instruction in such matters required by pharmacists, we supply every student with typical samples of all poisonous substances, but this is done only in the second year of their work and under the greatest precautions.

They are carefully instructed, not only as to identifying the poisonous drugs, but as to their dangerous properties. No student thus receiving them would think of eating them unless insane or possessed with a suicidal intent. Mr. Dworkin was a first-year student and had no right to secure possession of any of these poisonous seeds. We are happy to be informed that he is on the road to recovery.

Inconsiderate Subway Readers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While going downtown this morning via the Subway I boarded Car 3,248 and observed that of those sitting on one side of half of the car nine were reading, seven men and two women.

The former was absorbed in their newspapers and the latter in books—the majority of the papers being THE TIMES.

Of those standing in front of us, six were reading papers.

Now, what I am "kicking" against is that so many people seem to be devoid of or unmindful of the interests of others, inasmuch as out of the thirteen newspaper readers only two had their papers folded in half—the others being spread out their full length, the worst offenders being the readers of THE TIMES. One would suppose that reading your journal would have instilled more consideration and thoughtfulness in them.

To cap it all, those standing, by reason of their indifference, shut out the light of those sitting.

The Municipal Lodging House.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In an address made by one of these I. W. W. men statements were made condemning the Municipal Lodging House. As a resident of New York, interested in seeing what this great city is really doing for its poorest, I visited the Municipal Lodging House on East Twenty-sixth Street. I found it spotlessly clean. There were good beds, neat and in good order. The food being prepared looked wholesome. A bath is compulsory for each guest. This is a necessary precaution if the place is to be kept in a sanitary condition, but the bath, I am told, is objected to by some who most sorely need it.

The only trouble in this city, where all want to help those who are good citizens but in need, is that too many of the homeless do not know how to get to the places of shelter provided by the city, particularly the women and girls. Is there not some way in which the addresses of these houses could be placed in factories and public halls where the laboring classes meet?

Central Park Snowbound.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Park Commissioner did nothing to open the roads in Central Park on the west side to any extent after either storm. He could have run the old-fashioned triangular snow plow during the storms and after them and kept the snow piled up at the sides of the roadways without much expense. This would have enabled carriages and automobiles to use the Park.

The Commissioner should not be entirely blamed for being unprepared, as he has retained the old staff, but it seems decay has entered there as well as in other bureaus of the Park Department. They were not prepared for any kind of snow, and did not use the appliances they had. It would take a few hours to rig up several old-fashioned triangular snow plows, and they could have been run during the storm, and certainly they could have been run during the second storm, and something learned from the lessons of the first.

Lincoln's Successful Rival.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have met here this Winter two granddaughters of Cyrus Edwards, whose letter was published in THE TIMES of Sunday in the account of Mr. Lincoln's candidacy for the Commissionership of the General Land Office in 1849. They have been very much interested in the account. It is a pleasure to report on their authority that the friendship which had been very warm between Mr. Edwards and Mr. Lincoln was only cooled, not broken off, by their disagreement over the office. It was soon resumed, and was never again disturbed or abated.

Dey Street Obstructed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

For the past two months or more the north side of Dey Street, between Broadway and Church, has been impeded by an obstruction of scaffolding, elevated three steps above the sidewalk, compelling the public coming from the Hudson Terminal or the Subway station at either corner of Dey Street to climb the steps in using the sidewalk or take to the street. Also this scaffolding is at present covered with ice and melting snow, making it still more of a nuisance and possibly a danger to the pedestrian compelled to pass to and fro.

CENTRAL PARK'S PLAN.

Commissioner Ward Is Resolved to Keep It Inviolate.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With what it is to be hoped is characteristic intelligence, Commissioner Ward has put his finger on the exact spot of weakness in the care of Central Park—the lack of proper means for the prevention of vandalism. Mr. Olmsted, in an official document to the then Park Board, wrote in 1873:

> The designers of the Central Park aimed to provide, or, rather, to retain and develop in it, certain elements of interest and attraction which if successful would be almost peculiar to itself. They saw from the beginning that the danger of failure lay chiefly in the liability of misunderstanding, misuse, and misappropriation of these elements of design by the public. They saw also, quite as distinctly sixteen years ago as now, that in this respect the practicability and value of their plan turned upon the question whether a keeper's service adequate to its special requirements could be maintained upon it.

That a few vandals should be allowed to destroy that which was made for all to enjoy is preposterous. The silly catch-phrase, "Shall we spare the grass and spoil the child?" is nothing but a barrier behind which park destroyers would screen themselves, while throughout the literature of the park we find everywhere a solicitude for the welfare of the child that needs no cant or hypocrisy to support it. In some 700 acres of park it was impossible to supply every athletic or play demand. "The problem is to ascertain this limit and establish such regulation as will control it." Professional tennis courts and ball fields were not to be thought of, the park as a playground was to be reserved to the children under 16 years of age, it was to be made an aid to the educational system of the city. "No unfriendly allegations of favoritism to one class or another would have any foothold for mischief. The children that attend the schools are the children of the people." Such words as these form a fine contrast to the cant of the destroyers and vagarians:

> Sports, games, and parades in which comparatively few can take part will only be admissible in cases where they may be supposed to contribute indirectly to the pleasure of a majority of those visiting the park. The park is intended to furnish healthful recreation for the poor and the rich, the young and the old, the vicious and the virtuous, so far as each can partake therein without infringing upon the rights of others, and no further.

In 1862 there were 4,326,500 visitors to the park; in 1873 there were 10,060,159. Twenty-five millions would be a conservative estimate of the number today. Surely, in his endeavors to make the Central Park of use to the many and prevent its misuse by any, Commissioner Ward is entitled to the loyal support of every intelligent citizen.

St. Mark's and the Unemployed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

That the position of St. Mark's Church in regard to the recent sheltering of certain unemployed men in the church premises be subject to no misunderstanding, I inclose the following resolution unanimously adopted at the parish meeting of St. Mark's on Wednesday evening, March 4.

"The members of the Parish of the Protestant Episcopal Church of St. Mark's in the Bowery, associated in the parish meeting this 4th day of March, in the year of our Lord 1914, mindful of our Divine Master's command to succor the poor and needy, and not forgetful of our responsibilities as holders of its property in trust for the purposes of its formation, do hereby indorse the action of our rector and extend our sympathies to such of the unemployed as are in need of work and willing to do it.

"We have no sympathy, however, with lawlessness and disorder as a means of alleviating suffering, nor have we any purpose of allowing our church to be made an instrument in carrying out such purposes by any political or economic organization."

Inventors Not Protected.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with particular interest the observations and suggestions of Mr. Wright with respect to patents and the great disadvantages an inventor has to contend with under our present Patent Office system. I also have had some patent experiences, and must admit that when I start "to go down the line" offered for the getting of a patent, I feel that I am about to "run the gantlet" between a double line of sharpers.

What is there to prevent some one in the Patent Office from doing just what a crooked patent attorney might do, if the invention was of sufficient value to produce the required temptation to cause some one to steal it? I cannot see where the invention has any protection at all when you come right down to it, and it would not be a bad idea if some of the politicians at Washington were to give a little attention to the present congested and mixed-up condition of affairs in our Patent Office at Washington. Let the inventors get together and clean up the matter.

Schools as Social Centres.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to Mr. Samuel A. Lewisohn's letter in your recent issue, I beg to say that many are convinced of the importance of working out a satisfactory method of using our school buildings by neighborhood groups, as outlined in Mr. Lewisohn's letter. The Board of Education should realize the importance of the problem and should consider the same from a serious point of view. Mr. Lewisohn's suggestion, that a special committee of the board be formed to confer with the Social Welfare Committee of the Board of Estimate, is a splendid one, and I trust that the board will realize the importance of the suggestion and act on the same.

Whose fault is it that Becker and his wife are exploited in moving pictures? THE ALIENIST'S SONG.

I drink the health of the feminine
    croaker,
  The female who sees only trouble ahead!
While others are eager to gag her or choke her
  I beam with delight at her croakings
    instead!

Here's health and long life to the male who's predicting
  War, ruin, disaster, and woe for our land!
While others their cuss words are on him inflicting
  I smile at his notions and fondle his hand.

Long life to the fellow who prophesies trouble!
  Long life for the woman who warns of a crash!
Oh, would that the generous number was double
  Of those who foresee we are going to smash!

Should nobody herald the nation's upsetting,
  And nobody harp on our "bad human strains,"
Pray where would an alienist ever be getting
  A fee worth his while for examining

AWARD ELEVATED CONTRACT

Milliken Brothers to Supply Steel for B. R. T. Improvements.

The Public Service Commission has authorized the B. R. T. to let the contract for the steel for the third tracks and the reconstruction of the Fulton Street Elevated Railroad to Milliken Brothers, Incorporated. The contract covers the railroad from Nostrand Avenue to Sackman Street, a distance of 12,368 feet, and calls for about 12,000 tons of steel. The price bid for it was $38.90 a ton, or a total of $466,800.

The commission has also awarded the contract for the supply of ties and timber needed for the Fourth Avenue Subway to J. H. Burton & Co., Incorporated. The price is $96,540, and delivery must be made in from 100 to 240 days.

The Public Service Commission has approved the assignment of the contract for the construction of Section 5 of the Seventh Avenue Interborough Subway by Canavan Brothers to the United States Realty and Improvement Company of 111 Broadway. This contract was awarded to Canavan Brothers as the lowest bidders, with $2,401,306, last December, and W. S. Kinnear, President of the United States Realty & Improvement Company, explained to the commission that poor health of the senior partner of the original firm was the only reason why it wished to get rid of the contract.

Mr. Kinnear was formerly chief engineer of the Michigan Central Railroad, and had charge of the construction of the Detroit River tunnel. Section 5 runs under Seventh Avenue from Thirtieth Street to Sixteenth Street, and the United States Realty and Improvement Company has submitted the lowest bid on the section immediately to the south of it. The commission is expected to award the contract to the company for this section also, and it will then have two continuous sections to build.

WANTS MEN TO TRY CHURCH

One Trip a Year Won't Breed a Habit, Ellis Parker Butler Says.

To help along the "Go-to-Church" movement in Flushing, Ellis Parker Butler, author of "Pigs Is Pigs," has contributed this to the campaign:

"Of course he may go oftener if he wishes, but I believe every man should go to church once a year whether he thinks it is too often or not. In the first place there can be no real objection, on moral grounds, to any man attending church once a year. Doing a thing once does not make it a habit, although it is true that if a man attended church services regularly once a year he might get into the habit of going often, but even so I doubt if his neighbors would hold it against him. So far as I have been able to judge there is nothing inside a church in Flushing that would tend to degrade or incriminate any man. They are quite respectable, I assure you.

"The man who never attends church should go once a year in order to 'make good' his usual excuses for not attending church. Unless he goes to hear the preacher once a year how can he be sure he does not like the preacher? Since he heard him last the preacher may have improved. You can never tell. There may be an entirely new preacher. How can a man say, 'I don't go because the seats are so uncomfortable,' when, for all he knows, new seats may have been put in? If a man does not go to church for any other reason, he ought to go once a year to refresh his dislike for it. When he grows old and has grandchildren it would be a great thing to be able to sit by the fire and say, reminiscently: 'Little ones, I am old and wise, and I have seen many things. I remember how years ago I once went to church.'"

MIGHT REVIVE 100 CHARTERS

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 4.—It was charged before the Senate Railroad Committee to-day that the passage of Senator Foley's bill extending the time within which railroads might begin and complete their lines would revive at least 100 dead charters of companies which had failed to carry out the requirements of the railroad law. Ex-Judge Edward Hatch, who appeared in behalf of the Buffalo Frontier Terminal Company, denied that the bill would have that effect. The bill requires that companies shall begin construction within five years from the date of securing a certificate of public necessity from the Public Service Commission instead of within five years from the time of incorporation.

Ex-Judge Hatch said the Buffalo Frontier Terminal Company, incorporated in 1904, had been prevented from beginning its construction by legal proceedings. He said the company was entitled to the relief sought by the proposed legislation.

Ransom H. Gillette, representing interests in the Lebanon Valley, said he believed the bill would revive the charter of the Troy, Rensselaer & Pittsfield Railroad Company, which was organized several years ago by the late Frank S. Black and others. Mr. Hatch said he had presented an amendment which would prevent revival of charters of such companies.

M. C. Spratt represented the New York Central Railroad in opposition to the bill. He said a charter often was used as a club over existing railroads and not in good faith.

Drs. James and Flexner Tell Committee Charges Are Groundless.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 4.—The charge that fifty little children in the Bronx, sent to the charity wards of various hospitals to be treated, had been inoculated with the serum of a disease with results disastrous to themselves, was declared groundless by Henry James, Director of the Rockefeller Institute, when he appeared before the Assembly Judiciary Committee this afternoon to oppose the Herrick-Gallup bill, which provides for the creation of a commission to investigate practices in connection with vivisection and medical experimentation on human beings as well as animals.

The charge was made before the Senate and Assembly Judiciary Committees last week, at a hearing on the same measure, by Herman S. Deutsch, Secretary of a settlement society in the Bronx. Mr. Deutsch had pledged himself to appear to-day and present affidavits in support of his sensational charges. He was not on hand, however, and it was said that he was ill.

"Health Commissioner Goldwater of New York has investigated the charge of Mr. Deutsch," said Director James. "His report will be given to the public in a few days. In the meantime I have been authorized to tell you, gentlemen of the committee, that the charge has been found without foundation."

Dr. Simon Flexner, Director of Laboratories at the Rockefeller Institute, gently chided the advocates of the bill for their unfamiliarity with the general subject under discussion at the hearing.

TO AMEND RACE TRACK LAW.

Failure of Present Anti-Betting Measure Charged at Hearing.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 4.—Howard Clark Barber, Superintendent of the Society for the Suppression of Crime, appeared before the Assembly Codes Committee to-day to favor the Knight bill, designed to make the anti-betting law more effective. He said it was to meet the decision of Justice Scudder, who declared that conviction under the existing law could be secured only by proving professional bookmaking. The Knight bill is directed against those who are "engaged" in bookmaking.

Mr. Barber exhibited photographs to show that betting was as common at Saratoga and Belmont Park last Summer as before the anti-betting law was enacted. He said that bookmakers openly quoted odds, which were written by men who carried slips of paper in their pockets. He charged that John B. Stanchfield and August Belmont were responsible for the loopholes in the existing law. He added that the Pinkerton detectives made little effort to enforce the law against gambling.

Canon William Chase of Brooklyn declared that six race tracks were making arrangements for racing this year in this State. He also urged the passage of the Knight bill.

CUPID IS SCORNED BY MRS. C. P. GILMAN

MARVELS AT HIS EFFIGIES

He's Only a First Aid to True Marriage and His Work Is Overrated —Six Men Suffer with Him.

Cupid's ears must have burned yesterday morning if he was anywhere in the vicinity of the College Hall of the Hotel Astor when Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman lectured on "'Love,' Love, and Marriage," for along with the rest of things called male he came in for a lot of criticism—kindly criticism, indeed, yet none the less positive. Cupid was referred to frequently as "this little thing with wings" and "a fat baby with a bow and arrow."

That there should be statues to this plump mythical god and none to mother love was a state of affairs which Mrs. Gilman deplored, and she spent nearly an hour endeavoring to show that mother love and the uplift of woman from her present state of subjection to man eventually would cure most of the ills of this world, both physical and spiritual.

When mother love had triumphed and it was possible for women to select their mates, she said, not more than 20 per cent. of the marriages would result in divorces. Of this 20 per cent., she said, 15 per cent. represented "persons who couldn't make a go of it the first shot," and 5 per cent. persons so hopeless as to deserve only pity and commiseration.

There were about 200 expensively gowned examples of present-day subjection at the lecture and perhaps half a dozen men. The latter maintained deep silence and a very thoughtful attitude; they didn't even protest in behalf of Cupid while the iconoclastic lecturer was dealing with him, and not one so much as "peeped" when the meeting was thrown open for discussion. According to them, it was no place for a male demonstration, and, anyway, it may have needed just a single spark to set that "out-of-subjection" movement into flame right then and there, although Mrs. Gilman sounded a warning against revolt and pleaded instead for the "larger feminism."

The main trouble with Cupid, it seemed, was that, according to present-day standards, he simply represented sex attraction, a state of being which Mrs. Gilman checked up on a big blackboard as "Love No. 6." There were five other elements, all properly coming under the characterization of love, and as marriages were arranged and carried out in these days, did not enter into his thoughts when he twanged his bow. These elements she set down on the blackboard as Loves Nos. 1 to 5, inclusive, and in plain English were Gratitude, Friendship, Admiration, Usage, and, most important of all, Mother Love.

Whether these impulses would find a place in life after marriage, Mrs. Gilman pointed out, Cupid, in the conduct of his many and complicated affairs, which, so far as they went, were most laudable and necessary, did not make sufficient inquiry. Man, dominant, selected woman for her sex attraction; and woman, deep in the mire of subjection, accepted, perhaps because, being under the spell of the selfsame Cupid, she failed to ponder deeply on the future, but more often because she welcomed the supporting hand.

Then Mrs. Gilman gave Cupid another sly dig.

"We ought not look upon this thing with the besotted reverence that we do," she said. "When mother love is recognized by woman as her real duty, and not this little thing with wings, then, and only then, can we free the world of its ills; lift the world from the slough. When woman is free to do the choosing because she does not depend upon man for her bread, and when she knows her work on earth, she will not always select the man because he has been most dominant in the past."

There was another point which set the six men to thinking hard.

"We have certain customs," said Mrs. Gilman, "certain standards which men must reach or they are not men. That standard has been placed too high, and many men who do not reach up to it pretend that they do. There will be a time when the male who can give to the world a clean, high standard of fatherhood will be masculine enough."

This prediction was greeted enthusiastically by 200 of the 206 persons present.

Mrs. Gilman said that people of today—she didn't single the men out this time—were oversexed, a condition which was in a large measure responsible for the social turmoil, excessive unhappiness, and disease. In this respect, she said, other forms of animal life had the best of it, in that they had reached a status where at least they were at peace.

"We are the only species," she said, "in which the female is exploited by the male; there is no other form of animal life where motherhood does not predominate."

Then Mrs. Gilman went on to explain the present-day subjection of woman. Way back somewhere in the past, it seemed, woman had submitted to this subjection because it was necessary that man should have a wider range of activity and a greater influence for the development of the race. But the time had come, she added quickly, when this subjection was not only unnecessary but harmful to the advance of humanity.

A very determined looking woman, wearing a satin gown and swinging a gold mesh bag, rose in the rear of the room.

"Don't you think the price paid for that development in man was very excessive?" she asked, with a severity which made six of the 206 present squirm uncomfortably in their seats.

"Well," said Mrs. Gilman, with a smile that appeared to be contagious, "we have been kept alive, and fed, and clothed—very much so."

The woman in satin sat down.

Mrs. Gilman added in a kindly tone, however, that the period of abnormal development due to the subjection of women was temporary and prophesied that we would outgrow it.

"Then, she said, "we will love one another with an admiration that is not abnormal."

Early marriages were deeply deplored by Mrs. Gilman. A girl and boy of eighteen entering into married life, she said, did so without any idea of what was before them. First it was sex attraction (cupid again, you see), then the ceremony, and then they got along as best they could.

"When a man marries a woman of eighteen," she said, "he marries a sealed package. He doesn't know for a long time what he has."

Mrs. Gilman was a little uncertain in her answer when she was asked how long she thought it would take to evolve a type of woman who would make mother love the principal concern in considering marriage. She said she did not think it could be accomplished in a day, although she believed there were many thousands of women of that type now only waiting for the chance to assert themselves.

Monogamy, divorce and eugenics were discussed at some length. One woman asked Mrs. Gilman if she didn't really believe that the actual monogamous marriages were few in number. There was an expectant "Ah" from every corner of the room, except where the six men sat, and they pretended that they hadn't heard. Mrs. Gilman said she did not believe it, and the discussion passed on to another topic.

The only point which all could agree on in eugenics, said Mrs. Gilman, was what she termed "negative eugenics," or the prevention of the entering into the world of unfit persons. The protest, even against this, she said, was very great because there [illegible] so many people who could not [illegible] the medical certificates which the proposed legislation demanded. But she believed in it firmly. The talk about selecting persons for marriage she characterized as [illegible]. [illegible] she rose from subjection—to eliminate the danger of the [illegible].

The six men, looking very serious, not to say dejected, passed silently out as soon as the lecture was over. The 200 "subjected" ones, however, who felt they had [illegible], remained to gossip about the coming era of their emancipation.

SHOW PARIS GOWNS TO AN EAGER CROWD

Paquin Blazes the Trail for French Dressmakers with a Showing of His New Creations.

NEW HATS MOSTLY SMALL

Dance Craze Responsible for Novel Skirts, with a Peculiar Fullness Just Below the Knees.

Married men will be interested in learning that it was demonstrated again and again yesterday in or near the ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton that a woman's dress can be hooked up in less than five minutes. This assertion, it may be explained, is made with reference to the new Spring frocks that Paquin put on exhibition yesterday. To a mere man that is one of the most important features of the new models.

Yet it was by no means all that was of interest, for this was the first time that a big Paris dressmaker had attempted the feat of showing all of his (or her) season's models in New York, and if one might judge from the throng that fairly besieged the doors of the Ritz-Carlton Annex yesterday afternoon, and from what happened after the French mannequins began to move out across the "stagelet" at one end of the ballroom, it was about the most exciting event the local fraternity and sorority that have to do hereabout with dress in the creative sense have witnessed in a long time.

As this, the first of a series of exhibitions, was intended for manufacturers or buyers of models, and for the press, admission mainly was by invitation. Several who hadn't got cards tried to get in by other means. The exigencies of the situation gave being to a strange variety of newspapers and fashion papers, whose "correspondents," upon investigation, turned out to be small merchants who wanted a chance to be impressed by the latest ideas from Paris. By the time the exhibition began the ballroom actually was jammed with upward of 900 dress manufacturers, and dressmakers, milliners, designers, saleswomen, and dressmakers' models, who, it was heard whispered, had come out to get points as to how the mannequins wore the frocks they displayed.

The exhibition was announced to begin at 3 o'clock, and an hour before that time spectators began arriving. Right by the stage there was an explanation of a question many had puzzled over since they had read in the newspapers the other day that Mme. Joire, of the Paquin firm, had paid full duty on the gowns she had brought. This was a placard announcing that B. Altman & Co., had purchased the entire exhibit of gowns and hats.

There was some delay in getting things started. It was 4:45 o'clock when the first signal was given, and then men and women behind the first few rows of seats grabbed their chairs and began moving forward with them, closing up all the vacant spaces, and leaving a narrow aisle for the progress of the models. The women in the assemblage tried to remain seated, but gave every evidence of being on the tiptoe of expectation. There were not a few Spring models in the assemblage, and these were observed keenly. One young woman, who wore a long aigrette in the back of her hat, moved her head sixty-one times in thirty seconds by a watch. When the head switched to the right, the aigrette polished a man's pate to the left, and when the head turned again, it struck in the eye a man just back of its owner.

Mannequins Display New Gowns.

And just as this had been noted, the lights in the body of the ballroom went on, and a French mannequin appeared on the stage in a walking costume. This was Mlle. Le Duc. She walked back and forth, her figure swaying and giving at the knees. She assumed various poses, so that every feature of her costume could be studied, and then stepped down and passed along the aisle, stopping at every few steps. Then came Mlle. Dupré, who wore with her dress a white hat with wings, just of the shape that Mercury used to affect. Her costume was a tan-colored walking suit and she carried a long walking stick. Those who were near enough to it noted that there was the slightest perceptible slash in the skirt. These two were blondes.

Then came Mlle. Roulet, a brunette, whose dress had colored tassels about the bodice that drew a chorus of Ohs! and Ahs! Then came Mlle. Champoseau in a white balldress and a black and white coat that evoked Ahs! and Ohs!

Next came a young woman wearing a frock whose sleeves consisted entirely of strings of turquoises. One of the young women evoked a chorus of comment by her posing.

"It really takes these French mannequins to show how gowns should be worn," one dressmaker was heard to remark.

"Yes," her companion replied with a sigh, "it is so difficult to get American models who know how to show off a fine frock."

Mme. Joire was a very busy woman throughout the afternoon, superintending the exhibition and answering questions. One had remarked with surprise that the slash had almost entirely disappeared from the skirts shown, and that there was usually a peculiar fullness about them at the sides just below the knees.

Mme. Joire explained that the modern dancing had been the inspiration of most of the costumes for young women that were in the exhibit.

"This peculiar fullness is my husband's idea," she said. "You see," she went on, kicking her right foot backward, "when one raises one's foot in the dance, the skirt conform perfectly to the motion, and there is nothing revealed."

Mme. Joire showed in the room adjoining the ballroom long racks hung with the gowns, the cloaks, and the hats that were being shown. "You see," she said, "each mannequin has a maid to undress and dress her. It takes less than five minutes."

It was as she said. By the time each mannequin coming from the stage into the room had reached the rack where her next dress hung she was ready to begin putting on her next costume.

Hats Almost All Small.

The hats that were shown were almost all very small. There were several with flowing ribbons. One little hat of a cerise, or something nearly red in shade, topped a walking suit of the "tango" color. The effect on a tall blonde drew a loud chorus of admiration. Then there was a white parasol with large blue or black polka dots, shaped somewhat like a mansard roof, that caused amazement. A black gown, with a half-tunic in front of what a woman said was filet lace, provoked envious sighs. One woman was enthusiastic over a small hat which she described as a black straw plaque, mounted on a bandeau.

More than one hundred styles of gowns, together with many cloaks, waists, hats, and parasols were shown. The exhibition will continue for three days, at what the French call a "prix fixe."

HACKETT FEELS SURE OF $1,500,000 LEGACY

Actor's Lawyers Do Not Expect a Serious Fight Over His Claim to Niece's Estate.

WON'T ATTEND FUNERAL

Heir of Mrs. Trowbridge Had Not Seen Her Since He Was a Baby.

James K. Hackett, the actor who will inherit practically the entire estate of his aged niece, Mrs. Minnie Laura Hackett Trowbridge, who died at her home at 72 Park Avenue on Tuesday, is in Washington, D. C., playing a week's engagement in "The Grain of Dust." He telegraphed to friends last night that he would not come to New York to-morrow to attend the funeral of Mrs. Trowbridge, who will be buried to-morrow morning from Trinity Chapel. Mr. Hackett had not seen his niece since he was four years old. A story printed yesterday to the effect that he had made an effort to see her, but had been denied admission to her home, was denied.

Mr. Hackett's interest in the estate, which it is said is worth at least $1,500,000, is in the hands of his lawyers, A. L. and Sam Jacobs of 30 Broad Street. A. L. Jacobs said last night that no legal steps would be taken to obtain the fortune for the actor until after the funeral. The lawyers do not anticipate that any serious fight will be made against Mr. Hackett's claim. They received a telegram from Mr. Hackett last night instructing them to avoid any unseemly haste in the matter. Mr. Hackett, who is to play a week of "one night stands" through Connecticut next week, will arrive in New York next Sunday.

Mrs. Trowbridge was the daughter of the late Recorder Hackett, who was a half brother of James K. Hackett. Because James K. Hackett's father, James H. Hackett, the famous Shakespearean actor, married a second time late in life he was estranged from his eldest son and his family. Once, when James K. Hackett was a baby, he was taken by his mother to see his niece, who was many years his senior. The visit was never returned, and Mrs. Hackett never called again.

Recorder Hackett married Laura Jane Hall, who inherited a large fortune from Charles Contoit, dean of the Corporation of Trinity Church, who left an estate of several million dollars. It was this fortune which came down to Minnie Laura Hackett Trowbridge from her mother and which will now go to James K. Hackett, the next of kin and only near relative.

On Dec. 23, 1907, Miss Hackett married Francis Emory Trowbridge, a former business associate of E. H. Harriman. At the time of her marriage Mrs. Trowbridge was 57 years old, and her husband 62. Soon after the wedding, which was kept a secret for three months, Mrs. Trowbridge made a will leaving her entire fortune, except for a few small bequests, to her husband. Four years ago Mr. Trowbridge died and before she could make another will Mrs. Trowbridge suffered a stroke of apoplexy and her mind was affected and a court declared her to be incompetent. At the time of the court proceedings lawyers engaged by James K. Hackett represented Mrs. Trowbridge's interests. Mrs. Trowbridge never recovered sufficiently to make another will, and the lawyers representing the family have always held that James K. Hackett would be the only heir at law.

The other relatives of the late Mrs. Trowbridge are T. Oakley Hall, Mrs. George Peabody Whetmore, Miss Alice Keteltas, and Mrs. James L. Clancy, the wife of the Warden of Sing Sing Prison. All are distant cousins of the dead woman. If any fight comes in the courts over the estate it will probably come from Mrs. Clancy. James L. Clancy, with the Guaranty Trust Company, managed the Trowbridge estate. He refused yesterday to discuss the matter at all, saying that the facts would become known when the estate was settled.

James K. Hackett's first wife, Mary Mannering, is now the wife of a very wealth Detroit man. The Hacketts had one daughter, Elise, now nine years old, who is with her mother. Two years ago Mr. Hackett married Beatrice Beckley, a well-known and beautiful English actress, who is now appearing with him as his leading woman. When in New York the Hacketts live at the Hotel Vanderbilt.

THE BEETHOVEN FESTIVAL.

Symphony Orchestra Deeply Impresses Audience—Hofmann Applauded.

The fifth concert of the Beethoven Festival series which the New York Symphony Orchestra is presenting took place at Aeolian Hall last night. It was the last concert of the series to be given in that hall, the concluding one being scheduled for Carnegie Hall Saturday evening. The programme last night comprised the overture to "Coriolanus," the Seventh Symphony, and the "Emperor" piano concerto in E flat, played by Josef Hofmann.

This concert was the climax in the series so far, and represented a very high level of achievement. The overture was presented in a favorable light, receiving an even and well-planned performance, but when the Seventh Symphony was reached the orchestra took on a mood that represented more than mere excellence, it was real distinction. Mr. Damrosch and his men gave a reading of this work that was full of life and intensity and rose to heights of expression that were always moving and often thrilling.

As for Mr. Hofmann's playing of the concerto, the last of the composer's five, it was notable even for this famous artist. Among the many factors which contributed to its success were the impression of balance and homogeneity he maintained through the whole work, the clear and beautiful tone, the perfect crispness and finish of technique, and the breadth and power of expression so necessary to the proper interpretation of this composer.

There was an audience that left no empty seats visible, and gave evidence of having been deeply impressed by the symphony and the concerto. At the end it refused to leave until the pianist had played two encores.

"Grumpy" Run to End on April 25.

Cyril Maude's season in "Grumpy" at Wallack's Theatre will end on April 25. The English actor will go on a hunting trip in Canada for a few weeks soon afterward and then return to England. He will come back to New York to renew his run in "Grumpy" under the management of the Liebler Company in the Fall.

James H. Harnden.

James H. Harnden, President of the J. H. Harnden Company, cut stone manufacturers of Brooklyn, died on Monday from pneumonia at Petersburg, Fla., where he had gone last January to recover his health. Mr. Harnden was born in Alligerville, Ulster County, N. Y., fifty-two years ago and lived in Brooklyn for thirty years. He established the firm of Hommel & Harnden which was incorporated in 1905, and was an incorporator of the People's National Bank and a Director of the Manufacturers' and Business Men's Association of Brooklyn and the Cornwall Estates at Lynbrook, L. I. Mr. Harnden was a former trustee of the Janes Methodist Episcopal Church. He is survived by his widow and a son, Wilbur.

Obituary Notes.

WILLIAM C. THOMPSON, 75 years old, formerly General Auditor of the Cincinnati Southern Railroad and later holding the same position with the Southern Railway, died in Thomasville, Ga., yesterday, of a stroke of paralysis.

COL. O'SHAUGHNESSY DIES OF PENUMONIA

COTTONSEED OIL PIONEER

Aided in Development of Southern Railroads—Father of American Chargé in Mexico.

Col. James F. O'Shaughnessy, father of Nelson O'Shaughnessy, American Chargé d'Affaires in Mexico, died yesterday morning at the Hotel Cumberland, where he lived. Col. O'Shaughnessy became widely known through his organization of a company to dig the Nicaragua Canal, abandoned when the United States Government decided to build the Panama Canal. Col. O'Shaughnessy had been ill for several weeks before he contracted pneumonia. Relatives were at his bedside when the end came, though his son, who was informed some time ago of Col. O'Shaughnessy's enfeebled condition, and had once started to New York, was detained in Mexico by diplomatic business.

Col. O'Shaughnessy opened a commission house in Nashville, Tenn., in 1865, and bought the first cotton shipments of any volume to pass through that city. With his brother, Michael J. O'Shaughnessy, he organized one of the first cottonseed oil factories in the South in 1865.

With the money from his cottonseed oil business and his real estate investments Col. O'Shaughnessy purchased from the Government of Nicaragua a franchise for the Nicaragua Canal for $100,000. He organized a company with a capital of $60,000,000, and asked for the passage of an act by Congress which would give the project the protection of the United States Government. Col. O'Shaughnessy, through his investments, helped to develop the ports of Pensacola, Fla., and Brunswick, Ga. He was interested also in the development of several railroads in the South, one of which he himself had projected. He was one of the founders of the Crex Carpet and Rug Company. Recently Col. O'Shaughnessy had organized a company for the development of a new invention for picking cotton.

Col. O'Shaughnessy formerly had a Summer home at Buzzards' Bay, Mass., and another on Monte Sano, near Huntsville, Ala. He lived at the Waldorf before moving to the Cumberland. After coming to New York he married Miss Lucy Waterbury, daughter of Judge Nelson J. Waterbury of Connecticut. He is survived by his wife, his son, Nelson O'Shaughnessy; a nephew, M. T. O'Shaughnessy, and a niece, Mrs. James Cahill, wife of Mayor Cahill of Chillicothe, Ohio.

ARRESTS MAY SOLVE $250,000 ROBBERY

SAW THE THIEVES AT WORK

Detectives Watched Through a Skylight as Burglars Worked Over Jeweler's Safe.

The remarkable Hester Street robbery of March 16, 1913, in which burglars tunneled into the pawnshop of Martin Simon & Son and escaped with $250,000 in diamonds, has aroused the activity of Police Headquarters again. Headquarters got its new information in this case last night as the result of the arrest of four safe burglars in a little jewelry shop at 246 Bowery, at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. The head of the gang which invaded the Bowery shop was responsible for the robbery of Martin Simon & Son, the police believe.

The shop at 246 Bowery is owned by Jacob Mendel. Mendel sells musical instruments and jewelry. In the rear of his shop there is an inclosed office, and it was in this room that Mendel left his 1,000-pound safe when he locked his store on Tuesday evening. The safe contained $35,000 in diamonds and gold jewelry. Behind the little office there is a room where Mendel stored some of his goods.

The detectives saw three men enter a tenement just to the south of the jewelry shop shortly before 2 A. M. Then they saw a fourth man take up his place in front of the store. This fourth man, the "lookout," began to light matches. It was the signal to those within that the coast was clear. After the look-out had lighted half a dozen matches the detectives arrested him. Detectives Gildea, Oliver, Reynolds, and Fernelly arrested the burglars through information given to them by a "stool pigeon."

Through a broken skylight in the jewelry shop the detectives could see into the back room of the little store. There the 1,000-pound safe was on its side. It had been moved from the office. An electric drill was attached to an overhead light socket, and the drill was grinding rapidly. The burglars were gloves, so as not to leave finger prints behind, and one of the men stood with a crowbar reading to pry up the safe lid.

At this point one of the detectives up on the skylight ordered the robbers to put their hands up. There was a scramble, and the candle, by the light of which the men had been working, was snuffed out. Five shots were fired into the store from the skylight. They were not directed toward the back room, however, and were only intended to frighten the burglars.

The detectives jumped into the jewelry shop, a distance of twenty feet. They found an electric switch and turned on the lights. Then the detectives went to the rear of the store with pistols leveled. There they found three men huddled in a corner.

The burglars surrendered without a fight. Each was handcuffed and led out of the rear room by a detective, while the fourth detective stayed behind to gather up the burglar tools. It was not until the burglars had been handcuffed that the detectives found that they could not get their prisoners out of the shop. The front door was locked from without. The back door, it was found, led into a small yard surrounded by a high wall. So the detectives broke the plate glass panel in the front door and dragged their prisoners through the opening.

Before Magistrate Appleton in the Tombs Court later in the day the four prisoners were held without bail until Friday for examination. Here are their names: Charles Jordan, known as Caesar Crispie, 34 years old, a clerk, of 142 Thompson Street, who was on trial before Judge Rosalsky a year ago; George Jandimange, or "Big Polack," 22 years old, a chauffeur, of 75 Christopher Street; Mella Raffaello, or "Black Hand," 25 years, a peddler, of 171 West Houston Street, and William Smith, better known as "English Smithy."

In the Tombs Court Jacob Mendel, the proprietor of the jewelry shop, identified Jordan as a man who had come to his shop at 5:30 P. M. on Tuesday to have a watch repaired.

"He walked into my store and did not stop until he got in the rear of the store," said Mendel yesterday. "At first he said that he wanted to get his watch repaired. Then he said he wanted to buy some phonograph records. He could see the safe from where he stood and no doubt figured out that the safe could be rolled into the back room. I was not suspicious when he left without buying anything but I remembered his face."

It is Jordan, also, who is suspected of knowing something about the Hester Street robbery last March. The police, it was asserted, had witnesses who said they saw Jordan in Simon's shop on the night before the robbery.

TO AID COTTON EXPORTS.

Manufacturers Preparing to Extend Their Foreign Trade.

Ralph M. Odell, Special Agent of the Department of Commerce, Tuesday returned to the Custom House in this city for a fortnight's stay, after making a tour of many of the leading cotton mill centres of New England, where he made addresses and exhibited samples bearing on the opportunities for extending American trade in the Red Sea district, Egypt and South Africa, where he recently spent eighteen months gathering information of interest to exporters of cotton goods.

"I found unusual and gratifying interest in my mission everywhere in New England," Mr. Odell said yesterday. "In Boston, I made my headquarters in the Chamber of Commerce, and spent three days at the Hub discussing with the manufacturers the chance for American cottons in the markets I visited. The samples came in for especial interest, and all who saw them voted the collection the most complete they had ever seen. I was given a cordial hearing in Fall River by the Fall River Cotton Manufacturers' Association, and at this meeting several of the members expressed their appreciation of the efforts being made by the Department of Commerce to aid and encourage this country's export business.

"The manufacturers told me they were preparing to extend their activities in the districts I covered, and intended to meet with increased energy the competition in those fields of the English, French, German and Italian exporters. The fact is, the attention of cotton mill men is more than ever being concentrated on export trade, largely, I hope, because of my trip. While in New Bedford I addressed 200 students of the Textile School of that city. I visited Lowell, Providence, and Philadelphia. I also exhibited my samples at the annual convention of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States held in Washington this month."

In order to still further facilitate export business the Department of Commerce, at Mr. Odell's suggestion, has prepared a list of importers of cotton goods in the Red Sea and South African markets, which is now available for American manufacturers and exporters desirous of getting in touch with reliable merchants in that part of the world. The list may be consulted upon application to the branch office of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, located in the Custom House.

To-morrow D. W. Doonan, in charge of the local office of the bureau, will place at the disposal of those interested, manuscript reports of Graham Clark, a Special Agent now engaged in studying the cotton goods markets of China and Japan. While it will be several months before Mr. Clark's reports are published by the department, it has been thought that exporters interested in the Far East markets would be glad at this time to avail themselves of the information obtained up to date by the Government investigator.

ACCUSES WESTCHESTER MEN

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 4.—Charges of inefficiency were lodged with the Assembly Committee on General Laws this afternoon against two members of the Westchester Sewer Commission by Clarence Alexander of Yonkers, representing the Westchester Board of Supervisors. The Sewer Commissioners complained of are John L. Hayes and Frank J. Hoyle.

The matter came before the committee at the hearing on Senator Healy's bill to extend the life of the Westchester Sewer Commission another year.

"We are opposed to a new lease of life for the present commission," said Mr. Alexander. "There is no objection to Mayor Fiske of Mount Vernon, the third member of the commission. But as for the two others, the people of Westchester are opposed to having them spend their money. There has been inefficiency and waste to the tune of hundreds of thousands of dollars. The case of the two members of the commission to whom we object is not in some respects unlike the case of Stephen L. Merritt, who recently disappeared."

Merritt was a member of the commission besides being County Treasurer. Mayor Fiske was placed on the commission as his successor. The commission was named when Westchester was Democratic. Now the Board of Supervisors has a Republican majority. When the Democrats got control of the Legislature in 1911 one of the first ripper bills passed dislodged a Republican Sewer Commission, replacing it with a commission composed of three Democrats.

Etching, "Weary," Brings the Highest Price at Hoskier Sale.

A Whistler etching brought the top price at the Hoskier sale at the American Art Galleries last evening, "Weary," one of his most important prints, now very scarce, going to Albert Roullier for $1,190. A portrait by Whistler, another framed etching, one of the scarce ones, "Fanny Leyland," went to Roullier for $925, and "The Kitchen," a small framed print, first state according to Wedmore and second according to Kennedy, went to the same buyer for $520. Roullier paid $210 for Whistler's "The Draped Model Seated," and Knoedler $200 for the "Model Draping."

A mezzotint, "Portrait of Miss Mary Horneck," by Robert Dunkarton after the painting by Sir Joshua Reynolds, a fine impression, first state before inscription, went to Keppel & Co. for $430, and Agnew of London paid $430 for "Mrs. Billington," mezzotint by Dunkarton after the painting by J. Downman. Two mezzotints by James Ward, after paintings by George Morland, "Smugglers" and "Fishermen," went to Max Williams for, respectively, $240 and $230. A full-length portrait of "Mlle. Parisot," by Charles Turner after the painting by Masquerier, beautifully printed in colors, the scarce first state in perfect condition, went to Knoedler for $300.

"Melania," after the painting by Cosway, printed in colors, went to Knoedler for $140, and Condé's "Mrs. Fitzherbert," full-length portrait with a spaniel, after Cosway, stipple engraving, proof before title, fine example, went to Agnew for $200. A stipple engraving of "Sir Walter Scott," by William Walker, after the painting by Sir Henry Raeburn, proof, went to Agnew for $115.

Hedley Fitton's "The Rose Window" of Notre Dame, signed artist's proof, went to George Russe for $250; Knoedler paid $235 for D. Y. Cameron's "The Porch at Harfleur," signed proof, second state, and a signed proof of "Dreams," by Adreas Zorn, went to M. S. Baer for $100.

The returns for the evening were $9,449, and for the sale, to date, $26,995. Paintings, with furniture and the Greek marble, will be sold this evening.

DISCUSS FIRE PENSIONS.

Some Criticize 20-Year Retirement Privilege, Says Commissioner.

Commissioner Adamson and Chief Kenlon discussed the pension system in the Fire Department yesterday in the Aldermanic Chamber before the Mayor's Pension Commission, which is inquiring into the pension system of the city departments, with a view to establishing one general fund. George W. Perkins is the Chairman of the commission.

The Commissioner explained that there were two distinct funds, one for pensions, paid by the city after twenty years of service, to which the members of the force contributed nothing, and the other, a mandatory insurance fund, to which the members paid $24 a year in return for a $1,000 death benefit. In the first fund, he said, there had been a deficiency in 1912 of $127,000, and in 1913 of $149,000, which had been made good by the issuing of revenue bonds.

It had been suggested, said the Commissioner, that the retirement after twenty years be changed, because after that length of service the men were very valuable and even still in the prime of life. In the last five years, the Commissioner went on, only 85 men had retired after serving only twenty years, while 235 had retired after serving much longer. At present 890 men and 746 widows and orphans were receiving pensions, and in the last five years $4,417,697 had been thus paid out.

The Commissioner admitted that during this period many men had been retired on more than half pay, that being discretionary with the Commissioner. Fifteen ex-firemen who were in receipt of pensions were now drawing salaries in the Bureau of Fire Prevention, having passed the Civil Service examination. The Commissioner also criticised the retirement of Chief Croker and Deputy Chief Guerin on large pensions when both were still valuable to the department.

Chief Kenlon said the uniformed firemen were unanimous in hoping that the pension system would remain as it was.

"There is scarcely a man," he said, "who can serve twenty years without some form of heart trouble. It is far better for the city to leave the twenty-year limit to the service. We have worked years and years under promise of pensions, and we believe we deserve them."

INDICTED FOR PRISON BIDS.

Three Contractors Charged with Collusion in Blackwell's Island Contracts

Indictments for perjury against three contractors who submitted bids on materials for the Blackwell's Island Penitentiary were returned yesterday to Justice Samuel Seabury, in the Supreme Court. District Attorney Whitman and Justice Seabury will prepare a report on conditions at Blackwell's Island and other city institutions. This report will be submitted to Mayor Mitchel.

The three men who were indicted yesterday were B. Charles Hvass, a machinery manufacturer of 509 East Eighteenth Street; John F. Warth of John F. Warth & Brother, Incorporated, of 120 White Street, and Thomas Ford of the Manhattan Hickory Broom Company at 171 Third Avenue. Ford was held in $2,000 bail yesterday. The other two men will surrender to-day.

The indictment charges that on Oct. 18, 1910, Hvass, Warth, and Ford swore to three bids which offered to furnish 314 rope-wound cylinder blocks to be used in the penitentiary workshop. The blocks were to be used in the manufacture of street sweepers. Warth, it is charged, bid $10.25; Ford, $10.90, and Hvass, $11. Bidders are required to depose that no one else has any interest in their estimates and that they were made without collusion. The three bids, the indictment alleges, were made under an agreement as to the amounts to be bid.

Takes Poison at Saloon Bar.

Charles Dunn a letter carrier, of 318 East Twenty-seventh Street, entered a saloon at Third Avenue and Nineteenth Street early yesterday afternoon and ordered whisky. He emptied the contents of a four-ounce vial of poison into the glass with the whisky and drank the mixture. He then sank dying into a near-by chair. Before Dr. Weans arrived in a Bellevue Hospital ambulance Dunn was dead. He was 42 years old.

FLYING SQUAD RAIDS LINER AT HOBOKEN

Special Customs Detail Captures Goods Secreted by the Crew of Kaiser Wilhelm II.

EVEN BUNKERS SEARCHED

Cigar Dealer Arrested with Packages of Lottery Slips—He Had Slung Them Around Waist.

After the North German Lloyd Liner Kaiser Wilhelm II., from Southampton, Cherbourg, and Bremen, had landed her passengers at Hoboken yesterday morning, a special detail of Customs Inspectors, known as the "Flying Squad," went on board and made a search above and below decks for contraband goods. This resulted in the discovery of several hundred dollars' worth of underwear and fancy goods, which had been secreted in various parts of the ship by the crew.

While this was going on, Inspectors George Barron and James Lynch, who were stationed on the upper deck of the pier, noticed a tall, well-built man leaving the ship without any baggage. The man, who was well dressed, and might have been a passenger or an officer in plain clothes, was very happy, and, as he approached the Inspectors, sang "Ich liebe meine kleine," and gave them a merry good-day.

They stopped him and asked what he was doing on the ship, and he replied that he had just been to see a friend from the old country. Not satisfied with this, the Inspectors took the man into an office on the pier and searched him. They found, they said last night, he had 10,000 tickets for a lottery in Leipzig done up in muslin-covered packages and tied around his waist. Each ticket was worth 75 cents, being a tenth part of an entire $7.50 ticket, so that the value of the package was $7,500.

The man was taken to the Custom House in the afternoon and put through a rigid examination by Special Deputy Surveyor George Smyth, which lasted three hours. He said his name was Robert Marquand, and that he kept a cigar store at 216 River Street, Hoboken. He declined absolutely, however, to give the name of the man from whom he received the tickets on the Kaiser Wilhelm II., and was locked up in the Greenwich Street Police Station for the night. He will be taken to-day before United States Commissioner Carpenter in Hoboken, it was said.

Three weeks ago the "Flying Squad" searched a Bremen steamer at Hoboken and discovered fancy articles hidden by the crew to the amount of more than $1,000. Ships have also been searched on the Manhattan side of the river belonging to the Cunard, White Star, Royal Mail, Red Star, American, and other steamship companies.

The specials work independently of the officials who are on the pier when the ship arrives, and do not start their inspection until the passengers have left. Then they put on overalls, and with electric lamps search the holds and bunkers, frequently shoveling away the coal to see if anything is concealed underneath. A good deal of the smuggled opium has been found by the "Flying Squad" in this manner. Moreover, they inspect thoroughly all cabins, from the palatial quarters allotted to the Captain to the firemen's fo'c'sle in the bows of the ship and the steward's "glory hole" right aft above the propellers.

A WALKING DIAMOND MINE.

A. H. Hall Is So Described in a Suit for Separation and Alimony.

Mrs. Emma L. Hall, who is suing Augustus H. Hall of Hall & Ruckel, druggists, for a separation, took the stand before Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum yesterday and testified as to the jewelry which her husband wore. This was only to show that her husband, being financially able to wear diamonds and other precious stones, ought also to be able to pay substantial alimony to her.

According to Mrs. Hall, her husband possessed diamond garter clasps, diamond suspender buckles, diamond cuff buttons—in fact, all manner of diamond articles, including a seven-carat diamond which she said he used occasionally for a lapel button on his overcoat.

When questioned about a diamond weighing 143 carats, which she had testified that her husband tried to sell to George Gould for $200,000, Mrs. Hall said that she had never seen the gem, but she had seen a diagram of it, and that it was as large as a goose egg.

Bent on obtaining $1,000 a month alimony and $1,000 counsel fees, Mrs. Hall continued her talk about diamonds, and told of how her husband went around with his pockets full of them. Then she switched to the subject of her marriage.

"Mr. Hall had been supporting me," she said, "from the Spring to the Fall of 1898. He said he wanted to install me in a house and live with me. I told him I would not live with him except as his wife. Then he kissed me and said we were just as good as married, and I believed that we were."

William Rand, Jr., counsel for Mr. Hall, contends that no marriage took place.

WIFE CAN'T SELL HER LAND.

Mrs. Riva, Separated from Husband, Asks Court to Aid Her.

Mrs. Grace R. Riva, who is separated from her husband, Dr. Ferdinand E. Riva of Milltown, N. J., appeared before Vice Chancellor Howell in Newark yesterday seeking permission to sell real estate left to her under the will of her father, William Rowland, because her husband withheld consent. The court reserved decision.

Mrs. Riva is living in Manhattan with her two children. The application to sell the property was made under a statute which permits a married woman, separated from her husband and not maintained or supported by him, to obtain an order from the court permitting her to sell the property as though she was unmarried.

Dr. Riva objected to the sale of the property unless the proceeds were conserved for the benefit of the children. On the witness stand the physician denied that he had ever refused to support or maintain his wife. The Rivas were married in April, 1893, in New York City.

HELD AS OPIUM SMUGGLER.

Grobe Tells Customs Agents He Was Once a Mate on the Cecilie.

Hugo Grobe, who says that he was once second officer of the Kronprinzessin Cecilie, was arrested yesterday by the Federal authorities in connection with the conspiracy to smuggle into this country a quantity of Persian opium. The North German Lloyd Company denied yesterday that any such name appeared on their records as that of an officer who had been in the company's employ.

The man was arrested by Customs Agent Collins and Detective Capt. Jones as he was leaving a saloon at First Avenue and Eighty-sixth Street. Information had been obtained by the customs authorities when they raided on Monday night the store of Yee Sang in Chinatown that at this place 75 pounds of the drug, worth $10,000, had been stored. Grobe was brought down to the Federal Building and arraigned before Judge Hunt, who held him in $7,500 bail.

LAWS AFFECTING DRUGS.

Memorial to Put Heroin in the Same Class as Morphine.

The Drug Trade Section of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation at its regular monthly meeting yesterday, held at 203 Broadway, decided to send a memorial to the Legislative Committee in charge of the Harrison bill asking that the amount of heroin authorized by the proposed law to be permitted in filling prescriptions be the same as that proposed for morphine.

The Harrison measure as reported in the State Senate allows one-fourth of a grain of morphine and only one-twelfth of a grain of heroin in medicines to a fluid ounce. Members of the section gave it as their view that no adequate reason exists for not making the proportions of the two drugs equal, as many medicines would not be effective with the small amount of heroin specified in the bill as it stands. Thomas M. Main said the amount of the two drugs allowed by the laws of several States was equal, and should be so provided for in the Harrison bill.

The Frawley bill relating to restrictions on the sale of heroin, placing it on an equality with the prohibition against the sale of cocaine, was discussed and approved, although it was brought out that retail druggists up the State had opposed the measure. Several other bills affecting the drug interests now pending at Albany were discussed.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

WHEAT.

The favorable prospects for the new Winter wheat crop in America, as well as promising conditions in Europe, worked to depress quotations. The market showed a fairly steady tone at the close, with declines of from ⅛ to ¼c. The Ohio State report made the condition of the crop on March 1 94%, compared with 101% in January and 88% last year.

In the local cash market No. 2 hard Winter wheat was quoted at $1.00¼, cost, insurance, and freight, to arrive; No. 2 red, $1.04, elevator domestic; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.03¼ free on board afloat; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $1.04¼ free on board afloat, opening of navigation.

CORN.

The news in the corn market was of a more bearish character, but the market showed resistance to pressure, and, after declining ¼ to 3.8c, early values rallied, and at the close were net unchanged to ⅛c decline. In the local cash market No. 3 yellow corn was quoted at 70⅝c, cost, insurance, freight, to arrive.

The vacancy for harness maker is in the Cherokee School, North Carolina, and unmarried men without dependents are desired. Competitors will not be assembled for examination, but will be rated on physical ability, training, and experience. Applicants must have reached their twentieth but not their fiftieth birthday on the date of the examination. Bids have been opened by the Board of Education for the 110 phonographs which will be placed in the public schools under the $6,000 budget appropriation for that purpose.

The nominating convention of the Eastern District High School, Brooklyn, will be held in the auditorium of that building on Monday. The election will take place on March 11.

TIN FROM ABROAD.

Briton's Exports Increasing—Some Figures on Output.

Exports of tin plate from the United Kingdom last year were valued at $35,139,371, as compared with $33,254,215 in 1912. Imports into the United States from Great Britain are steadily increasing. Last year tin plate worth $1,551,615 was brought in, in contrast with $226,871 during the preceding year, and, according to the consular report, shipments in January of this year amounted to $247,530, as compared with $34,426 in the same month of 1913. The month's imports were, therefore, greater than the entire amount brought to our mills during 1912.

Figures on mill output in Wales, Germany, and Russia, prepared for the British Tin Plate Association, show that the Welsh and Russian mills are about equal in efficiency.

In Wales, four men per mill are employed—roller, doubler, furnace man, and behinder; in Germany, five, the additional man being a furnace man's helper; in Russia, seven, the two additions being a behinder's helper and a bar dragger. In Wales the average output per eight hours is 45 boxes of light plates, 28 by 20 and 30 by 21 inches, as compared with only 42 in Germany, where there is a larger force per mill; in both countries the production sometimes reaches 60 to 70 boxes. The Russian mills have an average output of 95 to 100 boxes, and an occasional output of 110 to 130 boxes. Their capacity is due to their large mill force, and to the fact that the mills have three furnaces—one for heating the iron, and the other two in charge of the furnace man and his assistant, respectively. The German and Welsh mills have only two furnaces.

The wages are as follows: Wales—Roller, 83 cents per dozen boxes; doubler, 67 cents; furnace man, 63 cents; behinder, 30 cents. Germany—Roller, 61 cents; doubler, 47 cents; furnace man, 45 cents; helper, 42 cents; behinder, 33 cents. In Russia the Welsh millmen get 40 per cent. more than in Wales, together with house, fuel, and light; Russian millmen, about 40 per cent. less than the wages in Wales. The bar dragger and the behinder's helper receive a daily wage of $1.08.

But for the high duty on plates imported into Germany, the German manufacturers could not compete with the Welsh. Their orders are generally Government orders. German sales methods, however, might be studied with advantage. In Russia the industry has greatly developed, almost entirely as a result of the high tariff.

Bank of France's Metal Holdings.

PARIS, March 4.—The weekly statement of the Bank of France, when issued to-morrow, will show an increase in gold in hand of 4,630,000 francs and a decrease of 3,123,000 francs in silver.

The
OF NEW YORK CITY

This sounds sensational. It reads like fiction. The writer is City Magistrate Levy; a man who knows. He says that the pickpocket trust is well intrenched, has unlimited capital, retains its own lawyers, has the backing of bonding companies, has complete territory organization, and is controlled by an invisible board of directors. The story tells in detail how the "field men" operate, how the "managers" operate, how the lawyers operate, and how the courts operate. It is a story which should command the widest reading. Don't miss it.

ALBANIA and its NEW KING

What does the world know of Albania? Nothing. It is virgin soil. Large tracts have not yet been explored because of the risk to life. Its chief imports are rifles and ammunition. Its chief product is desperate fighting men. Prince William of Wied, the new King, is a German. He received his royal commission by the will of Austria-Hungary. He is a clever horseman, an ardent sportsman, and an experienced statesman; the type of man to govern the proud, fighting mountaineers of this newly created kingdom. The story will be presented as a full-page feature next Sunday.

City Children Healthier than Country

Investigation shows that children attending country schools are far behind youngsters from the crowded streets in health "efficiency." An article which should be read with interest by every parent and teacher.

BRYAN GOING ON TOUR OF SOUTH AMERICA

Accepts Chile's Invitation to Attend Pan-American Conference Next September.

TO VISIT OTHER REPUBLICS

Secretary of State Announces He Has Changed His Mind About Never Going to Sea Again.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Secretary Bryan has changed his mind about going to sea again. On his last long voyage he was shipwrecked and decided then that he would cling to terra firma for the rest of his life. But to-day he announced that he would make a tour of South American countries this year.

Mr. Bryan expects to leave here in August for visits to Peru, Bolivia, Chile, Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, and Brazil. He hopes to be back in the United States before the meeting of Congress in December and perhaps as early as the beginning of November.

The intention of the Secretary of State to make this trip became known at a meeting this afternoon of the Governing Board of the Pan-American Union, of which Mr. Bryan is Chairman. Edwardo Suarez, the Minister of Chile, announced that his Government had asked Mr. Bryan to visit that country in September during the fifth Pan-American Conference at Santiago, and Mr. Bryan in responding accepted the invitation.

In extending the invitation, the Minister of Chile expressed the hope of his country that Secretary Bryan would accept. Secretary Bryan, replying, said that, after a conference with President Wilson, he was happy to announce that he accepted the invitation and would undertake the journey unless some unforeseen development arose. Since his last extended journey abroad, when he experienced a shipwreck, he said he had practically made up his mind to undertake no long sea journeys, but he believed that he should make an exception in this case, he said, because of the importance of the conference and his desire to visit the countries of South America.

If the Secretary of State carries out his present plan he probably will leave the United States about the middle of August, proceeding down the west coast by the way of Peru and Bolivia to Chile and returning by the east coast to make visits to Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, and Brazil.

In its preparations for this conference the Governing Board of the Pan-American Union also has authorized Director General Barrett to attend the conference and visit the countries of South America. He will leave Washington early in July, going first to Brazil, then to Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, and Chile, and after remaining in Chile a month, for the conference, will return by way of Bolivia, Ecuador, Colombia, and Venezuela.

LAMAR'S CHARGE A FIASCO.

Commerce Board Will Report Against Steel Rebate Investigation.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—In response to the Senate resolution requesting the Interstate Commerce Commission to inquire into the desirability of investigating charges by David Lamar and William H. Green that the United States Steel Corporation had received, during the last six years, immense sums in freight rebates, the commission probably will report that the necessity for the investigation does not exist.

At the conclusion of the hearing today Lamar submitted what purported to be an agreement between the Federal Steel Company and the Carnegie Steel Company by which the former was to pay the latter 40 cents a ton from the published rate for carrying ore from the Minnesota mines to Lake Superior ports. The agreement, it was said, was made before the organization of the Steel Corporation and never became effective. Lamar declared that it was the basis of his charge of a rebate conspiracy, and that he had no other documents to present. Certified copies of entries on the books of the Steel Corporation showing rebates, which were promised at yesterday's hearing, were not produced to-day.

"I feel," said Lamar, "that I have performed all the duty incumbent on me in the matter."

C. A. Severance, counsel for the Steel Corporation, declined to cross-examine Lamar or Green, saying their statements were not evidential. Other witnesses desired by Lamar probably will not be summoned.

SHIP'S SALOON FLOODED.

Great Waves Come Aboard Steamer from West Indies.

Capt. John Carey of the Clyde Line steamship Iroquois, which arrived yesterday, two days late, from Santo Domingo, said that on Sunday and Monday the ship encountered a northwest gale, with heavy seas, which swept in tons over the port quarter and did considerable damage to the ship. The after part of the hurricane deck was carried away, and twenty windows and doors of the deck cabins and saloon were smashed in by the seas. The saloon was flooded, but the ten cabin passengers were on the sheltered side.

The ship was hove to for twenty-four hours while the carpenter, with the assistance of the crew, covered the broken ports and doors with canvas and shored the port side of the saloon up with beams from the hold to prevent the further invasion of the water. The barometer went down to 27.20, which Capt. Carey said was a low record for the steamers of the Clyde Line.

The Ward Line steamer Vigilancia arrived in Quarantine two days late with twenty-six passengers from Santiago and other Cuban ports. The Captain said she had been in the same gale as the Iroquois and was battered about her decks. She was also hove to for twenty-four hours during the height of the gale on Sunday and Monday.

TEXTILE MARKET'S OUTLOOK

Upward Revision in Woolen Goods Prices Likely in Near Future.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., March 4. — The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say to-morrow:

Business in the local wool market has been somewhat smaller the past week, with total sales amounting to 3,680,000 pounds. Prices have been advanced from one to two cents a pound on nearly all types of fine domestic wools, owing largely to their extreme scarcity.

The cotton market, as far as actual business is concerned, is exceptionally quiet.

Cotton yarns show a slight recession in price, though dealers insist on maintaining quotations at their present level. The activity in worsted yarns is largely centred on 2-40s half blood yarns suitable for the men's wear trade. Several spinners who failed to allow for a probable advance in wool prices, and accepted early in the season advance contracts on half blood and finer yarns, are finding it extremely difficult to fill their contracts at a profit.

The cotton goods market has not shown any great amount of strength as far as price increases are concerned. The steadiness at present levels has caused quite a satisfactory amount of orders to be placed for future delivery.

The most interesting feature of the woolen goods market at present is the upward revision of prices, which must inevitably occur in the near future. Advances of 2½ to 10 cents a yard have already been named on a large number of lines, but there are still a great many lines where such advances must take place.

Business placed in the men's wear market is very largely on worsted fabrics, though some few distributors of woolen goods have had particularly good business.

Business in dress goods seems to be improving, and it is believed the season's business will prove satisfactory.

MORE GUARDS AT MUSEUM.

Intricate Wiring Now Protects the Morgan Treasures.

Additional precautions have been taken for the protection of works of art at the Metropolitan Museum since the $50,000,000 Morgan collection was placed on exhibition there. Howard Mansfield, Treasurer of the Museum, said last night that the force of guards and watchmen was increased with each large addition to the treasures in the Museum, and that such safety measures had been necessary to insure the protection of priceless works of art in the Morgan collection.

While the Museum authorities would not make known the details of their system for insuring the safe custody of the wealth of art on exhibition, it was said yesterday that the electrical alarm devices which protected the masterpieces in the Museum had been increased until it rivaled the protective apparatus at the United States Treasury in Washington. A burglar who wished to duplicate at the Metropolitan Museum of Art the feat of the theft of the Mona Lisa from the Louvre in Paris would have to outwit a guard of more than fifty men, including uniformed watchmen and plain-clothes detectives, and after doing that, he would have to work against one ofthe most intricate network of elctrical alarms ever devised.

At the slightest touch any of the alarms rings ten gongs in all parts of the building. In every part of the building the electrical system indicates exactly the place where the alarm came from and is a signal for guards and watchmen to rush to the spot. Alarm drills are held at intervals to keep the guards in practice. The detectives and doormen, it is said, are armed with revolvers.

Sharp Likely to be Ambassador.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Gov. Cox of Ohio told President Wilson to-day that he heartily indorsed Representative William G. Sharp of Ohio for the Ambassadorship to Russia. The President has practically made up his mind to name Mr. Sharp. Senator Pomerene and the entire Congressional delegation from Ohio has advocated the appointment.

AMERICAN DESIGNING.

An Effort to Show What Can Be Done Here for Printing on Textiles.

An effort is being made to encourage the American designer in the art of textile designing and the American manufacturer in the production of domestic fabrics of designs originated in this country. To show this can be done is the purpose of an exhibition of Mexican designs, which will be opened by the American Designing and Reproducing Company, 4 White Street, on March 9. The intention of the company, it is explained, is to hold similar exhibitions from time to time and display in advance the styles for the coming seasons. The themes for the decorations, colorings and designs and the ideas developed are based upon historical facts through researches into the little-known parts of the American continent.

Herman Schey of the company, for the purposes of the present exhibition, engaged in the study of Mexican folklore for some months past, and the designs reproduced have their foundation in the history of that country. The sign language of the ancient Aztecs has been utilized to a great extent, and the representations of animals, fruits, trees, &c., form the basis of a number of the ideas carried out in the designs. At present the company has on hand between 250 and 300 of these designs.

Special to The New York Times.

Soft felt hats are enjoying a record demand and puggrees are still the bands most extensively favored. The puggree band will be worn on straw hats this Summer, especially on the panamas.

For the West and South.

With the coming and going of the buyers for the jobbing houses in the West and South who are preparing for Fall business in coats for women's wear, an indication is given of what will be in demand in those sections for next Winter. The West has run to pile fabrics and the South to mixtures of tweeds in shorter lengths, in decided patterns, a bright lot of plaids and stripes playing a prominent part in the selections which have been made. The market has never been so good for piece goods owing to the desire on the part of domestic manufacturers to forestall foreign competition.

Not Meeting Domestic Prices.

The low prices made by American mills to gain the upper hand in the competition with the foreign manufacturers, in the dress goods field particularly, taken together with the many extensions to equipment which have been made from time to time, seem to show that what is aimed at is a greater volume of business with smaller profits. According to the cutters up, German manufacturers who were looked upon before the passage of the present tariff law as capable under the new rates of becoming especially formidable competitors for the mills here, have not been able to come on the average within 25 per cent. of the prices made by domestic manufacturers. Of course, the mills not in a position to add to their production may be eliminated, but from present indications the big plants have nothing to fear. Under conditions that prevail at the present time, the buying of the large houses which sell to the jobbing trade has been limited to a few mills.

The Kentucky Corporations Law.

Counsel for the National Association of Credit Men have prepared an opinion regarding the decision in the case of the Oliver Company vs. Louisville Realty Company, tried in the Court of Appeals in Kentucky a short time ago, which says that it has nothing to do with the status of foreign corporations in that State which do a purely interstate business. The opinion further says that the decision applies only to corporations "doing business" in Kentucky. Despite the fact that, since the decision was rendered, many attorneys of that State have been soliciting from various corporations the privilege of representing them under the Kentucky foreign corporation law, and that their communications have been giving impressions hardly borne out by facts, the conditions under the law remain as follows: That a corporation which maintains an office in a State other than that of its incorporation, in which office it simply has an agent who trains and oversees salesmen who are sent out through the State taking orders for goods, which orders are sent to the home office for approval, and from which office, if approved, the goods are shipped, the agent having in his office only samples of goods and taking no orders himself, and having no bank account for the corporation, is not "doing business" within the foreign State. If, however, the agent completes transactions and maintains a company bank account, the courts of almost every State would hold that the corporation was "doing business," and would have to comply with the foreign corporation act.

Registering Customers' Names.

Commercial banks and discount companies are opposing the measure advocated by Assemblyman Greenberg which would require them to register the names of their customers upon the assignment of accounts to them and also send notification of the action of their customers to the creditors of the latter, upon the ground that the relationship existing between the banker and his client is confidential and not matter for public record. The discount companies also claim that this would constitute class legislation and predict that, if the bill becomes a law, it will mean that three quarters of the mills will have to close up for lack of ability to obtain financial accommodations. One banker compared the service rendered by his company to that rendered by the commission house and pronounced the two similar. "In only 10 per cent. of the failures, it has been estimated," he said, "has it been found that the accounts were assigned. We have not had a failure here in three years. It is foolish to say that a man who has money, and the bankers have money, is going to lend that good money to a crooked business man. The false idea prevails that we exist to help along business frauds. As a matter of fact, we notify the debtors of a firm which assigns its receivables to us that the bills are payable to us. This prevents fraud through the re-hypothecation of accounts. The house that discounts its bills is looked up to in the trade and that's what we are in business for—to help the firm to do so and obtain capital enough to carry on its business. The rate we demand is not as large as that which the commission house gets for its services."

He Doesn't Like Them.

A clothing buyer connected with one of the largest department stores in the city, in mentioning the present demand for Balmacaans, remarked that while the American manufacturers are making strenuous efforts to imitate this topcoat their ideas of the style in many respects do not conform to the original design, which was put out by an English house. The manufacturer here, he said, will buy an English garment, take it to pieces to see how it is made, draw patterns directly from the different parts of the garment, set his cutter and tailors to work on it and yet when the article is finished there is something missing. "The coat doesn't hang the same way, the English style of garment does," he said. "It is the putting together of the garment that tells and here is where the English manufacturer surpasses."

Argentina's Big Foreign Trade.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The recent American Legation in Buenos Aires to an embassy, and similar elevation of the Argentine Legation here, lends added interest to a report received to-day by the Pan-American Union, showing that this South American country's foreign trade in the calendar year 1913 totaled $873,187,090, an increase of almost $40,000,000 over the previous year. This was approximately $100 for each person in Argentine, which makes it the largest per capita foreign trade for any country on the Western Hemisphere, and for any important country in the entire world.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Prices Turn Upward as Trading Increases—Position of the Steel Trade.

Dealings on the Stock Exchange yesterday were twice as large as on Monday. The storm with which the week opened was still being referred to as a restrictive influence upon trading, but as a matter of fact the business done exceeded the transactions on several days during the latter half of February. Of more interest than the near return of the market to a scale of activity approximating that which was under way before the temporary interference of this week's storm was the fact that prices rose in nearly all parts of the list. Gains were substantial in some of the leading issues upon which much of the trading operations of the session were centred. There was nothing, however, to indicate any material expansion in the demand for stocks arising elsewhere than in the Street itself.

Day to day fluctuations mean less when the transactions are largely in the hands of habitual traders than when there is a public movement in the market. At the present time the so-called professional operations in the market seem to predominate heavily. It was inferred from the day's operations, considered in connection with the character of the trading during recent days, that a fair share of the strength which prices showed had its origin in short covering. That was induced rather by the absence of any positive bad news than by other considerations, for there were no fresh developments of importance. The market easily becomes oversold under conditions such as currently prevail.

The statement of iron production in February proved an interesting contribution to current information bearing upon trade conditions. The tonnage for that month was slightly in excess of January's output, which means that the daily rate of production was considerably heavier in the second than in the first month of the year. Moreover, a larger number of furnaces were in blast at the end than at the beginning of February. The Iron Age points out that the gain in production last month amounted to 11 per cent., and if trade estimates are correct the forthcoming unfilled order statement of the United States Steel Corporation will show a good increase. The Iron Trade Review says that the indications are that the increase will not fall far short of the gain in January, when more than 300,000 tons were added to the corporation's unfilled tonnage. The other side of the picture is presented in the fact that it is again reported that orders are falling short of output, indicating that lately the steel mills have again been drawing on old orders. The normal increase which the Spring generally brings may soon, however, become an actual factor, as it is already a factor in shaping market expectations.

These returns from the steel trade would indicate that, despite the lessening of activity at the end of last month, February has carried the trade as a whole further along the line of recovery. The rate of production as this month opened offered ground for the hope that further progress will be made during March. A good deal of recent activity seems, however, to have arisen from the necessity of replenishing depleted stocks, which increases the likelihood of a lull in the market. If it were known when the railroads would be in a position to buy more freely than they have lately been buying, it would be possible to see further ahead in the steel trade, for an active demand for supplies from the railways would very quickly put an entirely different complexion upon this most important industry. Nor would the influence of railroad buying stop there, for it would, in fact, permeate into nearly all lines.

In large part, fresh railroad expenditures are dependent upon ability to raise additional capital, and that in no small measure depends upon the gaining by the railroads of a more advantageous position in respect to net revenue than they now occupy. Were the railroads free agents in the matter, they could no doubt meet the present problem effectively, but as matters stand the railways seem largely dependent upon rate adjustments to better their net revenue. Those adjustments are still, as they have for months past been, in the balance. The passage of time has emphasized instead of diminishing the importance to the railroads of the decision which lies with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

A Loss to the Erie.

The death of J. C. Stuart, assistant to the President of the Erie, leaves a gap in the railroad service of the Eastern roads that cannot easily be filled. Mr. Stuart, then Vice President and General Manager, two years ago plunged into the work of fighting the wage increases demanded by the unions and quickly assumed leadership of the executive forces in the busy days that followed. Having been himself a fireman and engineer he could meet the men on sympathetic grounds, and he stood to his guns in refusing to grant the advances long after most of the other executive officers had expressed a desire to capitulate. He was a fighter, and would have seen the strike threat through to a finish had not public opinion, as interpreted by the authorities at Washington, forced arbitration on both parties. He had a great capacity for work, and President Underwood gives credit to him for a large share in the improvement in the Erie's operating department in the past five years.

"They talk about increased cost of living as an excuse for advancing wages," said Mr. Stuart, when the engineers and firemen were talking strike, "yet they start off each day with a pocketful of cigars and buy their lunches. When I wore overalls it was a clay pipe after hours and a five-cent smoke after Sunday dinner. We carried our lunch in a tin pail."

Big Decrease for Reading.

What a mild Winter does to the coal business is well illustrated by the statement for January and the seven months, issued by the Reading Companies yesterday. In January the Coal and Iron Company's receipts declined $844,000, and for seven months $7,839,000. The Railway Company's revenues for the month were off $609,000, and for the longer period $1,462,000. Expenses were reduced slightly in January, but for the seven months they ran ahead of last year's total, so that the railway's net earnings lost $557,000 in January and $2,676,000 from July to January, inclusive. The coal business brought in only $95,000 net in January of this year as against $560,000 last year. After making allowances for taxes and interest the surplus of all companies was only $637,000 in January, a loss of $1,052,000, and $5,488,000 for the seven months, a loss of $5,896,000.

Great Northern's New President.

It is seldom that a change in the Presidency of a railroad can be accomplished with so little disturbance as will take place when C. R. Gray is succeeded on the Great Northern by Louis W. Hill. Mr. Hill has been President of that road before, and as Chairman his duties have not been very different. He was made Chairman at his own request, so that he might have more time for agricultural development work, and he can slip on his old coat again without help. A Hill has always been at the head of the Great Northern organization, and a Hill will continue there, no matter what his title.

Floor Traders Still Bearish.

Some of the leading floor traders have been persistently bearish toward stocks ever since the first of the year, and the substantial upturn of prices yesterday on comparatively small trading caused them to change their opinion not at all. Friends of certain of these brokers—other brokers who confine their work to the business of customers—have taken them aside and talked earnestly about bettering political conditions, the chances of a settlement of the Mexican troubles, and approaching reports on crop conditions which promise to be encouraging. The argument backed by these factors has been that stocks were headed upward instead of downward. Persuasion has brought little result. The traders are bearish, and the fact that their inclinations have lost them money often and brought in profits far less frequently has not caused them to doubt the wisdom of their course. Yesterday's market was not exactly narrow, and the leading speculative issues received considerably less attention in proportion to their prominence than a number of the minor stocks. Yet the speculative stocks resisted stubbornly the pressure directed against them, and were strong at the end of the day.

Small Selling by London.

London contributed something to the morning's selling of Steel, Union Pacific, and Southern Pacific. Our market opened higher than the London market was at the time, and arbitrage men realized profits by disposing of about 10,000 shares that had been purchased earlier on the other side. After orders were filled in the first half hour of business only scattered trading was done for London account, and this was fairly well divided between sales and purchases.

Woolen Shares Decline.

In the report of operations of the American Woolen Company for last year President Wood pointed out that uncertainties over the tariff had now been largely cleared away. The company was fully prepared, said he, to go ahead under new conditions. He hinted, furthermore, that the foreign market would well bear investigation as a profitable field for the sale of American woolens and worsteds. The impression to be gained from these opinions was that the future looked considerably better for the company than did the record of 1913. In the stock market it seemed, however, that only the deficit of the year was considered. Both classes of the company's stocks declined more than 2 points yesterday.

Curb Trading Increases.

Curb brokers are almost impervious to weather conditions, as far as they are concerned personally, but it was noticeable yesterday that business had improved over the two previous days. The reason was that the telegraph service to outside cities, especially in the West, was much improved. Since trading broadened in the Standard Oil issues this year business by wire has expanded greatly, and a considerable share of the business done in mining stocks is conducted from points in the West.

Lost Time Lamented.

The portion of Wall Street that paid any attention at all to David Lamar's testimony at Washington in the inquiry into charges that the Steel Corporation had accepted many rebates from railroads was inclined to lament the time lost by the Interstate Commerce Commission in listening to Lamar. The quality of the evidence was not considered. It was argued yesterday that the commission had devoted two days to Lamar which were taken from the time that otherwise would have been used in considering the application of the Eastern railroads for higher freight rates. Starting from the premise that the roads will ultimately get the advance, a Wall Street theorist contended that Lamar had cost the roads $280,000. This was figured from the estimate that the increase asked for would add $50,000,000 annually to the aggregate railroad income.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Further Increase in Activity, with Higher Prices, Particularly in the Oil Stocks.

Transactions in the outside security market yesterday amounted to 94,449 shares of stock and $41,000 of bonds. The sales of stocks were divided as follows: Industrials, 4,775; oils, 3,349; mining, 86,325. The range of prices in all issues in which transactions were reported was:

BOURSES OF EUROPE

Improvement After Early Weakness in London—Prices Steady in Paris.

LONDON, March 4.—Money and discount rates were easy to-day.

Business on the Stock Exchange showed a falling off, operators waiting events in connection with the home political and Mexican situations. Realizing caused weakness in the forenoon, especially in British and Kaffir stocks, but later a better tone developed, with Brazilians, Mexicans, and Americans closing higher.

The market for American securities opened quiet, with fractional changes. Later prices advanced on New York bidding and finished steady.

PARIS, March 4.—Prices were steady on the Bourse to-day.

Three per cent. rentes, 88 francs 2½ centimes for the account.

BERLIN, March 4.—Prices were weak on the Boerse to-day.

DOWLING'S PARTY WINS OUT.

He Will Be Re-elected Head of the City Investing Company.

The threatened contest over the management of the City Investing Company failed to materialize at the annual meeting yesterday, as the interests headed by Henry D. Hotchkiss, which held the balance of power, lined up with the Dowling element. The only change made was the election of Lewis B. Preston and William Childs, Jr., to fill vacancies on the Board of Directors. They had been agreed upon by the Dowling and Hotchkiss contingents, and Mr. Preston was supported also by the faction headed by B. Aymar Sands.

The Sands party had the largest number of proxies, about 21,000 shares. The Dowling party had about 20,000 and the Hotchkiss party about 8,000. The retiring Directors and Mr. Childs received about 26,000 votes, the Sands party refraining from voting. The vote for Mr. Preston, including all factions, was about 47,000 shares.

Robert E. Dowling will be re-elected President at a meeting of the Directors to be held in a few days. The other officers also will be re-elected.

The report for the year ended April 30, 1913, submitted at the meeting yesterday, showed gross earnings from rents of $1,318,953. Operating expenses, interest, taxes, and contingency reserves amounted to $1,064,273, leaving net earnings of $254,681, out of which dividends of $70,000 were paid on the preferred stock. The assets are valued at $5,798,091.

EXPRESS CO. NOT TO QUIT.

Vice President of the American Issues a Denial of the Report.

As a result of the report that the United States Express Company was contemplating going into liquidation, rumors became current that the other big express companies also were planning to wind up their affairs. The American Express Company announced yesterday that it had no intention of quitting the field. This statement was issued by Vice President F. F. Flagg.

In regard to rumors in Europe, based on New York press dispatches, to the effect that following the initiative of the United States Express Company other express companies will follow suit, and that this company intends to retire from the financial field abroad, we wish to say that so far as the American Express Company is concerned we have no idea of liquidating, nor have we any intention of making any changes, not only as to the conduct of our business at home, but as regards our financial business abroad.

Officers of the Adams Express Company and of Wells, Fargo & Co. have said within the last few days that their companies will continue in opposition to the parcels post.

$15,000,000 Chemical Society Bond Issue.

NEW LONDON, Conn., March 4.—The Directors of the American Agricultural Chemical Company at a special meeting here to-day voted to issue debenture bonds to an amount not exceeding $15,000,000 bearing 5 per cent. interest and payable in ten years.

STEEL BONDS DRAWN AT 110

Sinking Fund Trustees Retire 1,501 at a Price of $1,501,000.

J. P. Morgan & Co., as Trustees of the sinking fund of the United States Steel Corporation, have drawn for redemption at 110 and interest 1,501 of the corporation's second mortgage bonds. The $1,501,000 in bonds to be retired will bring the total of such bonds redeemed, but held in the sinking fund, up to about $14,500,000.

Hereafter the drawing will be made once a year, in February. Each succeeding year the funds applicable to sinking fund requirements will increase as interest on the retired bonds accumulates, and it is figured that the entire issue of $187,000,000 bonds due under the indenture in 1966 will be called in by 1950. The corporation pays into the sinking fund a fixed sum of $1,010,000 each year in addition to interest on bonds already held in the fund.

Announcement of the numbers of the bonds to be bought at 110 will be made on Friday. In yesterday's session of the stock market the Steel bonds advanced from 102½ to 103¼.

BANKERS TAKE C. & O. NOTES

Issue of $33,000,000 Goes to Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and National City Bank.

Financing of Chesapeake & Ohio's maturing note obligations has been arranged through the sale of $33,000,000 of 5 per cent. notes running for five years. It is understood that the notes will be offered at about 98. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and the National City Bank have taken the new issue, and will form an underwriting syndicate to handle it.

Chesapeake & Ohio has two note issues, aggregating $28,500,000, falling due on June 1. The balance from this new issue will be used to strengthen the organization's working balance. The new issue will be secured, like the old, by the deposit of bonds under the $125,000,000 improvement mortgage.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the First National Bank, and the National City Bank in this city; Lee, Higginson & Co. and Kidder, Peabody & Co. in Boston, and the Union Trust Company, Drexel & Co., and Harris, Forbes & Co. in Pittsburgh will offer for sale to-day the $10,000,000 first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds of the Central District Telephone Company. They are part of an authorized issue of $25,000,000.

The employes of the United States Safe Deposit Company presented a loving cup to President J. Lynch Pendergast yesterday in remembrance of his twenty years' service with the company.

Youngstown, Ohio, has awarded to Farson, Son & Co. of this city, on a bid of 108.64, $250,000 5 per cent. waterworks extension bonds, dated March 2, 1914. The bonds mature in annual lots of $10,000 after 1917.

The Philadelphia Board of Education is preparing to sell $3,000,000 school district 4¼ per cent. gold serial certificates, maturities to be at the rate of $150,000 a year from July 1, 1924.

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD CO.
Extra Dividend on Common Stock
To Holders of Common Capital Stock of Union Pacific Railroad Company:

Supplementing the announcement heretofore made of the declaration on January 8, 1914, of an extra dividend upon the common stock of this Company, notice is hereby given that litigation has been instituted in behalf of preferred stockholders to enjoin the payment of said dividend, and that, in view of the possibility that such litigation may cause a postponement of the payment of the extra dividend to some date later than April 1, 1914, Dividend Checks and Warrants will not be mailed April 1, 1914, as heretofore announced, but that, instead, the Company will mail to each registered holder of its common stock entitled to the dividend, promptly after the closing of the books on March 2, 1914, a Dividend Warrant evidencing the entire extra dividend, both cash and stock of The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, applicable to the number of shares of common stock registered in the name of such stockholder. Said Warrants will be exchangeable, when, as and if said extra dividend shall be payable as stated therein, for checks representing the part of the dividend payable in cash, and for stock certificates of The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company and fractional warrants representing the part of the dividend payable in stock of that Company. By the terms of the Warrants the date of payment of said dividend will be subject to such postponements as the Board of Directors or Executive Committee of this Company shall deem necessary or advisable by reason of litigation. In case the payment shall be postponed beyond April 1, 1914, any dividends applicable to shares of stock of The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company represented by said Warrants, declared and payable by The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company after April 1, 1914, which shall be collected by the undersigned Company, will be set apart and held for the benefit of the holders of Warrants ultimately entitled to said extra dividend. The Warrants will not be transferable prior to the date of actual payment of the dividend except upon a corresponding transfer of the shares to which the dividend evidenced by the Warrants appertains. Unless otherwise instructed, all Warrants will be mailed in conformity with dividend mailing instructions on file with the undersigned Company.

Whether or not the date of payment of the dividend shall be postponed, the record date remains March 2, 1914, and only holders of common stock registered as such at 3 o'clock P. M. on March 2, 1914, will be entitled to the dividend.

For the purposes of this extra dividend the common stock transfer books of the Company will be closed at 3 o'clock P. M. on March 2, 1914, and reopened at 10 o'clock A. M. on March 23, 1914.

AGAINST FULL-CREW LAW.

Railroad Heads Petition Jersey Legislature to Repeal It.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., March 4.—A petition signed by the heads of all the principal railroads operating in New Jersey was presented to the State Legislature to-day, asking for the repeal of the so-called full-crew law. The railroad executives asserted that the roads in this part of the country were facing a crisis in their financial careers, "such as has not been experienced in the last twenty years," and that a factor in the situation was the new law, which cost the companies operating in New Jersey nearly $300,000 in a few months.

"The claim made that the act would promote the safety of travelers or employes," the petition recites, "has been shown to be utterly unfounded, nor has the law proved beneficial in any respect. The expenditure which it has made necessary has been merely wasted. The sums so wasted and lost to these companies alone and their stockholders and to the public would, if capitalized on a 4 per cent. basis, amount to $7,394,607."

The petitioners were Samuel Rea of the Pennsylvania and West Jersey & Seashore, W. H. Truesdale of the D., L. & W., F. D. Underwood of the Erie, E. B. Thomas of the Lehigh Valley, George F. Baer of the Reading and the Central Railroad of New Jersey, A. H. Smith of the New York Central, and J. B. Kerr of the New York, Ontario & Western.

STEEL TRADE OUTLOOK.

Heavy Increase in the Production of Pig Iron a Good Augury.

The increase of steel mill operations in February is clearly displayed in the pig-iron statistics prepared for trade periodicals. The Iron Age says:

Our blast furnace statistics for February, which are remarkably complete, considering the serious crippling of telegraph and mail service, show plainly the increase in steel works' operations last month. The production of pig iron in the twenty-eight days of February was 1,888,813 gross tons, or 67,458 tons a day, against 1,885,054 tons in January, or 60,808 tons a day. The steel companies produced 1,330,127 tons last month, or 47,505 tons a day, against 1,261,430 tons in January, or 40,691 tons a day.

The steel companies blew in twenty furnaces in February—the Steel Corporation fifteen and the independent companies five. Four merchant furnaces were blown in and three were blown out. Thus the net gain in active furnaces was 21, there being 218 in blast March 1 against 197 one month previous.

Production in January was at the rate of 22,200,000 tons a year; in February the rate was 24,600,000 tons a year, a gain of 2,400,000 tons, or about 11 per cent. The furnaces enter March at a considerable increase over the February rate.

The Iron Trade Review says:

Storm conditions in several parts of the country the past week seem to have exerted some influence in keeping new buying of iron and steel products to lighter proportions. The recapitulation of new business in February shows that the lighter lines have continued to make a very good showing, but that the heavier products have not been bought as freely as was expected at the outset of the month. Specifications against recent buying universally, however, are reported very active, and most of the mills, except those depending chiefly upon railroad patronage, have been able to make better records of tonnage produced.

THE CENTRAL DISTRICT TELEPHONE COMPANY

FIRST MORTGAGE THIRTY-YEAR FIVE PER CENT. SINKING FUND GOLD BONDS

Dated December 1, 1913. Due December 1, 1943.

Interest payable June 1 and December 1 in the City of New York or in the City of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

All the bonds, but not less than all, are subject to redemption on or after December 1, 1918, at any interest-paying date at 105 and accrued interest, on three months' notice.

Bonds are in coupon form of denominations of $500 and $1,000 and may be registered as to principal at the office or agency of the Company in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. One Bond of $1,000 may be exchanged for two Bonds of $500 each and two Bonds of $500 each may be exchanged for one Bond of $1,000.

FIDELITY TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY, PITTSBURGH, PA., TRUSTEE.

From a letter of F. H. Bethell, Esq., President of the Company, copies of which may be obtained at the office of the undersigned, we summarize as follows:

1. This Company, with headquarters at Pittsburgh, Pa., is part of the "Eastern Group" of the Bell Telephone System, owning and controlling the entire Bell telephone business in the western part of the State of Pennsylvania, the northern part of the State of West Virginia, and certain of the eastern counties in the State of Ohio, this territory having a population of approximately 4,000,000. The great natural resources, coal, iron, gas, oil, lumber, etc., make this one of the most active industrial sections in the country.

2. These bonds are secured, in the opinion of counsel, by a first mortgage on all the company's real estate, switchboards, conduits, cables, pole lines and all its other property in the States of Pennsylvania and West Virginia. The value of the property upon which the bonds are secured without considering good will or franchises is conservatively estimated at over $21,000,000, approximately $2,500,000 of this amount representing property covered through the deposit of securities.

3. Net earnings of the Company for the fiscal year ended December 31, 1913, are equal to more than 2½ times the interest charges on these $10,000,000 Bonds.

4. Proceeds of these bonds will be used to pay off all floating debt (approximately $4,500,000), and the balance for the further development of the business and extension of the property.

5. These bonds are followed by Capital Stock of $15,000,000. Dividends at the rate of not less than Seven Per Cent. (7%) per annum have been paid since 1896.

6. Of the $25,000,000 First Mortgage Bonds authorized, the remaining $15,000,000 of escrow bonds can only be issued as equal amounts in cash are obtained from sales of stock and invested in the Company's business in Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

7. The Mortgage provides for a Sinking Fund which becomes operative June 1, 1914, and which provides for the deposit with the Trustee on that day and semi-annually thereafter of a sum equal to One Half of One Per Cent. (½%) per annum of the amount of bonds issued.

THE UNDERSIGNED WILL RECEIVE SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR THE ABOVE $10,000,000 BONDS AT 100 AND ACCRUED INTEREST.

Application will be made to list these bonds on the New York Stock Exchange.

THE ROCK ISLAND COMPANY

Stockholders' Protective Committee

At the request of the holders of a very large amount of the Preferred Stock and the Common Stock of The Rock Island Company, the undersigned have agreed to act as a Committee to protect the interests of the stockholders of the said Company.

The Committee is informed that The Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co. is about to suspend dividends upon its stock, which will result in a default in the payment of the interest upon the Collateral Trust Four Percent Gold Bonds of Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad Co. A Bondholders' Committee has been formed and it has been deemed essential that like action should be taken by the stockholders of The Rock Island Company.

The Bankers Trust Company, 16 Wall Street, New York City, has been appointed the Depositary of the Committee and will be prepared to receive deposits of stock on and after Monday, March 2, 1914. Agents of the Depositary will be appointed to receive deposits in Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia and St. Louis, and suitable arrangements made to facilitate deposits in London, Amsterdam, Paris and Berlin.

All stock when deposited must be endorsed in blank or be accompanied by power of attorney for transfer, executed in blank, and must also be accompanied either by a proxy to vote the stock signed by the registered holder, or by stock transfer stamps at the rate of 2 cents per share required by the laws of New York. Such forms of proxy may be obtained from the Depositary and its agents.

The Deposit Agreement, to be dated March 2, 1914, under which certificates of stock will be deposited, is now in course of preparation and will be lodged with the Depositary on or before March 3, 1914.

Stockholders are urged to deposit their certificates of stock without delay, as the situation calls for prompt action by the Committee on their behalf. Certificates of Deposit will be issued by the Depositary for deposited certificates of stock, and in due course application will be made for listing the Certificates of Deposit on the New York Stock Exchange.

ABOUT BOOKS

Do you know the new books? Do you know what novel to ask for when you are looking for something really good? Do you know anything about the recent books on Panama, on China, on Alaska, on the Philippines, on Literature, on Travel, on Religion? There is only one way to get this information promptly and in a form at once entertaining and intelligible: read the "Review of Books" section of The Sunday New York Times. Its reviews are independent; its information is authoritative; its book and literary news is right up even with the day of going to press. Get into the habit of reading this "Review" every Sunday. It is a habit which you will enjoy; it is a habit which will keep you well informed. It is the source from which the booksellers get their "Shop" information about new publications.

The Spring Number of The New York Times Review of Books, April 5, will stimulate book selling and book reading. It will contain a carefully edited list of over five hundred of the representative books of the season.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Fifth Avenue Lofts in $1,600,000 Deal—Syndicate Buys Sixty-second Street Plot Adjoining Colony Club's Site for Apartment—Bronx and Brooklyn Sales—Clarence Mackay a Buyer in Jamaica.

A deal involving an interchange of properties aggregating in value about $1,600,000, of which the most important factor was one of the Fifth Avenue corners at Twenty-first Street and the purchase by a syndicate of a large site for apartment improvement in Sixty-second Street, adjoining the Park Avenue corner, acquired for the new home of the Colony Club, gave a tone of real activity to the realty market yesterday.

The Fifth Avenue deal involved the purchase by the McKeon Realty Company, of which Thomas A. Larkin is President, of the two commercial buildings at 141 to 147 Fifth Avenue, being the southeast corner of Twenty-first Street. The immediate corner parcel is covered with a twelve-story building and the adjoining parcel on the avenue with an eleven-story structure. The combined frontage of the two lots is 64 feet by 90 deep. The properties were bought from William S. Duncan. They are assessed for $1,005,000, and figured in the trade at $1,100,000.

In part payment the McKeon Realty Company gave four parcels, three being in Manhattan and one in the Bronx. The latter was the southeast corner of Washington Avenue and 188th Street, a vacant plot 200 by 200. The Manhattan lots were the southwest corner of Convent Avenue and 141st Street, vacant, 100 by 95, 302 West 106th Street, 17 by 100.11, occupied by a five-story flat adjoining the southwest corner of West End Avenue and the five-story hotel at 162 West Seventy-fourth Street, 20 by 100, adjoining the southwest corner of Columbus Avenue. These parcels figured in the deal at a valuation of $500,000.

Sale Adjoining New Colony Club.

The recent decision of the Colony Club to buy the large plot on the northwest corner of Park Avenue and Sixty-second Street for its new home has acted as a realty and building stimulus in that locality, as illustrated by the purchase yesterday by a syndicate of the 75-foot frontage on the north side of Sixty-second Street, immediately adjoining the Colony Club's plot. The deal was closed by the Douglas Robinson-Charles S. Brown Company, representing the sellers, and Douglas L. Elliman & Co., representing the buyers. The 25-foot lot adjoining the Colony plot has been purchased from Ranald H. Macdonald, and 50 feet from Mrs. Emily A. Sanford.

This property will be immediately improved with an apartment house of the highest class, the idea being to make the architecture conform with the new Colony Club Building. The parcels are now used for stables, being 43, 45, and 47 East Sixty-second Street.

Buyers for Tenements.

An investor has purchased from C. J. Stein the five-story tenement 2,306 Second Avenue, on a lot 27 by 80 feet.

Maria Braun sold to Nathan Horwitz and Jacob Schamback 70 and 72 East 112th Street, two five-story tenements, on a plot 52.6 by 75.11, adjoining the southwest corner of Park Avenue. W. S. Baker was the broker.

The four-story tenement at 413 Pleasant Avenue, between 121st and 122d Streets, on a plot 16.8 by 100 feet, has been sold to John Monaco by Peter Costa, as broker.

Bronx.

The Aaron Goodman Realty Company has purchased from Lowenfeld & Prager the vacant plot 90 by 93 feet, on the northwest corner of Tinton Avenue and 163d Street. In part payment the buyers gave 554 West Fiftieth Street, a six-story tenement, on a lot 28 by 93 feet, between Tenth and Eleventh Avenues. Six-story apartments will probably be erected on the site by the buyers.

George Lodes, in conjunction with Frederick Steeg, sold for the Charles T. Streeter Construction Company the two five-story and basement flats 1,217 and 1,219 Union Avenue, on a plot 40 by 96 feet each. Also sold for Wilhelmina Ehrsam 738 Jackson Avenue, a three-family dwelling, on a lot 18.6 by 87 feet, and for Frederick W. Ehrsam 608 Union Avenue, a four-story brick flat, on a lot 17.6 by 90 feet.

A. J. Madden and Charles F. Deshler sold for Rose Weissman to Ferdinand Hecht the plot 78 by 129 feet, on the south side of Jennings Street, 100 feet east of Wilkins Place. The buyer intends building immediately.

Peter Costa has sold for the Frank A. Wahlig Company to Albert Taubert the five-story flat at 1,327 and 1,329 Intervale Avenue, also sold for Mr. Taubert the two-family houses at 3,221 to 3,229 Cruger Avenue.

Brooklyn.

The realty firm of Delmasse has sold a two-family house on the south side of Union Street, 60 feet west of Albany Avenue, for Henry C. L. Wenk; a two-story two-family house on the south side of St. John's Place, for Florence Wolfe-Brown, and an interior lot 100 feet east of Albany Avenue, 100.7 feet south of St. John's Place, for Edward Henn to the St. Thomas Amusement Company.

Long Island City Sale.

William D. Bloodgood & Co. have sold for the Helenita Construction Company two four-story flats, 37.6 by 89, on the north side of Jamaica Avenue, between Sherman Street and Hopkins Avenue, Long Island City, to the T. & M. Realty Company.

Mackay Buys in Jamaica.

Clarence H. Mackay has purchased eight plots in the Jamaica Estates development. The property has a frontage of 305 feet on the east side of Radnor Road, and is one of the most desirable residential sites on the development. The amount invested was $25,000.

Long Island.

H. Goldschmidt has sold for the Fulton Improvement Company to L. L. Stein a block of twelve lots in Woodmere Park, corner of Pond and Wood Lanes. Mr. Stein will erect a dwelling on the plot, which he has rented through the same broker for five years to Alfred Woolner.

The Nicholls-Ritter-Goodnow Realty Company sold at its development, Floral Garden, Franklin Square, a dwelling situated on the corner of Admont Avenue and New Hyde Park Road to Henry P. Schlegel for occupancy. The company has completed arrangements for the erection of six one-family houses costing $3,500 to $5,000 each.

Charles H. Richert has purchased a plot on the north side of Jamaica Avenue, 40 feet west of Troy Street, in the Richmond Hill section.

The Windsor Realty Company, Harvey B. Newins, President, has sold a seventy-acre farm at Smithtown, and purchased an eighty-acre tract near the bay at Eastport.

New Jersey.

Albert Tint has sold to Jacob Konner and Gustav Mikola 216 Main Street, Paterson, a plot 21 by 100, for $70,000. The price establishes a record of $3,333.33 a front foot, as against the former top figure of $27,000 for eight and a half feet, fronting on the corner of Van Houten and Main Streets.

As a site for a new Post Office building the Government has bought from Mrs. Alice H. Wallace and Mrs. Mary H. Wendelstadt a plot at the southeast corner of Bloomfield Avenue and Seymour Street, Montclair. The plot measures 175 by 160, and the price is reported at $30,000.

$100,000 Lease in Lewisohn Building.

Bing & Bing, builders and operators, have leased an entire floor in the Lewisohn building, running through from Forty to Forty-first Street, between Sixth Avenue and Broadway, as executive offices. The lease involves about $100,000.

Commercial Leases.

The Rutland & Whiting Company has rented the building at 229 Pearl Street to Stallman Company; the store and basement at 115 Nassau Street, to Daniel Newman; the store at 39 and 41 Lispenard Street to Meyer Rothstein; stores at 143 Bleecker Street to Samuel Margolis and the Crescent Cigar Stores; store at 18 New Bowery to G. B. Traverso & Son, and store at 22 New Bowery to William D. Kelland.

The M. Rosenthal Company has leased to the Paris Photo Company the store at 1,591 Broadway, for Rice & Hill, as agents.

To Build Fifth Avenue Home.

William T. Hyde of W. T. Hyde & Co., stockbrokers, is the buyer of the vacant lot at 882 Fifth Avenue, between Sixty-ninth and Seventieth Street, recently sold by W. Emlen Roosevelt. The latter is the owner of Mr. Hyde's residence at 11 East Seventieth Street, recently reported sold. That having been given in exchange for the Fifth Avenue plot. Mr. Hyde is having plans prepared for a fine new house of the English basement type from plans by C. P. H. Gilbert, to cost about $100,000.

Mortgage Loans.

The M. Morgenthau, Jr., Company has placed a mortgage of $12,000 for J. L. Gazen on the five-story flat at 306 West 116th Street, and one of $37,000 for the Barrett Realty Company, on the five-story flat on the west side of Southern Boulevard, 77 feet west of Barretto Street.

Real Estate Notes.

The City Investing Company insurgents who have demanded a change in policy were defeated at the adjourned annual meeting yesterday when retiring Directors were re-elected. The minority interests, however, voted for Lewis B. Preston, who was also on the regular ticket. William Childs was elected to fill a vacancy. B. Aymar Sands, lawyer, headed the stockholders' meeting.

Suit has been begun by Attorney General Carmody in the Supreme Court asking for a receiver for the Mutual Profit Realty Company, of which John W. Paris is President. The complaint alleges that the concern is doing a banking business in violation of the law, and, therefore, asks the court to revoke the company's charter.

It was erroneously reported that the sale of the two square blocks, bounded by Bridge Street, Barker Avenue, Union Street, and Elliott Avenue, was adjourned to March 6. The sale will take place on March 12 at the Bronx salesroom, 3,208 Third Avenue, by Joseph P. Day.

AMEND AND PASS WORKMEN'S BILL

THE GOVERNOR MAY VETO IT

Democrats Defeated, 78 to 55—Sulzer Assails Glynn Legislation and Party Reorganization.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 4.—After a long and somewhat stormy debate the Assembly to-day passed the Workmen's Compensation bill with a Republican amendment which provides that not more than three of the five Commissioners who under the bill are to administer the compensation fund may be of the same political party. The bill was passed without a dissenting vote after the Assembly—78 to 55—had voted down an amendment proposed by Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic leader, with a view to removing this restriction on the Governor.

Aside from this amendment, the bill passed by the Assembly is identical with the measure passed unanimously by both houses at the December meeting last year and approved by Gov. Glynn, and again passed by the Senate at the present session. The necessity to reenact the measure grew out of the fact that when the law was enacted in December the constitutional amendment giving the Legislature power to pass a compulsory compensation act had not taken effect. There was apprehension in some quarters that the constitutionality of the law might be questioned on that ground.

The Assembly amendment makes it necessary to send the bill back to the Senate for concurrence. Acting Lieut. Gov. Robert F. Wagner said to-night that in his opinion the Senate would not concur. If so, the differences between the two houses must be adjusted by a conference committee and there are many persons at the Capitol who predict complications which may jeopardize the bill, for powerful influences are at work opposing the measure.

Admit Many Imperfections.

When the bill was passed last December the haste that characterized the action of the Legislature was a matter of much comment, and Republicans and Democrats alike admit that many imperfections were overlooked at the time which should be corrected at the present session to render the law a workable instrument. It was generally admitted at the time that Gov. Glynn pushed the bill to final passage in such a rush solely for the purpose of making political capital for his own party, the elections having resulted in a Republican Assembly majority in the present Legislature.

William Sulzer contributed to the warmth of the debate to-day by assailing the entire Glynn legislative programme pushed through at the December meeting. He declared the Compensation bill had been drafted in the interest of casualty companies. The so-called Massachusetts Ballot bill was not a Massachusetts Ballot bill at all, he said, and the Direct Primary bill was a "farce and a fraud."

"It is no more like a direct primary law than a jack rabbit is like a jackass," said Mr. Sulzer. "Mr. Murphy would never permit his marionettes in the Legislature to pass a real direct primary law. And the reorganization of the Democratic State Party which we witnessed this week is nothing more than putting a new face on an old scarecrow to keep the crows out of the cornfield. It is a boss's direct primary law written by bosses for bosses. Tweed said, 'Give me the polling places and the Inspectors and I don't care who you nominate.' That is what this Direct Primary law does."

The "Bill" Before the House.

Assemblyman Kerrigan, who represents the district of The McManus, is equipped with iron lungs. When he heard Mr. Sulzer discuss something besides workmen's compensation he rose to a point of order and shouted the inquiry at Speaker Sweet: "What bill is before the House?"

"Bill Sulzer; sit down," said the former Governor. Mr. Kerrigan sat down while the Assembly rocked in laughter. When Mr. Sulzer was through Mr. Kerrigan got the floor.

"You may be all right as an Assemblyman," he yelled, pointing to Sulzer, "but as a Governor you were a rank failure. The people of the State have confidence in the new Governor."

Charges and counter-charges of insincerity and political bias were hurled back and forth by the respective party leaders during the debate. Michael Schaap, the Progressive leader, was unable to hold more than nine of his flock in line. The other ten voted with the Republicans for the amendment, as did Mr. Sulzer.

Gov. Glynn said to-night that in all probability he would not send in the names of his appointees on the Compensation Commission until after some definite action had been taken on the bill. It was reported to-night that ex-Senator Howard R. Bayne of Richmond, an independent Democrat, was being considered for one of the places on the commission. Ex-Senator Bayne was here to-night and had a talk with the Governor.

Gov. Glynn refused to-night to say whether he would sign the amended bill if concurred in by the Senate. There still is a chance that he may veto the bill as amended and stand on his original bill.

PASS ANTI-INSERT BILL.

No Assembly Opposition to Measure to Stop Advertising Abuse.

ALBANY, March 4.—The Adler bill, which would make it a misdemeanor to insert unauthorized advertising circulars in newspapers and periodicals, passed the Assembly to-day without opposition.

May Pardon Arthur G. Webster.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 4.—Gov. Pothier to-day recommended to the Senate that Arthur G. Webster, who has served sixteen years of a twenty-five years' sentence for complicity in the famous Portsmouth car barn robbery at Newport, and who was also indicted on the charge of murdering a policeman at St. Louis in November, 1897, be pardoned. The Governor says that Webster has reformed and educated himself in prison so that he can now become a useful citizen.

THACHER GIFT TO STATE.

Park of 850 Acres in Helderbergs Presented by Albanian's Widow.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 4.—The State has received a gift of about 850 acres of land in the Helderberg Hills, west of Albany, from Mrs. Emma Treadwell Thacher, widow of John Boyd Thacher of Albany. Announcement of the gift was made to the Legislature to-day by Gov. Glynn in a special message, in which he urged acceptance of the deed of the land, which he holds, and suggested that the land be known as the John Boyd Thacher Park.

Bills introduced by Senator Sage and Assemblyman Hinman of Albany for the acceptance of the gift were advanced to the order of final passage in each house.

The tract embraces the famous "Indian Ladder" section in the towns of New Scotland and Guilderland. It is noted for its scenic beauty, containing numerous caves, cliffs, waterfalls, and pine forests.

"Its scenery is not surpassed even in the Adirondacks," said Gov. Glynn. "It is a veritable wonderland, and in my opinion this property will make the most picturesque park in the State of New York."

John Boyd Thacher, who died on Feb. 25, 1909, was Mayor of Albany for four years. He also served a term in the State Senate. He was closely identified with the political history of the county. He was appointed by President Harrison as a member of the World's Columbian Exposition. Mr. Thacher was a historian, and he contributed several volumes of literary value.

The Thacher park is the third gift of property to the State in recent years, the others including the land given by M. P. Letchworth and known as Letchworth Park, and the 10,000 acres along the west bank of the Hudson River given by Mrs. Edward H. Harriman, with $1,000,000, as a State park.

FOR NEW BRONX BOUNDARY.

Bill Delimiting New York County—Monument to Gen. Sheridan.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 4.—Senator Simpson to-day introduced a bill changing the boundary between New York and Bronx Counties. The bill would include in New York County Manhattan Island, Governors Island, Bedlow's Island, Ellis Island, the Oyster Islands, Blackwell's Island, Ward's Island and the Sunken Meadows in the East and Harlem Rivers.

Senator Sage introduced a bill for the erection of a monument to Gen. Philip H. Sheridan in Capitol Park. The measure appropriates $25,000 for the monument, the Trustees of Public Buildings to select the design. Gen. Sheridan was a native of Albany.

Senator Peckham of Oneida introduced a bill striking from the penal law the provision which directs persons selling firearms to require prospective purchasers to produce a license to carry weapons.

A non-partisan primary for judicial officers is the object of a bill introduced by Assemblyman Schaap, the Progressive leader. The candidates are to be nominated by petition or by certificate of the Governor. The Governor would have to make his nomination by filing with the Secretary of State at least sixty days before the primary the name of the person nominated by him, together with an acceptance by that person. Names of judicial candidates would have a separate place on the ballot.

An appropriation of $68,000,000 for extending and improving the Black River Canal, reconstructing the Chemung Canal and constructing a canal between Flushing and Jamaica Bay is sought in a bill introduced by Assemblyman I. G. Jones.

RENEW EQUAL PAY FIGHT.

Miss Wood, Head of Club Federation, Heads Teachers' Delegation.

ALBANY, March 4.—Miss Mary Wood, Chairman of the Legislative Committee of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, and of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, appeared to-day with representatives of New York City School teachers to urge the passage of the Foley-Lockwood bill giving equal pay to the women teachers of the seventh and eighth grades in New York City's public schools.

"The women of the seventh and eighth grades now receive less pay than many men in the lower grades," said Miss Jane McCarthy. "Women teachers in the eighth grade receive $1,800 a year, while the men get $2,400."

"Men in the thirteenth year of service now receive $2,160, while women who have worked as long as the men receive only $1,320," said Miss Clara Calkins, speaking for the Women Principals' Association of Brooklyn. "A man in the thirteen years receives $7,230 more than a woman, which is nothing less than a bonus being awarded for his being born a man."

One of those who favored the bill was Father Farrell, Pastor of the Church of St. Peter and St. Paul, Brooklyn.

Miss Belle A. Ennis, President of the Class Teachers' Association, answered the brief of the Board of Education opposing the measure. She declared the increased cost would not be more than $500,000 or $600,000 a year, and not $2,000,000, as computed by the Board. She declared that less than 1,200 teachers would be affected.

There were no speeches in oppostion to the bill.

VOTE TO OUST DEMOCRATS.

Republican Assemblymen Will Support Anti-Delaney, Anti-Ahearn Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 4.—The Republican Assemblymen in conference to-night decided to vote for the Thorn bill repealing the act creating the State Department of Efficiency and Economy, and the Hinman bill abolishing the office of State Fire Marshal. The vote on these measures was practically unanimous. There was a small attendance.

The conference decided to leave the selection of a candidate for member of the State Board of Regents to the Republican legislators representing the Fourth Judicial District. The election of a Regent to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Lucius N. Littauer, who comes from the Fourth District, will be held next Tuesday in the Senate and the Assembly. The vote will be compared at a joint session Wednesday. Walter Kellogg, son of John M. Kellogg of Ogdensburg, and Robert R. Law of Cambridge, Washington County, are mentioned for the Republican nomination.

Leader of Bomb Throwers Sentenced

Pietro Giambruno, said to be leader of one of the two largest gangs of bomb throwers, horse poisoners, and blackmailers, who pleaded guilty last week before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions to setting a bomb in front of a cobbler's shop in East 167th Street last July, was sentenced yesterday to not less than three and a half nor more than nine and a half years in Sing Sing.

WHISPER ARGUMENT IN RANTOUL TRIAL

BOTH SHARPLY ASSAILED

Mrs. Rantoul Described as Faithless—Husband Arraigned for Treating Her as a White Slave.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 4.—Mrs. Lois Burnett Rantoul sat unmoved in court to-day and heard her husband's counsel arraign her as a disloyal and faithless wife. Edward L. Rantoul, her husband, wept frequently as the lawyers detailed various episodes of the married life of the couple.

Mrs. Rantoul sought divorce and alimony, and Attorney Hunt, counsel for Rantoul, in his argument characterized her suit as a piece of impudence, in view of her alleged conduct with Chester Chapin Rumrill, her husband's one-time friend and college chum. Rantoul also was severely assailed by opposing counsel as being cruel, heartless, and sensual. In closing his speech Mrs. Rantoul's attorney asserted that Rantoul had treated her as a white slave. A feature of the closing session of the trial was whispered arguments to the Judge regarding certain secret charges made by Mrs. Rantoul. Judge Hardy took the case under consideration.

Attorney Hunt contended that no woman was entitled to a divorce for conduct on the part of her husband which she really had brought upon herself. Relative to certain of Mrs. Rantoul's charges, which were whispered to the Judge, and not repeated by the newspapers, Hunt suggested that this rest on the comparative credibility of the plaintiff and the defendant.

"Rantoul," he said, "is a man of an honored New England family, interested in his children and in his business. I doubt if your Honor has seen a more frank appearing man on the witness stand than Edward L. Rantoul, who was not shaken by the cross-examination of an able attorney. As for Mrs. Rantoul, her own brother and brother-in-law volunteered to appear as witnesses against her. She has been a disloyal and a faithless wife, and admits it, and I contend that she intended to become a disloyal and faithless mother, too. For seven months her life was a long, living lie. She was as false as a woman could be.

"Her conduct in coming here and asking for a divorce under these conditions is a piece of impudence, nothing else. Mrs. Rantoul is a person of superior intellect; she is a lady by birth. The only explanation I can offer for her conduct is that she is thoroughly and unmistakably bad.

"She not only said she would make Rantoul's life a hell, but did so. She fell in love with Rumrill and decided to leave home, husband and children for him."

In his argument Attorney Proctor, counsel for Mrs. Rantoul, laid stress upon his contention that Rantoul was a sensual man, an unsympathetic husband, and that Rantoul really had caused his wife to fall in love with Rumrill.

"What do you say," said the lawyer, "of the character of a man who to his wife threatened suicide when he never meant in his heart to do so, and who had not the courage to do so? And this to a frail, weak woman? What do you think of a man who stated that his wife should be 'broken,' not in body, but in spirit?

"It is admitted that Mrs. Rantoul is a bright, witty, intellectual woman, a good housekeeper, and a beautiful mother. Witnesses have sworn here that she was a woman of pure and wholesome mind. When in her trouble she chose to occupy her mind in some way, she chose to do it in helping the downtrodden. Rantoul threatened suicide without any intention of carrying out his threats, and his purpose in this was not against himself, but against his wife. He was a man who was ready to hit a woman when she was down."

At this point Attorney Proctor called Attorney Hunt to the Judge's bench and argued in a low voice points evidently relating to the private life of the couple.

"We have shown you reasonos enough," he resumed, after this phase of his argument had been completed, "to show that Edward L. Rantoul himself killed the affections of his wife. If she fell in love with Rumrill, it was he who caused it.

"And what of the Rumrill episode? Mrs. Rantoul had not been used to being kindly treated by her husband. Then she was kindly treated by this man. She did not know such a thing was possible. She had not been accustomed to it—she had been a white slave."

McKay Seeks Accusing Witnesses.

Warrants of attachment against Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Caroso of 3,218 Third Avenue, the Bronx, have been applied for on behalf of Police Commissioner McKay, who wants the Carosos produced to-day as material witnesses in the trial of Patrolman Samuel S. Fuchs of the Morrisania Station. It is charged that the patrolman entered the Caroso apartment on the morning of Jan. 15, when he was supposedly on post duty; that he removed his coat and hat, lit a cigar and smoked it, and, incidentally, attempted to kiss Mrs. Caroso.
